The "Golden Medical Discovery" is the only medicine put up for sale through druggists for like purposes that has any such professional endorsement—worth more than any number of ordinary testimonials. Open publicity of its formula is the best possible guaranty of its merits. A glance at this published formula will show that "Golden Medical Discovery" contains no poisonous, harmful or habit-forming drugs and no alcohol—chemically pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Glycerine is entirely unobjectionable and besides is a most useful agent in the cure of all stomach as well as bronchial, throat and lung affections. There is the highest medical authority for its use in all such cases. The "Discovery" is a concentrated glyceric extract of native, medicinal roots and is safe and reliable.

A Happy Boy.

John S. Wise tells the following negro story in "Recollections of Thirteen Presidents:"

"I was fourteen years old when the great civil war broke out. Regarding my age when it ended, I was much in the condition of a little darky on a Virginia plantation. He opened the farm gate for a visitor to his master and scrambled up behind on the vehicle to ride to the great house. The visitor, impressed by his bright face and general precocity, looked back at him and said: 'You are a bright little chap, my boy. How old are you?'

"Grinning from ear to ear, the boy replied: 'I dunno, sir, 'xactly how old I is. Mammy says I can't be but fo'teen, but by the fun I is had I spec I must be 'bout twenty-five.'"

The only fish that never sleep are said to be the salmon, pike and goldfish.

The Arkansas "Razorback."

A man who had watched the affair aid claimed to know about hogs, razorbacks in particular, gave the following dissertation: "Arkansas has a greater variety of hogs and less pork and lard than any state in the union. An average hog in Arkansas weighs about fourteen pounds when dressed with its head on and about six pounds and a half with its head off. It can outrun a greyhound, jump a rail fence, climb like a parrot and live on grass, roots and rabbit tracks. It hasn't much tail nor bristle, but plenty of gall. It will lick a wolf or a bear in a fair fight. It is socalled razorback because it is shaped like a sunfish. In hunting razorbacks they are always shot at sideways, for there is not a ghost of a show to hit them otherwise, any more than to shoot at a split shingle. It can drink milk out of a quart jar on account of its long, thin head. This type of razorback is known as the stone hog, because its head is so heavy and its nose so long that it balances up behind. The owner of this type of hogs usually ties a stone to its tail to keep it from overbalancing and breaking its neck while running. If the stone is too heavy it will pull the skin over its eyes and it will go blind."—Mineral Wells Index.

A PUBLIC DUTY.

Montpelier, O., Man Feels Compelled to Tell His Experience.

Joseph Wilgus, Montpelier, O., says: "I feel it my duty to tell others about Doan's Kidney Pills. Exposure and driving brought kidney trouble on me, and I suffered much from irregular passages of the kidney secretions. Sometimes there was retention and at other times passages were too frequent, especially at night. There was pain and discoloration. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me relief from the first and soon infused new life. I give them my endorsement."

The Chariot of the Lords of the World.

Traveling in a motor car, apart from the rapid impressions which it conveys of "this amazing England," to quote Mr. Kipling, is one of the purest and most undiluted of human pleasures. The giant engine power, enclosed within so ridiculously small a space, hums with infectious melody; the air seems to wash the face that is driven through it as if it were some cool and exhilarating liquid; the brain, compelled to register observations quickly, works with abnormal brightness and rapidity. Of the car, far more than of old Flaccus's racing chariot, is it true that terrarum dominos evehit ad Deos.

The Dark Side

of a woman's life is seldom seen by anyone but herself. What agonies, what misery, what fits of melancholy and the blues, the poor, miserable sufferers from female disease have to endure, one month after another! What wonder so many thousands of women cannot truthfully say that they are happy! Are you? Happiness cannot be called complete without health, and health is best obtained by which has made many thousands happy in restored health and strength. "The doctors said I had nervous prostration, but gave me no relief," writes Lizzie Matthews, of Mt. Vernon, Ga. "I was sick for nine years. I could hardly eat and could not sleep. My back and hips ached, I was very irregular and would have to stay in bed two or three days. I have used 3 bottles of Cardui, and now I can say that my health is better than for the past nine years." Cardui relieves pain, regulates fitful functions, strengthens your weakest organs, makes you well and HAPPY. Try it.

Wiped Out a Snake Colony.

Lew Seaman, who has charge of W. A. McCool's large grape fruit grove over on Steer beach, was in town Wednesday morning and related a very remarkable snake story, the truthfulness of which he vouches for.

He says Luther Warren, who also works for Mr. McCool, came suddenly upon a huge rattlesnake, which he proceeded to despatch by crushing its head. After killing the snake he called Mr. Seaman out to look at it. Noting that it looked unusually large around the body they decided to open it up and find what was responsible for its enormous size. Accordingly a slit was made with a knife in the thin portion of the snake's stomach, when to their surprise small rattlesnakes, about thirteen inches in length, began to run out, and in a few moments the ground was literally alive with them, wriggling and squirming about.

Seaman and Warren then indulged in a lively snake killing contest and when all were despatched and a census of the dead taken they found that 24 rattlesnakes had been killed—the one, which measured seven and a half feet in length, and twenty-three young ones.—Kissimmee, Fla., Valley Gazette.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

"Knockdown" Barrel.

The problems confronting shippers in the transporting of fruit and vegetables are many. Millions of barrels, crates and boxes of every conceivable kind are required for the purpose. In the great majority of cases these barrels, etc., are used but once, as the cost of returning them to the shipper is greater than the cost of new barrels. A New York man has patented a barrel that seems to have solved the problem, an illustration of which is shown here. It is termed a "knockdown" and can be readily assembled when desired and as readily disassembled when its contents have been removed. It can then be packed in a small space to facilitate transportation. This barrel is made in two sections, preferably of sheet metal, and in form resembles the common type of barrel. The longitudinal edges are divided into tongues, each alternate tongue having double edges, forming recesses into which the interlocking tongues in the opposite section connect. Perfect joints are thus provided, preventing any damage to the barrel should it be handled carelessly in transportation. The circular heads of the barrel fit into grooves top and bottom on the outside of the barrel; fitting into the grooves are bands of wire, both ends of which are connected to a lever. By turning the lever in the direction of the arrow in the illustration, the band contracts, causing the end of the barrel to contract also.—Philadelphia Record.

Tourists and Highlanders.

I would pass a law compelling every Highland laddie not only to speak Gaelic, but to wear the kilt habitually, and every Highland lassie to appear in a tartan frock and with bare feet. They would all marry well, among the very pick of the tourists of both sexes, and a new zest would be added to the rush for the north.—Vanity Fair.

Medals of Honor For the United States Army.

These designs for campaign medals, made by Mr. Frank D. Millet, have been accepted by the Secretary of War. They are the result of more than a year's effort on the part of the War Department to secure the most artistic tokens of appreciation of gallantry and efficiency. The medals will be struck of bronze at the Philadelphia Mint. Most of the devices explain themselves. The castle on the Spanish War medal is taken from the heraldic castle on the coat of arms of the kingdom of Spain, modified by the addition of round towers at the corners to suggest the Cuban "morros." The lamp and scales on the Philippine medal remind us of our character as bearers of enlightenment and justice. The designs are better explained as follows: 1, Civil War medal; 2, reverse; 3, medal of merit; 4, reverse; 5, Philippine Insurrection medal; 6, reverse of 5, 7, 8 and 9, with name varied; 7, Indian Wars medal; 8, Spanish War medal; 9, China Relief Expedition medal.

Bad Wreck.

ham, Ala.—A freight train on the North Alabama branch Louisville and Nashville rail-was wrecked at Cane Creek, enty miles from the city, and Engineer Steven Beasley and four other members of the the train injured.
Bolt, a fireman, was the only of the crew who escaped un-
ured are Martin, conductor, injuries not hurt about the hip.
Butler, colored, brakeman, leg near ankle.
McCrery, colored, brakeman, injured about the head.
Wilson, colored, brakeman, in-htly about the head.

Thanksgiving Turkeys.

York.—Turkeys for Thanksgivmay reach 35 or 40 cents a this year. Dealers agree that bird will be more expensive than in previous seasons, as place no reliance in the sup-year. Wholesale prices have 21 cents and the retail price higher. A plague known as head" is sweeping the east, thousands of turkeys, and deal-say this will diminish the supply.

STORM RECORD.

Streets Turned Into Lakes, on Which People Float on Rafts—Seven Inches of Rain Reported.

Nashville, Tenn.—A Hopkinsville Ky., dispatch to the Banner says damage estimated at between $50,000 and $100,000 has been done by the unprecedented rainfall. A cloudburst caused the river to overflow, and the entire business section was flooded. Every basement on Main street was flooded, causing the walls of Pools' "racket" store, Martin's drug store and a furniture store to give way, causing an almost total destruction of the stocks. Other stores suffered severely.

Electrical in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—The persistent rainfall here culminated in an electrical storm and cloudburst that made the city tremble. Trees were struck by lightning, the telephone systems of the city were much disorganized, and telegraph facilities in all directions were impaired. Streets in many sections of the city resembled lakes, and it was impossible for pedestrians to move about without wading knee deep in water.

South Louisville and other southern suburbs of the city bore the brunt of the damage. The streets and sidewalks in the vicinity of Seventh and P streets resembled a lake. Canoeing was a possibility on P street, between Sixth and Seventh, and several of the residents brought into service improvised rafts and poled their way from their homes to a point where they could land.

The Pan Handle District.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Reports tell of further congestion of railroad traffic in West Texas and in the Pan Handle as a result of the sleet storm. Between Childress and Dalhart, Tex., three passenger trains are snow bound, with no means of communication. West of Fort Worth wire communication can be had only as far as Baird, 200 miles distant.

It is known that a severe sleet and snow storm swept the section west of there. Considerable loss of live stock is reported and much damage will be done to a large amount of cotton, yet unpicked in West Texas. It is believed the snow in the Pan Handle will be of great benefit to the winter wheat and at the same time lessen the danger from prairie fires which have recently been menacing many sections.

Suffers From Warm Weather.

New Orleans, La.—Notwithstanding predictions of cold weather, New Orleans suffered from warm weather almost unprecedented for this season of the year. The mercury registered 82 degrees, but indications are that the hot spell soon will be broken by a heavy rain.

Central Texas.

Waco, Tex.—A coat of frost and mist covered everything in Central Texas, with a temperature of 5 degrees below the freezing point. It is not believed much damage will be done to the crops, although small grain is above ground, but it will take a lower temperature to injure it seriously.

Cotton Hands Want Increase.

New Bedford, Mass.—Otis N. Pierce, of the New Bedford Manufacturers' Association, has received a communication from the Textile Council requesting that an advance in wages of 10 per cent be granted. It is thought that an advance equal to that offered by the Fall River mill owners to their operatives will be given. The local mills employ about 17,000 hands.

Fayette, Miss., Almost Destroyed.

Jackson, Miss.—Practically the entire business section of Fayette, Miss., was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of about $75,000, partly covered by insurance.

The fire originated in McGinness' cafe, which was destroyed, the flames spreading to the adjoining buildings rapidly.

Guests Driven Out.

Chicago, Ill.—Guests in the Barnes House, West Randolph and Canal streets, were driven into the street early by a fire which destroyed the neighboring six-story building occupied by manufacturing firms. Loss, $100,000.

Huntsville Cut Off.

Huntsville, Ala.—Huntsville has been practically cut off from railroad communication with the outside during the last eighteen hours. The Southern railroad has had no scedule since Saturday afternoon, all trains being from three to twelve hours or more late.

Charged With Robbing Store.

Gadsden, Ala.—George Battles, a white man, was arrested upon a charge of robbing the store of I. D. Crump at Ivalee, a station on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, in the western part of this county.

IN MEMORIAM.

At her home near Lomax, Ala., toward the close of the eve November 17 the white soul of Mrs. Carrie Jones wife of G. W. Jones, was freed from its earthly tenement of clay and took its flight for the home above not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, though the two weary weeks of suffering she has passed through many pains and sorrows. She never murmured, but with meek submission to the heavenly Father's will accepted the cross with angelic patience, and with unwavering faith carried her burden to Jesus, the source of all strength. She left a grand testimony behind her, saying she was ready to go, which we truly believe she was. God in His majestic power saw that her suffering was too great, and when at 6 o'clock he called her to summon death's warning she did not dread to go; her sweet spirit passed away, and the tired body and weary heart sank into a deep, peaceful sleep, with a look of sweet peace on her face, as if it were the shadow of angel's wings. Her husband, who came home tired and weary from the troubles of this world, found his home a haven of rest, where the white-winged dove of peace ever hovers and love with shining eyes welcomed him. But soon the grim reaper laid his hand upon her, and after weeks of patient suffering the roses in her cheeks faded into the white lilies of death. The little hands, so quick to do love's bidding, were clasped over the silent breast and the tired eyes were closed to open again with enraptured gaze upon the beauties of the heavenly land.

A soul has accomplished the great mission of this life when it has gained life eternal. Why should we grieve that she has gone to receive the heritage given her by her Father with the bloom of youth fresh upon her? God in His infinite love wants all His children to come home. She leaves a husband three children, the youngest being only 17 days old, to mourn the loss of a good mother, loving and obedient wife. Dear friends and relatives, we have nothing of this world's consolation to offer. We do not feel that we could speak any words that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of this dear one. We can only deeply, sincerely and most affectionately sympathize with those in their afflictive bereavement, but in the beautiful spirit of the Christian's theology we dare say that He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb look down with infinite compassion on the fatherless in the hour of their desolation, and that the same benevolent Savior who wept tears at the grave in Bethany will fold the arms of his love and protection around those who put their trust in him. So let us each in our respective lives so improve this solemn warning of our God that when He shall call for us we may leave this sweet testimony behind, that we are ready to go. Oh, dear weeping friends, we should realize in our hearts the meaning of those words and not grieve after her, for she is done with sufferings now and gone home to rest with Jesus. She has gone far away, to that land where no night can fall. She has entered the realms of eternal day where there is no pain, sorrow or death to appall. LUCY JONES.

MRS. J. M. ROBINSON.

Mrs. J. M. Robinson died Friday, November 16, 1906, in the 58th year of her age, after an illness of a few weeks. She leaves a husband, one son and three daughters and nine grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She was laid to rest in Providence (Beat 10) cemetery on the 17th inst., the funeral services being conducted by Rev. W. W. Robinson, whose text was Revelations 14:13. W. J. Armstrong assisted in the service, which was opened by singing, "Lead, Kindly Light," and as the body was being lowered to its last resting place they sang "Gently Lay Her Low." The deceased, who was formerly Miss Argent Jones, was born August 24, 1849, married February 27, 1868, jointed the Baptist church at Providence November 18, 1879, and was a consistent member until her death. She was a loving wife and mother, looking at all times to the comfort and well being of all. Her dying testimony was that she "was going home to rest," and that she was ready to go; that her mother and sister would be there, and not to weep for her.

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

MANY DROWNED

ty-two Lives Lost In Collision of Steamers At Seattle.

ONE WOMAN ESCAPES.

ision Occurred While the Sound Was as Smooth as a Pond—Vessels Near Each Other.

attle, Wash.—Forty-two lives were t in the disaster in Seattle harbor, Duwamish Head, when the little mer Dix was run down by the kan liner Jeannie.

Thirty-seven of the seventy-nine passgers on the Dix were rescued. Of five female passengers on the Dix only one to escape was Alice Simpn, a 15-year-old girl. She is beved to be the only person who eaped from the main deck of the mer, where more than half of the 's passengers were shut in when fatal crash came.

t is believed that the thirty-seven ssengers who were rescued include ry person who was on the open k of the Dix when the little craft nged down stern foremost into 100 oms of water. It is doubtful ether she can be raised.

he collision occurred while the d was almost as smooth as a mill d, and after the boats had been aming within sight of each other a quarter of an hour.

The Jeannie was backing when she ided with the Dix, and the impact s very slight. The Dix was struck ft of amidships on the starboard e. She listed heavily to port for a f period, righted herself, then sank n first. There was hardly time to nch life rafts or boats before she almost entirely submerged. Passgers jumped from the decks into water, women screamed and offand men called orders that could ly be heard above the din. The engers from the Dix who could made their way to the sides of Jeannie and were dragged aboard. Jeannie was not moved until after ing up several who had managed ay above water. It was after 10 ck before the Jeannie left the e of the catastrophe and steamed the Virginia street dock, Seattle, her thirty-nine survivors.

he Jeannie, of the Alaska Coast mpany, had finished unloading at Great Northern docks at Smith's e, and had started for Tacoma ly before 7 o'clock, just about the e time the Dix left the dry dock Port Blakeley.

here were no passengers on the nnie. The Dix was making the last of the night, and was well filled h passengers. When within about miles north of Alki Point the steamers were within short dise of each other, steaming along converging lines. The captain of Jeannie says he signaled to the to pass him and his whistle was wered. The Dix was then within aking distance of the Jeannie and the port of her. Suddenly Mate lson, who was at the wheel of Dix, put her hard over to stard, as if to cross in front of the r vessel. Captain Mason, of the nnie, who was on the bridge, saw an accident was imminent and ed out a warning to the man at the el of the Dix.

Bad Wreck.

rmingham, Ala.—A freight train ing on the North Alabama branch the Louisville and Nashville raild was wrecked at Cane Creek, twenty miles from the city, and result Engineer Steven Beasley nd and four other members of the of the train injured.

J. Holt, a fireman, was the only ber of the crew who escaped unred.

e injured are:

R. Bartin, conductor, injuries not ous; hurt about the hip.

Butler, colored, brakeman, leg en near ankle.

dy McCrery, colored, brakeman, tly injured about the head.

e Wilson, colored, brakeman, inslightly about the head.

Thanksgiving Turkeys.

w York.—Turkeys for Thanksgivables may reach 35 or 40 cents a this year. Dealers agree that me bird will be more expensive year than in previous seasons, as can place no reliance in the supthis year. Wholesale prices have ed 21 cents and the retail price ch higher. A plague known as k head" is sweeping the east, g thousands of turkeys, and dealy this will diminish the supply.

STORM RECORD.

Streets Turned into Lakes, on Which People Float on Rafts—Seven Inches of Rain Reported.

Nashville, Tenn.—A Hopkinsville, Ky., dispatch to the Banner says damage estimated at between $50,000 and $100,000 has been done by the unprecedented rainfall. A cloudburst caused the river to overflow, and the entire business section was flooded. Every basement on Main street was flooded, causing the walls of Pools' "racket" store, Martin's drug store and a furniture store to give way, causing an almost total destruction of the stocks. Other stores suffered severely.

Electrical in Louisville.

Louisville, Ky.—The persistent rainfall here culminated in an electrical storm and cloudburst that made the city tremble. Trees were struck by lightning, the telephone systems of the city were much disorganized, and telegraph facilities in all directions were impaired. Streets in many sections of the city resembled lakes, and it was impossible for pedestrians to move about without wading knee deep in water.

South Louisville and other southern suburbs of the city bore the brunt of the damage. The streets and sidewalks in the vicinity of Seventh and P streets resembled a lake. Canoeing was a possibility on P street, between Sixth and Seventh, and several of the residents brought into service improvised rafts and poled their way from their homes to a point where they could land.

The Pan Handle District.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Reports tell of further congestion of railroad traffic in West Texas and in the Pan Handle as a result of the sleet storm. Between Childress and Dalhart, Tex., three passenger trains are snow bound, with no means of communication. West of Fort Worth wire communication can be had only as far as Baird, 200 miles distant.

It is known that a severe sleet and snow storm swept the section west of there. Considerable loss of live stock is reported and much damage will be done to a large amount of cotton yet unpicked in West Texas. It is believed the snow in the Pan Handle will be of great benefit to the winter wheat and at the same time lessen the danger from prairie fires which have recently been menacing many sections.

Suffers From Warm Weather.

New Orleans, La.—Notwithstanding predictions of cold weather, New Orleans suffered from warm weather almost unprecedented for this season of the year. The mercury registered 82 degrees, but indications are that the hot spell soon will be broken by a heavy rain.

Central Texas.

Waco, Tex.—A coat of frost and mist covered everything in Central Texas, with a temperature of 5 degrees below the freezing point. It is not believed much damage will be done to the crops, although small grain is above ground, but it will take a lower temperature to injure it seriously.

Cotton Hands Want Increase.

New Bedford, Mass.—Otis N. Pierce, of the New Bedford Manufacturers' Association, has received a communication from the Textile Council requesting that an advance in wages of 10 per cent be granted. It is thought that an advance equal to that offered by the Fall River mill owners to their operatives will be given. The local mills employ about 17,000 hands.

Fayette, Miss., Almost Destroyed.

Jackson, Miss.—Practically the entire business section of Fayette, Miss., was destroyed by fire, entailing a loss of about $75,000, partly covered by insurance.

The fire originated in McGinness' cafe, which was destroyed, the flames spreading to the adjoining buildings rapidly.

Guests Driven Out.

Chicago, Ill.—Guests in the Barnes House, West Randolph and Canal streets, were driven into the street early by a fire which destroyed the neighboring six-story building occupied by manufacturing firms. Loss, $100,000.

Huntsville Cut Off.

Huntsville, Ala.—Huntsville has been practically cut off from railroad communication with the outside during the last eighteen hours. The Southern railroad has had no scedule since Saturday afternoon, all trains being from three to twelve hours or more late.

Charged With Robbing Store.

IN MEMORIAM.

At her home near Lomax, Ala., toward the close of the eve November 17 the white soul of Mrs. Carrie Jones, wife of G. W. Jones, was freed from its earthly tenement of clay and took its flight for the home above not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, though the two weary weeks of suffering she has passed through many pains and sorrows. She never murmured, but with meek submission to the heavenly Father's will accepted the cross with angelic patience, and with unwavering faith carried her burden to Jesus, the source of all strength. She left a grand testimony behind her, saying she was ready to go, which we truly believe she was. God in His majestic power saw that her suffering was too great, and when at 6 o'clock he called her to summon death's warning she did not dread to go; her sweet spirit passed away, and the tired body and weary heart sank into a deep, peaceful sleep, with a look of sweet peace on her face, as if it were the shadow of angel's wings. Her husband, who came home tired and weary from the troubles of this world, found his home a haven of rest, where the white-winged dove of peace ever hovers and love with shining eyes welcomed him. But soon the grim reaper laid his hand upon her, and after weeks of patient suffering the roses in her cheeks faded into the white lilies of death. The little hands, so quick to do love's bidding, were clasped over the silent breast and the tired eyes were closed to open again with enraptured gaze upon the beauties of the heavenly land.

A soul has accomplished the great mission of this life when it has gained life eternal. Why should we grieve that she has gone to receive the heritage given her by her Father with the bloom of youth fresh upon her? God in His infinite love wants all His children to come home. She leaves a husband three children, the youngest being only 17 days old, to mourn the loss of a good mother, loving and obedient wife. Dear friends and relatives, we have nothing of this world's consolation to offer. We do not feel that we could speak any words that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of this dear one. We can only deeply, sincerely and most affectionately sympathize with those in their afflictive bereavement, but in the beautiful spirit of the Christian's theology we dare say that He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb looks down with infinite compassion on the fatherless in the hour of their desolation, and that the same benevolent Savior who wept tears at the grave in Bethany will fold the arms of his love and protection around those who put their trust in him. So let us each in our respective lives so improve this solemn warning of our God that when He shall call for us we may leave this sweet testimony behind, that we are ready to go. Oh, dear weeping friends, we should realize in our hearts the meaning of those words and not grieve after her, for she is done with sufferings now and gone home to rest with Jesus. She has gone far away, to that land where no night can fall. She has entered the realms of eternal day, where there is no pain, sorrow or death to appall. LUCY JONES.

MRS. J. M. ROBINSON.

Mrs. J. M. Robinson died Friday, November 16, 1906, in the 58th year of her age, after an illness of a few weeks. She leaves a husband, one son and three daughters and nine grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. She was laid to rest in Providence (Beat 10) cemetery on the 17th inst., the funeral services being conducted by Rev. W. W. Robinson, whose text was Revelations 14:13. W. J. Armstrong assisted in the service, which was opened by singing, "Lead, Kindly Light," and as the body was being lowered to its last resting place they sang "Gently Lay Her Low." The deceased, who was formerly Miss Argent Jones, was born August 24, 1849; married February 27, 1868, jointed the Baptist church at Providence November 18, 1879, and was a consistent member until her death. She was a loving wife and mother, looking at all times to the comfort and well being of all. Her dying testimony was that she "was going home to rest," and that she was ready to go; that her mother and sister would be there, and not to weep for her.

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

PAY FOR ADVERTISING.

When the Prince of Wales' son died at Sandringham his physician, Sir William Gull, received for four weeks' attendance $50,000 and the title of baronet. Pretty good pay—$12,500 a week, more than $1,785 per day!

"What," exclaimed a man who got a bill from a surgeon for $1,000 for the amputation of a leg, "$1000 for half an hour's work? Why, I never heard of such a charge!"

"No," said the surgeon, coolly, "of course not. For the half-hour's work, $5; for the 'know how,' $995."

La Peyronie, the physician who attended Louis XV. of France, received a fee which exceeds these. The King gave him an estate comprising five villages and 207 farms, which produced a yearly income equal in purchasing power to $31,000. His Majesty had only a slight fever.

Catherine II. of Russia, one of the most extraordinary women that ever lived, heard of the treatment to prevent smallpox by inoculation; and hearing, believed. She made arrangements to get a physician from London, and Dr. Dimsdale, a well-known practitioner of the time, agreed to go. He travelled to St. Petersburg, where he duly inoculated her Imperial Majesty, and I suppose such others as applied. What he received from the others I know not, but from Catherine his feet was $50,000 in cash, $10,000 for travelling expenses, a title and a life pension of $2,500 a year. All this for two minutes' work, in which no "know how" was needed, for any person can scratch an arm and rub lymph on its surface. Probably this was the highest sum ever paid for so simple an operation.

There was a great outcry when the question came up of paying the surgeons who attended President Garfield in his last illness, and Congress finally appropriated $25,000 for the services of the entire staff, which included Dr. Frank Hamilton, of New York, and Dr. Agnew, two of the foremost surgeons in the country. In addition, there were Dr. Bliss of Washington, and Dr. Douglas, who acted as personal attendant. The illness lasted three months. The fees in this case were exceedingly small, for either Dr. Hamilton or Dr. Agnew might have charged the full amount with perfect propriety.

Gen. Grant was attended by Dr. Douglas, who gave up his practise and devoted himself exclusively to the case for five months, and Dr. Douglas received $12,000. Dr. George F. Shrady spent about one-half of his time with the general, and for his services and those of the other physicians $6000 was charged.

The charges made were very small. Had Gen. Grant been a rich man, Dr. Shrady could have legitimately charged $2500 a month, in view of the fact that he had to travel to Mt. Gregor to see his patient. Such a charge would have been a most reasonable one from a surgeon of his eminence in the profession.

Had Gen. Grant been the Prince of Wales, and had Dr. Shrady lived in London instead of New York, he would probably have received $100,000 in cash and a title besides.

The income of medical men depends on their fees. In New York an authority on the subject gives the following estimate: Two or three physicians make over $100,000 a year; four or five range from $50,000 to $60,000; fifty from $25,000 to $30,000; 150 from $10,000 to $12,000; about 300 from $5,000 to $6,000; 1,500 from $2,000 to $3,000, and the remainder from $300 to $1,000.—Dr. Shrady in Youth's Companion.

Philanthropy of Rich Men.

Taking their cue from the death of Russell Sage, the late multi-millionaire of New York, who left nothing to charity by his will, the Boston Post has made a brief summary of what some rich men have left to charitable purposes. While we cannot vouch for its accuracy, the accompanying statement is interesting:

Leland Stanford gave in life $20,000,000; by will, $30,000,000.

Samuel J. Tilden gave in life nothing; by will, $10,000,000.

William H. Vanderbilt gave in life to many charities; by will, $1,020,000.

Jay Gould gave in life nothing; by will, nothing.

Commodore Vanderbilt gave in life $3,500,000; by will, nothing.

P. D. Armour gave in life $18,000,000; by will, endowment for Armour Institute.

John Jacob Astor gave in life $5,300,000; by will, $750,000.

Cecil Rhodes gave in life $35,000,000; by will, $110,000,000.

Charles T. Yerkes gave in life nothing; by will, $11,000,000.

Collis P. Huntington gave in life small sums; by will, pictures and house.

Marshall Field gave in life $10,000,000; by will, $26,000,000.

Russell Sage gave in life, $55,000; by will, nothing.

Peter Cooper gave in life Cooper Institute; by will, $3,000,000.

Jacob S. Rogers gave in life nothing; by will, $8,000,000.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.

Thrice-a-Week Edition—Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World; now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Union together for one year for $1.50. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2. tf

A Well-Known Remedy.

One of the oldest, safest and most favorably known remedies in the world today is Brandreth's Pills—a blood purifier and laxative. Being purely vegetable they can be used by old or young with perfect safety and while other remedies require increased doses and finally cease acting altogether, with Brandreth's Pills the same dose always has the same effect, no matter how long they are taken. One or two pills taken each night for a while is the best thing known for any one troubled with constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia or any trouble arising from an impure state of the blood.

Brandreth's Pills have been in use for over a century and are sold in every drug and medicine store, plain or sugar-coated.

ECZEMA AFFLICTS FAMILY.

Father and Five Children Suffered For Two Years With Terrible Eczema—Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"My husband and five children were all afflicted with eczema. They had it two years. We used all the home remedies we could hear of, without any relief, and then went to a physician and got medicine two different times, and it got worse. It affected us all over except head and hands. We saw Cuticura Remedies advertised and concluded to try them. So I sent for $1.00 worth, consisting of one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Ointment and one vial of Pills, and we commenced to use them. I do not know how to express my joy in finding a cure, for two of my children were so bad that they have the brown scars on their bodies where they were sore. Mrs. Maggie B. Hill, Stevens, Mason Co., W. Va., June 12, 1905."

Good Listeners.

In conversing with one's friends nothing is so chilling as an apparent lack of attention and sympathy. It might be added that nothing is more vulgar were not the listener's indifference common to the majority of our most cultured people. If when one is addressed she will remember to incline the body slightly forward an attitude of rapt attention will soon be unconsciously assumed and, whether really worthy of it or not, new recruits gained for the always popular, as rare, class known as "good listeners."

Grandma was Most Appreciated in Her Last Days.

With regard to horses used for pleasure and sport in this country there has gradually been a fashion. Probably at the present moment breeders of hackneys are the most particular with regard to color, for at the last hackney show it was generally noticed how greatly chestnut horses were in the ascendant. It is possibly the case, too, that a majority of the best stepping horses one sees in the park are in these days chestnuts; many handsome bays and browns there are, too, but the chestnuts are now almost strongest numerically of those horses which appear to be of purely hackney blood.

Of course, when one sees a smart pair go quickly past which one is unable to identify, it is impossible to say offhand whether they are true—i. e. stud book—hackneys or not; but the breed has made such enormous strides in recent years that it is now possible to guess with a fair amount of certainty which of the horses one sees in the park or in the West End streets are stud book hackneys. Not only have the numbers increased, but so also has the desire to be possessed of these horses, and thus the harness horse of obvious hackney cut is far more in evidence than he was a few years ago. As the light built victoria has succeeded the heavy barouche, so has the lighter made stepping horse succeeded the bigger and stronger harness horse of the Cleveland bay or Yorkshire coach horse type; whereas a generation ago bay was almost certainly the dominating color in the park; it now hardly more than shares the honors with chestnut and brown.

Bay and brown are, it need hardly be stated, the commonest colors among all half bred horses, and thus the ordinary pair of general utility carriage horses, possibly good enough and honest nags but with no great pretensions to breeding or action, are as a rule either bay or brown; but if one ignores the ordinary harness horse and only takes cognizance of the showy trapper, chestnut will be found to have made a great advance. This, coupled with the fact that so many of the Islington winners are chestnut, certainly suggests that breeders of stud book hackneys have delibirately tried to produce horses of this color.

The evidence as to fashion in the color of teams is not very pronounced, though it is almost certain that every four in hand driver has some particular fancy in this direction. In the hunting field fashion in color is not much observed, but it is pretty certain that there are nothing like so many good gray horses as there used to be a few years ago. It is seldom that a skewbald or piebald horse is seen in the hunting field, while a roan is rare, and when he is to be found is more often a blue roan than a strawberry roan. As for the decline of the gray, this is simply due to the fact that there are very few gray sires in the country.—From the Field.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

In the long run men hit only what they aim at.—Thoreau.

He who allows oppression shares the crime.—Erastus Darwin.

No pleasure is comparable to the standing upon the vantage ground of truth.

Many men owe the grandeur of their lives to their tremendous difficulties.—C. H. Spurgeon.

In every piece of honest work, however irksome, laborious and commonplace, we are fellow workers with God.—F. B. Meyer.

Great thoughts go best with common duties. Whatever therefore may be your office regard it as a fragment in an immeasurable ministry of love—Brook Foss Westcott.

Remember, it is looking downward that makes one dizzy. Look up, and your brain clears, your heart grows calm and strength comes to you for every task and every emergency.

Hardness is a want of minute attention to the feelings of others. It does not proceed from malignity or carelessness of inflicting pain, but from a want of delicate perception of those little things by which pleasure is conferred or pain excited.—Sydney Smith.

The sublime of Nature does not equal the sublime of Thought. A good man is a truer image of spiritual things than the loveliest landscape; and the faithfulness of conscience, the inviolable law in the soul, is more worthy to picture the moral constancy of God than the orderly revolutions of the heavens.

He will certainly fail who hopes to know men deeply and only to get happiness, never to get anxiety, distress, disappointment, out of knowing them; and he has mistaken the first idea of human companionship, who seeks companionship, friendship and sympathy with anything directly and simply for the pleasure they will give him.—Phillips Brooks.

To win and hold a friend we are compelled to keep ourselves at his ideal point, and in turn our love makes on him the same appeal. Each insists on his right in the other to an ideal. All around the circle of our best beloved it is this idealizing that gives to love its beauty and its pain and its mighty leverage on character.—W. C. Gannett.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

A remarkable reinforced concrete conduit, or rather a pair of them, has recently been placed in service in an irrigating system in the province of Huesca, Spain, according to the American Contractor. These conduits have an interior diameter of twelve and one-half feet and are 3,330 feet long. The supply that can be furnished by the two great tubes is estimated at 10,000 gallons per second. This is poured into a canal that will supply water for irrigating 261,820 acres of land. These conduits were built across two valleys as inverted syphons in lieu of an elevated aqueduct.

A MISSOURI WOMAN

Tells a Story of Awful Suffering and Wonderful Relief.

Mrs. J. D. Johnson, of 603 West Hickman St., Columbia, Mo., says: "Following an operation two years ago, dropsy set in, and my left side was so swollen the doctor said he would have to tap out the water. There was constant pain and a gurgling sensation around my heart, and I could not raise my arm above my head. The kidney action was disordered and passages of the secretions too frequent. On the advice of my husband I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Since using two boxes my trouble has not reappeared. This is wonderful, after suffering two years."

How to Measure Medicine.

A tablespoonful of liquid is equal to a fluid drachm. A teaspoonful of powdered roots or bark is equal to two scruples. A tablespoonful of powdered herbs is equal to one scruple. A teaspoonful of salts, saltpetre, sulphur, or like articles is equal to half a drachm. A teaspoonful of metallic remedies, sugar or lead, sulphate of zinc, chloride of zinc, etc., is equal to 12 drachms. A tablespoonful of liquid is equal to half a fluid ounce. A tablespoonful of powdered roots or herbs is two drachms. A teacupful is four liquid ounces, or a quarter of a pint. Three scruples make a drachm; eight drachms make an ounce; twelve ounces make a pound. Druggists' weights for medicines (apothecary's weights).

ILLEGAL VOTING.

It is to be hoped that the Grand Jury will do its duty in full and investigate all cases of illegal voting; it has the affidavits that were sworn to by challenged voters. The Democrats in this county have paid no respect to the election law, and it is time to call a halt. At their primary on August 27 the polls were wide open for Tom, Dick and Harry and the yellow dog to vote.

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

To use an old saw that appears to fit the case in point, the Democrats of Chilton county are "chewing the rag" about the last election; each one conjures up all manner of excuses for himself and puts the blame on the other fellow. The truth of the matter is, Chilton county is satisfied with the rule of the people, under which it has prospered for the many years since it threw off the yoke of ring Democracy, and will continue in the same pasture and let well enough alone. As to being in the minority in the State, having only noble old Winston for company, why that has happened to many good people in the past centuries. The prophet of old found only a comparative few "who have not bowed the knee to Baal." The good book says, in effect, that a little leaven will season a large lump, so we in Chilton will keep on as we are, and hope for the time when other counties in Alabama will get their shells of superstition and prejudice cracked, so that the sum of prosperity and progress will shine in and vivify the mass of inert matter.

PAY YOUR POLL TAX.

If you want to vote on the stock law question, you will have to be a qualified voter, and that means that you must have paid ALL poll tax DUE. The year or more that you have not paid will rise up against you if you try to vote before the account is settled. Some try to evade paying the tax for the year they become 45, men well able to pay; some with children of school age begrudge the dollar and a half that goes directly to the children for education. In the absence of any specific statement in the law as to the date of assessing poll tax, you are governed by the custom that obtains as to property tax, that is ,what your age is on October 1 of any year in regard to payment of poll tax for the ensuing tax year. For example: A. B. becomes 45 years old on or before September 30, 1906; that lets him out of paying poll tax for the year 1907. C. D. becomes 45 years old on October 2, 1906, and he is due poll tax for the year 1907. This plan is an advantage to the young man becoming twenty-one, and is as it should be, for as a general thing men have more money and more children when forty-five than twenty-one. Pay your poll tax and be a man, not a mouse.

COL. WADSWORTH DEFEATED.

By the official count at Montgomery on Monday it was ascertained that Hon. W. W. Wadsworth lost out for State Senator by 511 votes. Chilton and Shelby counties both gave him a majority, but Autauga overpowered it. In our judgment a longer canvass would have increased his vote, as well as that for the Republican State ticket. In other words, don't wait until the last minute, come to the front, your colors, and stand by your principles.

COUNTY TREASURER'S REPORT.

The County Treasurer's report for the year ending October 1, 1906, is in this issue., you will find it on pages 6, 6, 7 and 8. Read it carefully, as it is the first itemized list rendered by the Treasurer in about two years. Save the report for future reference; it is your money and you have a perfect right to know for what it has been spent.

CARD FROM CHAIRMAN JACKSON.

Jemison, Ala., Nov. 19 ,1906.

Editor Union:

As the election is over I'll take space enough in your paper to say a few words to the Republicans and Populists of our county. As we have won another victory we should feel proud, and I know each one does. Now, let's not be satisfied with this one, but begin work now for the next election, and make the majority still larger. With the team we have in harness and the many workers in the party we ought to build up a stronger party than ever. I know the men who now hold office are men of high aspirations and will be a credit to our county. I am sorry we could not elect our Senator this time, but we'll try again. A few words to those who will vote on the stock law question: Don't vote selfishly; see who it hurts and who it benefits. If you have never lived in a stock law county, just play you are in one till it's time to vote. Put all your stock up and carry water to them or take them to it; put ropes on them and stake them out. I think all who try this will get enough by the time the election comes off. If we want to have fine stock (as some say we will have) we can have it now just as easy and can keep it in pasture or pen, or we have the privilege of turning it out. Remember people who are good friends now who will fall out, and we will be the worst torn up people for years you ever saw. So take this for what it's worth and be reasonable and pray over the matter as you do your church and home affairs. With best wishes to The Union and its many readers, yours truly,

W. R. JACKSON.

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 18, 1906.

Editor Union:

I want to reply to a letter in The Banner of the 1st inst., signed by L. N. Henderson, the great I Am. Well, Lewis, you accused me of thinking that you were the whole caboose of the Republican party; no, Lewis, I did not think that of you, I only thought that you were Gulledge's bootjack and whole caboose. I think you should have your simlin opened and take them promises and gas out and put a dynamite and a Dooly yam in and then you will not be so easy fooled up by windy doctrine. You say that you got all the Republican convention business that you wanted some time ago when a full grown white man rose up and said that two Mr. Niggers and two Mr. White men would be the delegates to the State convention. Now, Mr. Henderson, I would like to know what white man that was and when and where was it at in this county? You said something about a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor. I don't know who you have reference to unless it is Ad Wimbs, a negro who the Democratic papers advanced as a candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and when he saw that the Republicans were not going to notice him he withdrew from the race.

He says that he voted for Jelks for Governor. Do you remember that the Republican State ticket did not get a vote in Wimbs' county in the election of 1902? Wimbs is a kind of Republican that wants to dictate for the Republicans and then vote the Democratic ticket; you know what kind of a Republican that is, don't you, Lewis? Lewis, you spoke of my sense, and now I will tell you about yours; you have not got sense enough to pour sand out of a boot with the directions on the leg. Well, you said that you were not going to reply to anything that I said about that letter. I am in doubt, as well as others, about you writing that letter, for two reasons; first, dont' think that you had sense enough; second, because you waited so that I would not have time to reply to it before the election. Now, if you don't want to reply to this letter you can get your Democratic chum to write your letter and you sign it; you know who wrote the other one, don't you, Lewis? Lewis, I was well pleased with the way that your beat went in the last election; our highest man got 16 votes, and in the election two years ago our highest man only got 14 votes. Just keep whooping the Democrats up, Lewis; we Repuvlicans want 500 majority next time. Very truly yours, LEE VICKERS.

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 16, 1906.

Editor Union:

I want to reply to a letter in The Banner of the 1st inst., signed "A Sure Voter." I don't care much about replying to anything that anybody writes about me when they are too big a coward to sign their names to what they write. The writer some time ago signed his name "Just Another Voter," and now he comes as "A Sure Voter." This same writer reared up on his hind feet like a bull dog and came at me and asked me some questions, and I answered others if I did not respect myself I respect others as they respect you. If you talk about me I will talk about you; you know that you said that there were two men that had more sense than me and my whole family. I suppose that you meant the Republican voters of the county. They would have to have a lot of sense to have more than 511 of the very best men of the county. If friends sent me the Banner as you told them to. Well, I will not tell you who were elected on the 6th inst., for you will find out some day, I guess. Respectfully fours,

LEE VICKERS.

NEEDMORE.

Health here is good at present, except Mrs. C. Shaw's children have got the whooping cough. Mrs. Sam Shaw, of Clanton, paid her son, Charles, a short call Sunday. A bad accident happened to Alpuso Jackson last week; he got his fingers badly mashed. Well, the musical at H. T. L.'s was enjoyed by all present; he has a number of new "records" and they are fine, especially the "colored dance." Sunday was preaching day at Liberty, but it rained so we could not go, so missed our Sunday school and preaching. We are sorry to hear that Mrs. R. C. Riggins is very sick, but hope for her speedy recovery. Mrs. A. A. Jackson, of Lomax, is also quite ill; we hope the next news will be that she is improving. T. H. Jones visited his sister, Mrs. H. C. Maddox, uSnday night. We are having a lot of rain. I guess our sawmill men would like to see it clear up. Little Aurelius J. was a welcome visiter in Sunday night. We are having a lot dox and T. H. Jones visited the show at Clanton Saturday and report a good time. R. L. J. and J. W. J. went to the speaking at Mount Pleasant Saturday night, and heard C. N. Etland, county lecturer of the Farmers' Union. TWO NEW COMERS.

KILLGORE ON STOCK LAW.

A few words to the people on stock law. Gentlemen, I wish to call your attention to a few things for your consideration before you vote for stock law. Please consider well who it will benefit and who it will hurt. Are you prepared for stock law? If so are your neighbors prepared? Have you sufficient pasture and water for your stock? Have you land enough to cultivate and pasture your stock? How about the tenants, what will they do for pasturage for their stock? Now, gentlemen, I was in Coosa county in August, 1905, and I saw pastures that were almost as clean as your yard and the forest was almost waist deep in grass and wild pea vines. The cows had picked every leaf that they could reach. I looked at the clean pastures and then at the green forest and I thought to myself, "If them poor cows could just get out into the forest they could do so well." You can go into stock law districts and buy land much cheaper than you can here; so if you want to reduce the value of your land, just vote for stock law in your beat. My opinion is "best to let well enough alone." What is yours? Respectfully,

M. A. KILLGORE.

MACEDONIA.

Editor Union:

It seems from the Banner correspondents that the people made a sad mistake in our last election by electing such men as we did elect, and brought shame on our great county. Now, I for one don't think that we've got as bad a set for officers as they claim. My opponent says he had rather be defeated than elected by such men as elected us. Now, I am proud of such men as voted for us, and want to again thank them for their support. It is my full intention to do my whole duty, regardless of party or otherwise. Again I say, let persecutions rage and false abuses come, but we will do our duty. Now, the Demmies are blaming their people for not paying up their poll tax. This is a bad showing on those that won't pay a tax that helps educate our children. Friends, I feel like I am your servant. Come, lead me to the path of right, and I will do it. With best wishes to The Union and its editor and all people, respectfully,

S. E. WALDROP.

BEAT SIX.

Editor Union:

Please allow me space for a few words in regard to stock law. We find some opposition to preventing stock from running at large in this beat, but I think it would be a good thing. We would have fewer stock, but better stock, which all will admit is the best. It has been said by some of the opposition that it will take the milk and butter from the widow and her children and all such rot as that: the widow is not able to split rails to fence the farm, and the way labor is at present she can't hire her rails split. So it will be better for her to just keep what stock she needs in a pasture, and two good cows are sufficient for any family. One cow well fed would do more than half a dozen such as you will see on many a farm through this county if you will just look around a little.

A. W. POWELL.

THORSBY DOTS.

Dr. Frank Sanders, of Boston, formerly dean of Yale Theological Seminary, and now superintendent of the Congregational Sunday schools of the country, spent a day here last week visiting Thorsby Institute. Dr. Sanders expressed himself as being very well pleased with the work and progress of the school up to the present time.

M. J. Soberg went to Birmingham Saturday to spend a few weeks working there.

The Japanese lecturer who was to have been here Saturday failed to arrive on account of sickness. It is hoped to secure him for a later date.

Miss Lena Jackson, of Birmingham, has been secured as vocal and instrumental instructor in music at Thorsby Institute. She will spend three days of each week in Thorsby. Miss Jackson is a soloist in the First Baptist church of Birmingham and comes very highly recommended.

A musical entertainment will be given by Thorsby Institute at its hall on Thanksgiving night. Miss Jackson, Miss Boyd, Miss Moffett and others from Birmingham will take part, and a good program is assured. An admission fee will be charged.

Bert Bosworth came down from Birmingham Sunday and spent the day here.

PENSION WARRANTS.

All persons entitled to pensions are hereby notified that the warrants for same are now in my office, and to call and get them as soon as possible.

This, 29th day of October, 1906.

L. H. REYNOLDS,
tf Judge of Probate.

When The Lawyer Will Be Without a Professio

Col. James Hamilton Lewis, Corporation Counsel of Chicago.

I N eight hundred years—yes, before that period has —the lawyer will be without a profession.

The law is in the midst of great changes. that in 50 years the evolution will have progress that we will have a tribunal something like those of Greece, where any man, whether he be lawyer or go and present his case.

The lawyer, except as an advocate, is disappear from the world. The necessity for him is wan are learning to get together and settle their business matters or th bles without him.

There was a time when the law offered a man preferment, hono eatree and everything to be desired. Not so today. The lawyer upon as a parasite, feeding on the body politic. On every hand we yers turning away from the practice of their profession and gui channels of life offering the mbetter returns for their abilities.

I say without hesitation that the lawyer is the lowest-paid work class of endeavor to be cited, considering what he puts into his wo the corporation lawyer getting perhaps $2500 or $3000 a year. He possible for his employers to accumulate millions. Take the lawyer fends the corporation damage suit. What does he get for the life puts into his fight?

Take the criminal lawyer. He gives his very flesh to the cau saves life and liberty, and in return what does he get but a paltry

I repeat that the world is learning to get along without lawyers me if it is not true that the colleges are turning out more lawyers t ever before and that the number of lawyers inproportion to the pop increasing. I am not prepared to say that such is the fact. My have been decried by the law schools that are turning out lawyers

We do not have to go far back to see what an evolution al taken place in the legal calling. Now it is not learning that takes the front. It is not depth of wisdom, years of study or conscientio What is it? Paper-cap explosions! Noise!

No longer is it necessary for a man to be a lawyer to go to Business men go there. The places once considered as belonging o lawyer are going to me in other walks of life. The lawyer on every being crowded out. The people are becoming intelligent enough to without him as an intermediary.

MORE PAY FOR THOUSANDS

Workmen For Steel and Cotton Industries Get Advances.

Fall River Mill Owners Grant Increase Demanded and Avert Another Strike.

Fall River, Mass.—Thirty thousand mill operatives won their battle for an increase of wages and will come under a scale giving them ten per. cent. more than the present rate. The advance prevented a strike, the workmen having voted to stop work if the new schedule was not accepted. Mr. C. D. Borden, an independent cotton manufacturer, employing 5000 operatives, took the lead, though no demand had been made upon him.

The new pay scale affects seventy corporations operating ninety-two mills, besides the Iron Works plant. The Manufacturers' Association's agreement to pay the increase is for a period of six months, but provision is made for extending it.

Probably other cotton mills in New England will follow this city's lead and thousands of outside mill hands ultimately will be benefited by the determined stand taken by the Fall River unions.

Steel Trust Raises Wages.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The thousands of men employed by the Steel Trust will have their wages raised starting January 1, the increase to be based on the wages of common labor, which will be ten cents a day greater with the advent of the new year. Day and turn labor will have its pay adjusted in like ratio. Notices to this effect will be posted at all plants December 1.

DIAZ DEMANDS EXECUTIONS.

Texas Refuses to Surrender Men Charged With the Jiminez Affair.

Galveston, Texas.—A special from Mexico City says that President Diaz has issued orders to Governor Cardenas and other officials that the Jimines outrage and revolutionary movement demands the execution of the leaders, and that their heads must be produced or there will be official changes.

Governor Cardenas and other Mexican officials have done everything possible to prove Gonzales and Marques and Castro, of El Mensajes, implicated in the raids, but have failed, and Governor Lanham, of Texas, has refused to extradite them. They have been rearrested by Federal officers and Texas now demands an explanation.

ICE MEN LAUGH WHEN FINED.

Five of Philadelphia Trust Members Sentenced, the Others Let Off.

Philadelphia.—The trial of the Ice Trust and its fourteen members came to an abrupt close in Judge Wilson's court. Five of the defendants accused of having conspired to stifle competition and force up the price of ice to an almost prohibitive figure entered a plea of non vult contendre, and each was fined $75 and costs. They laughed as the fines were imposed. Seven other defendants, upon whom a similar charge rested, were discharged at the instance of District Attorney Bell. The remaining two were allowed to depart, but with the threat of future prosecution hanging over their heads as a deterrent to any further effort to effect a combination in restriction of trade.

ANOTHER BLOW TO OIL TRUST.

Ohio Court Compels Pipe Line to Act as Common Carrier.

Findlay, Ohio. — Judge Silas E. Harin, of the Circuit Court, granted a writ of alternative mandamus against the Buckeye Pipe Line Company. The motion was commenced by Attorney-General Wade H. Ellis, who seeks to compel the pipe line company to transport oil for any producer without discrimination.

The petition alleges that the Buckeye Pipe Line Company charges 20 cents a barrel for transportation but that the Standard Oil Company, which controls it, pays nothing. The rate is fixed so high, it is alleged, to keep others than the Standard from seeking to use the line.

PRESIDENT'S PLEDGE TO THE PORTO RICANS

He Will Use Every Effort to Obtain Citizenship For Them.

HE GETS A GREAT OVATION

Travels in an Auto From Ponce to San Juan and Big Crowds Along the Route Cheer Him—Children Sing "America."

San Juan, P. R.—President Roosevelt landed at Ponce and journeyed in an automobile over the famous military road from Ponce to San Juan. The people of Porto Rico gave a great ovation to him. The eighty-mile trip was made in six hours and thirty minutes, counting the time taken up by stops at the principal towns along the route, where the President made short speeches to the people. The President in all his speeches dwelt on the affection he entertained for the people of Porto Rico and assured them that he would use every effort to obtain citizenship for them — that his efforts would be unceasing to help them along the path of true self-government.

President Roosevelt arrived at Ponce from Colon on board the battleship Louisiana. He was greeted on board the vessel by Governor Winthrop, who extended a welcome to the island. The President at once went ashore and was greeted at the pier by Mayor Oppenheimer at Ponce and a delegation of prominent officials and citizens.

The town was profusely decorated in the President's honor and was crowded with persons from the surrounding country eager to greet Mr. Roosevelt.

At the City Hall an address of welcome was read to the President. He delivered his reply from the balcony of the building, addressing the largest crowd that had ever assembled in Ponce. The President said in part:

"I shall continue to use every effort to secure citizenship for Porto Ricans. I am confident that this will come in the end, and all that I can personally do to hasten that day I will do. My efforts will be unceasing to help you along the path of true self-government, which must have for its basis union, order, liberty, justice and honor."

In conclusion the President said: "I salute you from my heart as fellow-citizens."

The reference to the citizenship of the islanders brought out enthusiastic applause from the people.

Before leaving Ponce the President was driven to the Roosevelt High School. Here several hundred school children had been assembled and sang "America" as the President drove up. The cornerstone of this school was laid in April, 1903, by the President's daughter, now Mrs. Longworth. To Mrs. Roosevelt was presented a beautiful piece of embroidered work, the handiwork of the girls of the industrial school.

The Presidential party left Ponce for the run to San Juan over the famous military road. It took eleven automobiles to convey the entire party.

ONE MAN HOLDS UP BANK.

Locks the Clerks in the Vault and Escapes With $1000 in Cash.

Newton, Kan.—The clerks of the Midland Bank of Newton were held up by one man and robbed of $1000 in cash. The robber presented a letter of introduction to Herman Suderman, the cashier, and then told the clerks they would all die should an effort be made to detain him.

Six or seven persons were in the bank at the time. All were ordered to go into the vault, and the robber locked them in. The thief then took what currency was in sight and escaped.

SKYSCRAPER DEATH LIST.

156 Out of 1559 Men Killed or Disabled in Single Year.

Chicago.— Chicago skyscrapers during the last year enacted the heaviest toll of human life recorded in the history of building operations in the city. Figures compiled in the annual death roll of the Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union show the increase in fatalities among members of that craft to be surprisingly large.

Of a total membership in the union of 1351 men, nearly 156 either lost their lives or were totally or partially disabled as a result of their hazardous occupations.

During last year seventeen iron workers were killed among the same number of members were injured that they cannot pursue their trade, while [illegible] of minor injuries numbered [illegible]. ONE OF THE POISON SQUAD MEMBERS DEAD

R. V. Freman's Mother Says He Was Killed by Experiments.

SHE WILL SUE GOVERNMENT

Tested Food Adulterants—Volunteered and Agreed to Absolve Authorities From Blame in Case of Disaster.

Washington, D. C.—Because his health was undermined by eating poison as a member of Dr. H. W. Wiley's first "Poison Squad," Robert Vance Freman, aged twenty-three, is dead. This is the charge made by his mother, Mrs. Lurea Lathan, of this city.

The young man died of tuberculosis, contracted, as his mother declares, from the effects of the adulterants he ate in the interest of science. Borax and boric acid were fed to the class of young men who first volunteered three years ago to test on themselves the effect of adulterants. Freman was one of these.

Mrs. Lathan declares she will seek to recover damages from the Government, though the volunteers for the "Poison Squad" signed contracts agreeing to absolve the Government from blame for any ill results of the experiment by Dr. Wiley as chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture.

The first "Poison Squad," of which young Lathan was a member, was the result of Dr. Wiley's idea, developed in 1903, of feeding to a class of especially selected young men, volunteering as subjects for experimentation, chemicals commonly found in foods "doctored" to further preservation.

Writing about these experiments in March, 1905, Dr. Wiley pointed out how unsatisfactory had been the results previously obtained by artificial digestion induced by digestive ferments secured from the stomachs and pancreatic glands of animals, and by feeding food adulterants to guinea pigs and rabbits.

"If the digestive conditions of the human animals were the same as those of the animals used for experimental purposes," said he, "it would not be necessary to carry the experimental research any further. It is well known, however, that every species of animal has its own peculiarities respecting the digestive processes. Hence they cannot be particularly applied to man. The final answer in such cases, therefore, must be obtained by experiment upon man himself."

Dr. Wiley admitted then, with apparent regret, that "the final determination of the effects which are produced in the feeding of lower animals are determined by an examination of the organs themselves, but this crucial test cannot be applied to man."

He organized, however, a "poison squad" of twelve young men recruited from among employes of the Department of Agriculture, and fed them three times a day on foods "preserved" with borax, boric acid, salicylic acid, salicylates, sulphurous acid, sulphites, benzoic acid, and benzoates.

The experiments were continued over a period of two years, and the data obtained on the effect of borax and boracic acid published. It was found that large doses continued for a short time, or small doses of a half-grain per day continued for a period of fifty days, exerted "an unfavorable effect upon digestion and health."

Inasmuch, however, as the members of the "poison squad" volunteered their services, it is doubted if resort can be had to law for compensation for injuries to health which any of them may have suffered as a result of their chemical dieting.

HELD BY GAS WELL CAP.

Extraordinary Accident Costs Two Workmen Loss of Hands.

New Martinsville, W. Va.—George Wilson and Arthur Steepleton, oil workers, narrowly escaped death in a remarkable accident. The two men had cleaned an oil well and were putting the cap, which weighed 4000 pounds, back on the well. Their tools accidentally slipped, causing the cap to fall on their hands. Oil and gas began to escape, threatening both men with asphyxiation.

With a mighty jerk Steepleton released his hands, tearing off three fingers. His chum, with great difficulty, released Wilson, and both men fell unconscious from pain and inhaling the escaping gas.

JAPS LOSING SOME MARKET.

Country Elected That It Is to Purchase Cement Instead of Japanese.

Tokio, Japan.—The first-class battleship Satsuma, 19,000 tons, the first building in the world to be launched in Japan, took the water in the presence of the Emperor and Empress and a great throng of spectators. The vessel was launched sideways, and the ceremony was carried out with great success. The Satsuma is the largest vessel ever launched in Japan. She is 450 feet long, 76 feet beam and 27 feet deep. Her displacement is 19,000 tons. She is to be completed in 1908.

The Trenton Farmer gives the following interesting account of the cultivation of the osier or basket willow in the State of New York:

The superior excellence of her apple and peppermint crops has gained for the fame of Wayne County, N. Y. But these products, although of prime importance, do not constitute her only claim to distinction. As the leading centre of a highly unique and interesting and thriving industry, namely, the culture of the osier, or basket willow; both in regard to quality and quantity, Wayne County surpasses any other section in the United States.

Just a mile or so north of the beautiful Wayne County village of Clyde, on the line of the Central Hudson Railroad, half-way between the cities of Syracuse and Rochester, is located the largest farm in the United States, if not in the world, devoted exclusively to the growth of basket willow. It is over fifty-five acres in extent and is owned by Ransom R. Barnes, a leading citizen and business man of Clyde.

Every year this unique farm is covered with a forest of lilliputian trees, thousands upon thousands in number, which grow up in the spring, reach a state of satisfactory maturity during the summer and are then cut down in the fall. And on the Barnes farm this process has been repeated year after year for a quarter of a century.

It is remarkable that the cultivation of an agricultural product which can be grown so easily and with so little expense and for which there is so strong a demand in the market, should be confined almost exclusively to one locality, when the probabilities are it would thrive well and prove a profitable crop over a wide range of territory, turning many waste places into productive lands. The explanation of this may lie in the fact that the subject of willow culture has not been presented to farmers for their careful consideration. It is the purpose of this article to throw light upon the subject, in the hope that some will profit thereby.

A little historical information at this point may prove interesting. The basket willow was introduced into this country from Germany seventy-five years ago. It was brought over by a party of immigrants who came to the United States to find employment in the salt works located at Liverpool, N. Y.

The willow is a hardy plant, and the sturdy German folk who brought it as a memento of the beloved fatherland, knowing its qualities, expected it would grow and thrive in the new home across the seas and little pieces of it were set out in the wee gardens surrounding their humble American homes.

The willow fulfilled the expectations concerning it. As more land was acquired by these thrifty people, more and more willow was grown, and after the regular day's work was done, long evenings were turned to account shaping the willow into baskets, which were sold throughout the neighborhood. Gradually the sales extended into adjoining neighborhoods. After a time a few, more enterprising than the others, stopped "making" salt and devoted all their time to the culture of basket willow and to the manufacture of willow ware. They went further and bought all the baskets made by their less enterprising compatriots, and then found markets for their wares in distant cities.

L. L. Therwachter and the Biddle Brothers, of Liverpool, are at present the chief buyers of willow and willow ware, and contract annually for hundreds of tons of willows grown in Wayne County alone, and manufacture thousands upon thousands of baskets. Mr. Therwachter, a native of Liverpool, was brought in contact with the culture of Lowell. He brought some willow sets with him, and in connection with his ministerial duties, was very soon conducting a willow farm, and eventually became prominent in the culture. Twenty-five years ago Mr. Barnes obtained a lot of willow sets from Mr. Waldo, and started what has grown to be the largest willow farm in this country.

And now, in brief, will be explained the manner of starting a willow farm. First, of course, get willow sets, preferably those of a two years' growth; cut these into lengths of ten inches each; set them in the ground one foot apart, in rows three feet apart; plant these pencil-like sets right side up—that is, larger end goes into the ground first, preserving the relative position it occupied upon the parent plant. It would not be fatal to the growth of the plant to put the set upside down, but in this case the "sheet" which sprouts from the top of the set would start growing toward the ground before taking a turn upward, forming an undesirable crook. The set is left sticking out of the ground about half an inch. It will be three years before the sets reach a condition for profitable cutting.

Following this for the next five years they will do their best growing, after which the plants begin slowly to deteriorate, until at the end of twenty-five years they will have to be taken up and replaced by new sets.

In regard to the kind of soil required to grow the basket willow, low muck land with a clay sub-soil is the best. Any land that will grow corn or grass will grow willows. Land subject to an annual overflow, which fertilizes the soil, is excellent for the purpose, but not wet land. In this section much land that was considered almost good for nothing is producing a profitable willow crop. Sets may be planted in the fall, but the spring is the better time. Willow sets are very hardy; they may be left outdoors all winter, and then if set out will sometimes grow, but alternate thawing and freezing will kill them. An interesting peculiarity in regard to the germination of the sets is the fact that the filamentary roots do not start from the buds, but come out all over the surface of the set, much like the beard on a man's face.

About the only care the crop requires is to keep the weeds down. The crop is fertilized by its own leaves. Three tons to the acre is considered a profitable crop. Land sometimes produces six to eight tons an acre. At the present time willow is worth $18 a ton, f. o. b. cars. White or peeled willow is worth five to six cents a pound. It takes three tons of green willow to make one ton of white willow. The harvest for this product begins after a frost that causes the leaves to fall, usually in October, and lasts sometimes as late as the middle of December.

On "the largest farm in the country" fifteen men are employed six to eight weeks in cutting the willows. They are cut with a sickle-like knife, and the "whips," which are six or eight feet long, are tied into bundles about the size of a corn shock, loaded onto wagons and drawn directly to the cars.

It would be interesting to describe the preparation of the willow for manufacture into the various wares, but that would exceed the purposes of this article, which has been to furnish information concerning a unique farm product, which it is hoped may prove of some value.

Moonshine in New York.

"Don't talk to me about moonshining in Kentucky," said the internal revenue agent. "There's more moonshining going on all the time in little old New York than could be done in ten Kentuckys. In the crowded sections of the East and West Sides stills spring up right along and for a while conduct a flourishing business in the low grade whisky they manufacture. You see, it doesn't take much trouble to equip a still with corn and yeast and start in to make the mash which is finally turned out as a pretty poor sort of whisky. The great difficulty is in getting rid of the peculiar smoke and odor from stills without exciting suspicion. This is usually attempted by running the still in connection with a dye shop or some other chemical enterprise as a blind. We keep watch on all such establishments and have the town well covered by sharp eyed and sharp nosed agents besides. We are constantly arresting these small moonshiners and sending them to jail. But enough spring up in their places for you to say with safety that, as I say, there's more moonshining going on in New York City right along than there could be in ten Kentuckys."

Much Against Being Rich.

Bishop Gore was the preacher at the opening of the English Church Congress. "The late master of Balliol," he told the great congregation, "used often to say, in his detached way, that he was afraid there was much more in the New Testament against being rich and in favor of being poor than we tried to recognise."

Ma Replies.

The letter from "Pa" published in the Globe on Saturday, and which was written by a real "Pa," has made a certain woman very mad. The following came in the mail to-day: "You published a letter from Pa. Well, here is one from Ma. I never knew a man who was so abused as that Pa claims to be. Every man gets good clothes; he gets as much as his daughters and more than his wife. If he doesn't, it is because he wastes his share of the money on cigars. He has an income, and if it goes for something besides clothes who is to blame? A man will wear old clothes and invest in all sorts of fool schemes that waste his money. A woman will take her share of the allowance and get good clothes and will never bat an eye at a scheme. If she sets her heart on a certain fine dress she will go without chocolate drops and do the frosting to get the money to buy it. Ever know a man to make a self-denial in order to buy himself a fine suit? No, indeed. He expects his women folks to do the self-denying. I'd like to meet the 'Pa' of your letter. I will wager he spends twice as much on himself every month as his wife spends on herself. Yours indignantly, Ma."—Atchison Globe.

Jap Two Looks.

He climbed down from the paymaster with his month's wages still in his hand.

"Sure, ye must be feelin' rich, Pat, with all ye have there," said a bystander.

"And what does that signify to me," answered Pat; "just two books. I want white I bet it, and white I give it to the cold grocer."

Ditch Cleaner.

A ditch cleaner is described in Farm, Field and Fireside by C. T. Baker, as follows: "In connection with the road scraper a ditch cleaner is used to pass the earth from the side ditches up the grade far enough for the road scraper to reach it. This ditch cleaner is made something after the fashion of a snow plow, but the left hand side is made shorter and the side is made vertical, so that in practice this perpendicular side acts like a landslide. The other side is beveled something like a plowshare and is faced with steel. This side is made longer than the other, and it is this side that shovels the earth out of the ditch. The hitch is not at the point like a snow plow, but about ten inches to the right of the point, as shown in the illustration, which is adjustable."

Hog Ringing Trap.

Mr. C. Avery, of Indiana, writes the Ohio Farmer about his hog ringing trap as follows: "Subscribers who raise hogs may be interested in a ringing trap which I use, so I send sketch. The frame of trap is 2x4 inch pieces, D, D, and D, lapped and bolted at corners as shown, and a tight, smooth floor; also side and top boards are solidly nailed to inner edge of the frame, as shown, making a strong crate from which boards can not be crowded off. Rear end is fitted with slide door to raise up as indicated by dotted line V. Front end has a door, AA, made of two thick, strong boards on inside cross cleats at top and bottom. A, A is joined at bottom by two strong hinges to frame D, and held up when in use by the iron clamp F, being placed down over top of door and frame, D. Door has a central opening B, below which are several bolt holes X, for fastening an iron lever, C. The top of door also has wide cleat, E, bolted at one end with blocks behind to hold it out from door, so the other end will form a guide for lever C, which, when pulled forward, partially closes opening B, and firmly holds hog, with head through the opening. Lever C is fastened while in use by a spike nail inserted as shown, in one of several holes bored through side cleat and door at Z. Opening B is twelve inches long and nine and one-half inches wide at widest place near lower end, and lower end of opening is ten inches above floor. Crate is four feet two inches long, two feet four inches high, and one foot six inches wide, inside measure. Place trap squarely with rear end close up to hog house door, with lever C thrown back; raise slide door, drive in a hog and drop slide door behind him, and he will thrust his head through hole B. Pull lever C tight against his neck and insert spike to hold it there, and you can ring (as I have done) with ease, a hog weighing nearly 400 pounds."

A SUNDAY SERMON

Subject: — Statement Supplemented

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the theme, "Personal Experience," the Rev. I. W. Henderson, pastor, took as his text Jno. 4:42: "Now we believe, not because of thy saying; for we have heard Him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world." He said:

The final proof of the value of the Gospel to the individual lies in personal experience. The one test which, above all others, warrants a man to hail Jesus or to deny Him, is that of real knowledge directly acquired. No man is fit to flaunt Christianity as a farce who has not first observed the rules incidental to the living of the Christ life. He is the best advocate of the beauties of the Christian economy who has been loyal to his Lord's commands.

The consensus of Christians is the result of a common experience. We, as citizens of the kingdom of God, hold fast and together certain formulas of faith because we have, each for himself, as individuals, found valuable for us those working principles that we maintain. The church universal represents, in its fundamental dogmas, the opinions of myriad men who have, through the process of individual experience, reached a common ground of belief. The church catholic is divided upon secondary tenets according to the varieties of secondary Christian religious experience among men who assert allegiance to the central truths. In the broad sense, all of us who believe in and serve Christ, are Christians because we each recognize as a personal experience the truths which Christianity asserts to be fundamental. I am a Presbyterian and you are a Methodist, not because our views are different at the vitals, but because our secondary experiences are unlike. The Christian Church is an aggregation of men who see Jesus with the same eye and who find in Him and in His power in their lives bonds which link them fast. And any sect or denomination of Christians is but the congregation of some of the followers of Christ around a secondary tenet that is alive with their own peculiar doctrine, the result of an individual experience. At the bottom of it all the moving principle is personal experience. No man is a good Christian who has not had contact with Christ. No man can appreciate the genius of Presbyterianism save he who has had the experience common to all who hold that creed. It is a wise thing for a man who honestly differs from his fellow men; it is a sensible thing for a Christian who earnestly and reasonably disagrees with his fellow followers of Christ; to examine his conclusion—that is to say, his creed, his dogma, his tenets, as you will—and determine whether or no they mirror correctly his personal experiences. But merely because a man finds himself at variance with the world of men about him is no sign that he has misinterpreted his experiences or is wrong. The prophets were persecuted not because they were wrong, but because they framed from the facts at hand conclusions that the Hebrews did not care to admit as tenable. Galileo got into trouble because Ptolemaists thought him crazy. The world was called flat until a dauntless soul declared it round. Luther would never have nailed the ninety-five theses to the door of the church at Wittenberg had he not been true to the truth as he saw it. And these men were, as are many men to-day, dead wrong in their beliefs as measured by the standards of the past.

The results attained in all departments of knowledge are the outcome of the personal experience of individuals. A scientific law may be the declaration by a single man of truth proven out of the records of his personal experience, unaided and unverified by the experience of any other man—not infrequently at first it is. But this much is sure: that any law that has the assent of any society is based entirely upon the experiences of individual men who have perceived and been influenced by similar phenomena in their separate lives.

All the knowledge that we have and all the laws that we accept at second hand are, at bottom, founded upon the research and personal investigation and experience of some single man or some set of men. To say that we accept many truths at second hand in no way injures our argument. All that we receive upon the assertions of other men is so taken because we have faith in the validity of their conclusions as being the direct result of their personal experiences. Repetition is never so inspiring or convincing as is the dictum of the first source. And the only value that re-statement has is gained from the personal knowledge out of which it springs. By virtue of the multiplicity of the demands on our time we have to rest much of received truth upon the decisions of other men; but, in the providence of God, we may prove accepted truth if we will in the investigation and the delineation of our own personal experiences.

No man, however, is entitled to affirm or to deny the value of a declared truth unless he has either met to the full the requirements of such condition or accepted the opinion of some original investigator who has fulfilled all incidental demands. How silly it would be for a man, untutored and unversed in the science, to set up his opinion, without deep and long investigation, against the conclusions of a Darwin, of Tyndall, of Huxley. And yet the opinion would have probably as much to [illegible] a conclusion of such [illegible] men.

[illegible] of the [illegible] of the [illegible] at the [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] we must be quite sure [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible]

CEDAR GROVE.

Mr. Editor:

I can't begin to tell you how pleased we all are here with the result of the late election. I hear some of our folks talking about what some of the Democratic writers have to say about us in the Banner. Now, I want to say to the people that the only way that they can stop such things as the Banner and its correspondents have to say about us is for all that vote the Republican and Populist tickets to quit taking the Banner and let it go dead. I noticed that one writer wants the demmies to be ready to get there next time with all four feet, like the little dog scratched. Now, if you all ever get there it will be like a dog scratching backwards; it will not be forward, for you all know that you all go backward all the time. Prof. W. J. Mims' school at the Union Normal Institute is a good one, and he has a very able assistant in Miss Rosalie Moore. We are glad to say that Mrs. A. F. Mims is up and about again after her spell of sickness. Rev. W. J. Lawley preached here Saturday and Sunday. Prof. W. J. Mims and Lee Vickers were down in Beat 4 Sunday evening; that's a long ways to go to Sunday school, boys. Prof. R. A. Smith and sister, Miss Dovie, attended preaching here Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams and daughter, Miss Naomi, were at preaching also. Several new houses will go up soon. I hope to hear from all the correspondents in The Union. It is the best paper in the county and is read by more people in the county than any other. A. F. Mims is serving as a grand juror this week. Success to The Union and its editor. ONE ALONE.

BEAT THREE.

Editor Union:

I'm knocking at the door; let me in. Health of community is good, except B. T. Franklin's little son has fever. We note that the fever has crossed over Mulberry creek. Some of the people in this beat remind me of a 16 year-old boy; they have got 10 cents for cotton until they have a little pocket change ahead, and now they want to do something to show up, and they fell on stock law. Now, boys, before you vote for stock law, you go into stock law districts and see the condition of the stock there, and when you return if you are not against stock law, I'll pay your expenses and time. Not only stock has bad times, but the hard feelings between neighbors. Stock law will break into our schools and churches, and it will be a general tear down all 'round. Do you believe such a law is good for us? I don't. Do you believe that this law is good for poor widows and orphans or poor renters? Would you like to hear little children cry for milk, and you know that you voted it away from them? Some men are so stingy that they hate to see another man's animal eating grass on their land, though they can't use the grass themselves. I notice A. Al Powell says it is easier for a widow to fence here pasture than to fence her farm. Don't it take better material to fence a pasture than it does to fence the farm? And then have to drive old Brindle to and from it 365 days in the year, jerking her from one side of the road to the other. Think of all these things, boys, and you'll vote against stock law.

FARMER OF BEAT 3.

Jury No. 3 consists of Wm. Clarke.

Court adjourned Monday afternoon out of respect to the late Attorney J. C. Dennis. Tuesday was taken up by the case of Thos. E. Dennis et al. vs. Huston Price and G. W. Maddox, which is a land case of considerable complexity, and furnished the opposing counsel a fine opportunity for legal sparring.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

The weather the past few days has been ideal, all that our Southern poets could wish it. Cotton picking is about finished except "scrapping." We are pleased to state that Mrs. Gilbert is improving as fast as could be expected from her serious hurt. Mesdames Goodwin and DuBose have traveled to Memphis and are now storm bound, since the railroad has been so seriously injured that it is not safe to travel. Miss Blue Crumpton is with her uncle, T. U. Crumpton, here. The many friends of Mrs. Sallie and Miss Minnie Foshee regret their move from here to their plantation, though the loss is lessened by John Foshee and family occupying their former home. Joe Hicks and wife have visited relatives here. We are pleased to state that Young Nix has recovered and is again able to carry around his delicious fresh pork to his customers. Miss Alice Wilson has been the guest of Mrs. Garner. Burwell Foshee has resumed his former business in Belle Sumpter, to the regret of his many friends here. Mrs. Granger, of Independence, is visiting Mrs. Deramns. Rev. Mitchell has visited his father and sister (Mrs. Merchant) here. Mrs. Patty DuBose had a sale last week. She will be much missed, this having been her home so long. Mrs. Ensign is in improved health, and their automobile is again on the road. The Foshee brick store is nearing completion. Colonel Foshee has returned from winding up his brother's (the late Wheeler Foshee) business, bringing his elegant team of high-steppers, which his good colored friend drove here. His brother, Hill, took the beautiful dogs. Miss Cuma Ramsey has visited relatives here. Rev. Davis preached his valedictory sermon the 25th inst. The language was appropriate and beautiful. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Laura, who, by her charming manner, has made many friends here. His sister, Miss Davis, and Mrs. R. Baker Jones, secretary Prattville District Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, gave us a most appropriate lecture, and we think have succeeded in forming an Epworth League society. We know these Christian women have sown much good seed that we pray may do good. "O."

LOMAX.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a little space in your valuable paper to reply to M. A. Killgore on stock law. In last week's Union Mr. Killgore asks for a consideration before we vote for stock law, who it will benefit and who it will hurt, which every man should do before he votes. Now, I want to say that my experience in stock law is that it hurts no one. I have rented land in stock law districts and have owned land in stock law districts, and have found that stock law was a real benefit to all people who farm. It is the only thing that will give protection to our crops, as we all know that there isn't a fence in the country that will turn a hungry cow or a little piney woods rooter. I think if Mr. Killgore will investigate a little he will find that he is mistaken about stock law making land cheaper. Look at Georgia and East Alabama. These are stock law districts, and we know land is much higher there than it is where there is no stock law. The cheapest land we can find is where there is no stock law. W. R. Jackson says we will be the worst torn up people for years you ever saw. Now, I beg to differ with him, as I believe our people are willing to submit to justice, and we all know that it is just and right for everybody to be responsible for his stock. We have a law that makes us responsible for our children and have no law to make us responsible for our stock, yet we can teach our children right from wrong and cannot our stock; therefore we should be responsible for our stock. With best wishes to The Union and its cause and many readers, BEAT 4 VOTER.

The term "giving quarter" appears to have originated in the ancient agreement that the ransom of a soldier should be one-quarter of his pay.

Yours truly,

W. J. WINSON.

NOTICE.

Thorsby, Ala., Nov. 28, 1906.

To the Citizens of Thorsby, Ala., and to Whom It May Concern:

There will be a petition presented to the next session of the Legislature of Alabama to repeal or amend the charter of the city of Thorsby, Alabama, to repeal the latter clause of section twenty-four (24) of said charter, which reads as follows, viz: "Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of the grape or other wine fruits, and the City Council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of said wine, and the license for the use of the State of Alabama shall be the same as required by the State from dealers in wines exclusively in other parts of the state."

To read as follows, viz: Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines mades from the juice of grapes, and the City Council shall have power to license and regulate the sale of said wines, but wine shall not be sold in less quantities than one gallon, and shall not be drank on the premises where sold, and shall not be drank in the house where sold, nor in a room adjoining the same.

Any person selling wine in less quantities than one gallon, or permitting it to be drank on the premises, or in the house where sold, or in a room adjoining the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs for every offense. And the license for the use of the State shall not be less than fifteen dollars. And all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed. J. BICE.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.

Thrice-a-Week Edition—Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World, now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Union together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2. tf

New Orleans, La.—It was announced by General Manager Cowne, of the New Orleans and Northeastern, Alabama and Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific railroad, that the employes of those lines have been granted an increase in wages, in some cases dating from October 1, and in others November 1. Uniformity has not been observed in raising the pay of the men, individual cases having been dealt with. The list includes agents, clerks, engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen.

Fall River, Mass.—Beginning Monday, 20,000 operatives in the cotton mills here will come under a wage scale giving them 10 per cent more than the present rate. The acceptance of this plan by the operators has prevented a strike which the operatives voted to declare if the schedule was not approved.

"The Japanese should not complain of laws which are equally binding upon the Americans, and it would not be then necessary to classify the Japanese Mongolians, which has caused them much grief of spirit and lies really at the bottom of the whole trouble. With the age limit the only discrimination against the Japanese, it will effectively keep them out of the schools, because the majority of the Japanese who are in the primary grades are grown men. There will then be no grounds for outside interference with San Francisco's school question."

CEDAR GROVE.

Mr. Editor:

I can't begin to tell you how pleased we all are here with the result of the late election. I hear some of our folks talking about what some of the Democratic writers have to say about us in the Banner. Now, I want to say to the people that the only way that they can stop such things as the Banner and its correspondents have to say about us is for all that vote the Republican and Populist tickets to quit taking the Banner and let it go dead. I noticed that one writer wants the demmies to be ready to get there next time with all four feet, like the little dog scratched. Now, if you all ever get there it will be like a dog scratching backwards; it will not be forward, for you all know that you all go backward all the time. Prof. W. J. Mims' school at the Union Normal Institute is a good one, and he has a very able assistant in Miss Rosalie Moore. We are glad to say that Mrs. A. F. Mims is up and about again after her spell of sickness. Rev. W. J. Lawley preached here Saturday and Sunday. Prof. W. J. Mims and Lee Vickers were down in Beat 4 Sunday evening; that's a long ways to go to Sunday school, boys. Prof. R. A. Smith and sister, Miss Dovie, attended preaching here Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Williams and daughter, Miss Naomi, were at preaching also. Several new houses will go up soon. I hope to hear from all the correspondents in The Union. It is the best paper in the county and is read by more people in the county than any other. A. F. Mims is serving as a grand juror this week. Success to The Union and its editor. ONE ALONE.

BEAT THREE.

Editor Union:

I'm knocking at the door; let me in. Health of community is good, except B. T. Franklin's little son has fever. We note that the fever has crossed over Mulberry creek. Some of the people in this beat remind me of a 16 year-old boy; they have got 10 cents for cotton until they have a little pocket change ahead, and now they want to do something to show up, and they fell on stock law. Now, boys, before you vote for stock law, you go into stock law districts and see the condition of the stock there, and when you return if you are not against stock law, I'll pay your expenses and time. Not only stock has bad times, but the hard feelings between neighbors. Stock law will break into our schools and churches, and it will be a general tear down all 'round. Do you believe such a law is good for us? I don't. Do you believe that this law is good for poor widows and orphans or poor renters? Would you like to hear little children cry for milk, and you know that you voted it away from them? Some men are so stingy that they hate to see another man's animal eating grass on their land, though they can't use the grass themselves. I notice A. Al Powell says it is easier for a widow to fence here pasture than to fence her farm. Don't it take better material to fence a pasture than it does to fence the farm? And then have to drive old Brindle to and from it 365 days in the year, jerking her from one side of the road to the other. Think of all these things, boys, and you'll vote against stock law.

FARMER OF BEAT 3.

Circuit court convened in this city Monday, Judge Thos. G. Jones presiding. Solicitor Greene opened Monday evening. The grand jury is composed as follows: A. S. Jones, foreman; John Martin, J. G. Hartwiter, D. C. Honeycutt, J. W. Sewell, W. M. Price, Hugh Henry, J. J. Letcher, J. M. Robinson, Alford Mims, T. O. Freeman, G. A. Keen, A. J. McDonnell, W. H. Parrish, L. B. Gentry, Elijah Headley, J. O. Weeson, G. H. Gerald.

Petit Jury No. 1.

W. A. Hayes, Wm. Jones, Paton Harris, G. G. Roper, D. C. Allred, Joseph Mims, Albert Gore, J. J. Mims, J. N. Askins, E. L. Jones, W. R. Cofer, S. M. Merchant.

Jury No. 2.

James E. Cobb, Wiley Gore, J. A. Sammons, Lewis Littleton, James Chambers, Charles Shaw, Dowdie Roy, G. W. Jones, J. H. Gibbons, C. C. Plier, J. W. Wallace, R. A. Barnett.

Jury No. 3 consists of Wm. Clarke.

Court adjourned Monday afternoon out of respect to the late Attorney J. C. Dennis. Tuesday was taken up by the case of Thos. E. Dennis et al. vs. Huston Price and G. W. Maddox, which is a land case of considerable complexity, and furnished the opposing counsel a fine opportunity for legal sparring.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

The weather the past few days has been ideal, all that our Southern poets could wish it. Cotton picking is about finished except "scrapping." We are pleased to state that Mrs. Gilbert is improving as fast as could be expected from her serious hurt. Mesdames Goodwin and DuBose have traveled to Memphis and are now storm bound, since the railroad has been so seriously injured that it is not safe to travel. Miss Blue Crumpton is with her uncle, T. U. Crumpton, here. The many friends of Mrs. Sallie and Miss Minnie Foshee regret their move from here to their plantation, though the loss is lessened by John Foshee and family occupying their former home. Joe Hicks and wife have visited relatives here. We are pleased to state that Young Nix has recovered and is again able to carry around his delicious fresh pork to his customers. Miss Alice Wilson has been the guest of Mrs. Garner. Burwell Foshee has resumed his former business in Belle Sumpter, to the regret of his many friends here. Mrs. Granger, of Independence, is visiting Mrs. Deramns. Rev. Mitchell has visited his father and sister (Mrs. Merchant) here. Mrs. Patty DuBose had a sale last week. She will be much missed, this having been her home so long. Mrs. Ensign is in improved health, and their automobile is again on the road. The Foshee brick store is nearing completion. Colonel Foshee has returned from winding up his brother's (the late Wheeler Foshee) business, bringing his elegant team of high-steppers, which his good colored friend drove here. His brother, Hill, took the beautiful dogs. Miss Cuma Ramsey has visited relatives here. Rev. Davis preached his valedictory sermon the 25th inst. The language was appropriate and beautiful. He was accompanied by his daughter, Miss Laura, who, by her charming manner, has made many friends here. His sister, Miss Davis, and Mrs. R. Baker Jones, secretary Prattville District Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, gave us a most appropriate lecture, and we think have succeeded in forming an Epworth League society. We know these Christian women have sown much good seed that we pray may do good. "O."

LOMAX.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a little space in your valuable paper to reply to M. A. Killgore on stock law. In last week's Union Mr. Killgore asks for a consideration before we vote for stock law, who it will benefit and who it will hurt, which every man should do before he votes. Now, I want to say that my experience in stock law is that it hurts no one. I have rented land in stock law districts and have owned land in stock law districts, and have found that stock law was a real benefit to all people who farm. It is the only thing that will give protection to our crops, as we all know that there isn't a fence in the country that will turn a hungry cow or a little piney woods rooter. I think if Mr. Killgore will investigate a little he will find that he is mistaken about stock law making land cheaper. Look at Georgia and East Alabama. These are stock law districts, and we know land is much higher there than it is where there is no stock law. The cheapest land we can find is where there is no stock law. W. R. Jackson says we will be the worst torn up people for years you ever saw. Now, I beg to differ with him, as I believe our people are willing to submit to justice, and we all know that it is just and right for everybody to be responsible for his stock. We have a law that makes us responsible for our children and have no law to make us responsible for our stock, yet we can teach our children right from wrong and cannot our stock; therefore we should be responsible for our stock. With best wishes to The Union and its cause and many readers, BEAT 4 VOTER.

The term "giving quarter" appears to have originated in the ancient agreement that the ransom of a soldier should be one-quarter of his pay.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.

Thrice-a-Week Edition—Read Wherever the English Language Is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World, now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Union together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2. tf

THE LABOR WORLD.

Two hundred and fifty weavers went on strike at Adams, Mass.

Labor unions subscribed $2059 for President Gompers' political plans.

The Australian Federal Government has decided to pay all its employes fortnightly.

Mary Maguire, discharged as cook by J. S. Vetterlein, of Philadelphia, Pa., brought suit for $20,000 against her former employer.

All the switchmen in the Atlantic Coast Line yards went on strike at Waycross, Ga., because of the discharge of the night yardmaster.

A determined effort is being made to infuse fresh life into the National Union of Clerks of England, and propaganda work is in active progress.

About 400 workers in the arctic and lawn tennis shoe department of the National Rubber Works, at Bristol, R. I., went on strike for better conditions.

In 1866 the first National Labor Congress was held at Baltimore on August 20. This body met annually in different cities for several years thereafter.

It is believed that amalgamation of the Building Laborers' Protective Union and the Building Laborers' and Hodcarriers' International Union will be effected.

Twenty years ago plumbers in New York City received $3.50 a day and worked fifty-three hours a week. Now they get $4.75 and work forty-four hours a week.

An Awful Husband.

When a young couple were being married at the registrar's office on West Monday, the bride, instead of repeating the usual formula, said, "I take this man to be my awful husband," and the registrar, pointing out her mistake, made her repeat the correct words. Another bride refused to leave her house because the carriage that came to take her to the church was drawn by only one horse. The coachman was sent back to get the pair which had been ordered, but this caused such delay that when the church was finally reached it was three minutes after the statutory time, and the ceremony had to be postponed till the next day.—London Mail.

"THE MARRYING SQUIRE."

Justice Geo. E. Law, of Brazil, Ind., Has Married 1400 Couples.

Justice Geo. E. Law, of Brazil, Ind., has fairly earned the title "The Marrying Squire," by which he is known far and wide, having already married some 1400 couples. Ten years ago he was Deputy County Treasurer. "At that time," said Justice Law, "I was suffering from an annoying kidney trouble. My back ached, my rest was broken at night, and the secretions of the kidney perceptions were too frequent and contained sediment. Three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills cured me in 1897, and for the past nine years I have been free from kidney complaint and backache."

The Original Porous Plaster.

It's Allcock's, first introduced to the people sixty years ago, and to-day undoubtedly has the largest sale of any external remedy—millions being sold annually throughout the whole civilized world. There have been imitations, to be sure, but never has there been one to even compare with Allcock's—the world's standard external remedy.

For a weak back, cold on the chest or any local pain, the result of taking cold or over-strain, there's nothing we know of to compare with this famous plaster.

Carry Your Sunshine With You.

"The cheerful man," says Dr. Hillis, "carries with him perpetually, in his presence and personality, an influence that acts upon others as summer warmth on the fields and forests. It wakes up and calls out the best that is in them. It makes them stronger, braver and happier.

"Such a man always makes a little spot of this world a lighter, brighter, warmer place for other people to live in. To meet him in the morning is to get inspiration which makes all the day's tasks and struggles easier. His hearty hand shake puts a thrill of new vigor into your veins. After talking with him a few minutes, you feel an exhilaration of spirits, a quickening of energy, a renewal of zest, an interest in living, and are ready for any duty or service.

"Great hearts there are among men. They carry a volume of manhood; their presence is sunshine; their coming changes our climate; they oil the bearings of life; their shadows always fall behind them; they make right living easy. Gladness are the happiness makers; they represent the best forces in civilization."

THEIR PERENNIAL SIN.

November is the month of fallen leaves and pneumonia. Over all the temperate regions the first frosty weather has passed and the five fiends of winter have appeared. As the vanguard of cardinal agents to combat the Temperate Zones, the effect of changing seasons is a question of the highest importance. When the weather begins to change from warm to cold, when cool nights succeed hot nights, when clear, cold days follow hot, sultry days, the human body must adjust itself to this changed condition or perish.

The perspiration incident to warm weather has been checked. This detains within the system poisonous materials which have heretofore found escape through the perspiration.

Most of the poisonous materials retained in the system by the checked perspiration find their way out of the body, if at all, through the kidneys. This throws upon the kidneys extra labor. They become charged and overloaded with the poisonous excretory materials. This has a tendency to inflame the kidneys, producing functional diseases of the kidneys and sometimes Bright's Disease.

Peruna acts upon the skin by stimulating the circuitory glands and ducts, thus preventing the detention of poisonous materials which should pass out. Peruna invigorates the kidneys and encourages them to fulfill their function in spite of the chills and discouragements of cold weather.

Peruna is a combination of well-tried harmless remedies that have stood the test of time. Many of these remedies have been used by doctors and by the people in Europe and America for a hundred years.

Peruna is a World-Renowned Remedy For Climatic Disease.

Peruna has been used by Dr. Hartman in his private practice for many years with notable results. Its efficacy has been proven by decades of use by thousands of people and has been substantiated over and over by many thousands of homes.

A LETTER AND ITS SEQUEL.

By PAUL MONTEVERDE.

The fire blazed and crackled in the grate, the crimson curtains were closely drawn, and, comfortably ensconced in the most inviting of easy-chairs, Judge Lindsey sat ruefully contemplating a huge pile of unopened letters that lay on the table before him.

Letters there were of all sorts and sizes—letters in big envelopes, business letters—from ladies, who, trusting in the well known liberality of the judge, ventured to appeal to him in behalf of some pet missionary society—from young ladies who had been robbed by cruel guardians—from young men in need of money to start themselves in business—all mingled in one shapeless mass, looming up sternly, as if to stare him out of countenance should he attempt to sink back in his luxurious chair and enjoy the dolce far niente, spoiling the flavor of his cigar, until with a peevish "pshaw!" he dashed it into the grate, then paused a moment, as if to summon resolution, and, plunging in his hand to the very bottom of the pile, drew forth a dainty little billet which he opened and forthwith began to read. It ran as follows:

"Judge Lindsey—This is strictly a business letter and confidential. But first, as we have no mutual acquaintance to perform the duty, I must introduce myself. I am twenty years of age, neither pretty nor clever, but I have a heart to appreciate honest integrity of character, as exemplified in yourself when you refused the bribe of Mr. Burnette, truly a fortune in itself, rather than sully your soul by assisting to defraud a widow of the inheritance willed to her by a beloved husband. And I am constrained to write this to tell you how much I admire, and even love—not the polished gentleman on whose escutcheon rests no stain—but him who in an age of unparalleled corruption, holds fast his integrity, unmoved by the clamor of friends or the promptings of interest.

"I was losing faith in all mankind. You have restored it, and I thank you. I implore you to believe that this is no impertinent jest, but that I am writing earnestly and from my heart.

"ALTHEA."

The event here recorded transpired soon after the trial of the famous Burnette will case, where the family of the deceased contested the will of their son, the parents protesting against allowing the whole property to revert to the young widow, on the ground that the deceased had died childless, together with the fact that the wife had brought no dower to her husband, Mrs. Burnette having been a poor girl at the time of her marriage.

Judge Lindsey had been the deceased millionaire's legal adviser in the management of his estate, and had assisted in framing the will, the event having occurred when the son, Henry Burnette, was in sound and vigorous health, some three years prior to his death. And it was the lawyer's intimate knowledge of his son's affairs that led the elder Mr. Burnette to appeal to him to take charge of the case, offering Judge Lindsey a heavy bribe in order to induce him to do so, and a share also in his son's estate, should he succeed in winning the case. But Judge Lindsey had rejected the bribe with scorn, and refused to act in direct opposition to the dictates of his own heart.

And it was this act in his life to which the writer referred in the extraordinary letter the judge now held in his hand. If some artist, engaged in a grand allegorical painting, and seeking for a personification of astonishment, could have transferred to canvas the expression of Judge Lindsey's face as he finished reading the dainty missive, his portrayal had indubitably been made. Was ever a bachelor of six-and-forty so addressed before?—and it was a lady—the perfumed paper and delicate chirography left no doubt of that—young, and fair, or she would not have denied it.

The heart of the dignified lawyer beat as rapidly as that of a maiden in her teens while he began to experience a curious glow in the region of that organ, and a tingling sensation in his veins as if the blood flowed freer and faster, when his eye accidentally fell upon one of those objectionable communications addressed to him in a masculine hand, and he awoke from his dream.

What had he to do with love—that mamby-pamby passion, fit only for beardless youths and romantic schoolgirls? Was he, a man of the world, to be disturbed by an anonymous letter? He would have none of it, and would thrust the whole thing from his mind. He would throw the letter into the grate—no, he would keep it as a curiosity; and so the dainty billet was locked in his desk, and the lawyer resumed his duties.

From this hour a marked change came over Judge Lindsey's whole life. Wherever he went, at home or abroad, a presence, invisible to all but himself, accompanied him; a fair, sunny face, with a rosy mouth, and starry blue eyes—he admired blue-eyed women—that peered into his at every turn. In his dreams he pursued a light figure mounted on a dashing steed, that flew before him like the wind, its rider ever looking smilingly back and tantalizing him by keeping just out of his reach.

Ridiculous infatuation! Yes, very; and we can only account for it on the supposition that even for the wisest of us there is a time to laugh, a time to weep, and a time to make fools of ourselves—and that Judge Lindsey's time had come.

He who had heretofore been careless about his dress, now surprised his tailor with an order for a fashionable suit of clothes; and instead of lighting his cigar, as was his custom—the crusty bachelor!—with invitations to Mrs. Jones' soiree dansante, and Mrs. Smith's ball, accepted them, was introduced to various young ladies of all sizes and complexions, took them into supper, plunged boldly into the melee of the table to secure them creams and chicken salad, till the report actually gained credence that Judge Lindsey had become one of the first "ladies' men" in the city; whereas, if the truth must be told, he was only searching for that foolish little Althea.

The winter passed; still he had not found the ideal of his dreams. But he was not disheartened, as one might naturally have supposed; on the contrary, as the weeks passed, he grew more hopeful and sanguine in his belief that at some unexpected moment he should meet the one whose letter had made so deep an impression on his mind. And so it proved, for on a bright afternoon in May, when sauntering in the park, his attention was suddenly arrested by the appearance of two ladies walking in front of him. From her tall form and stately bearing he recognized in the elder lady a former friend. But it was upon the graceful, petite form of the one beside her that his gaze became riveted, and, prompted by some sudden impulse, he hastened his steps and was soon quite near them. And here one of the ladies accidentally dropped her pocket handkerchief, when a sudden puff of wind sent it fluttering almost at Judge Lindsey's feet.

Both ladies halted, evidently intent on securing the prize.

"Permit me, madam," said Judge Lindsey, instantaneously stooping and picking it up.

But on lifting it daintily in his fingers, what was his astonishment on beholding in a corner of the delicate cambric the talismanic name, Althea!

And here—introduced to him as Miss Westbrook—stood his ideal with blue, haunting eyes, rosy mouth, snowy cheek, just tinged with a faint blush, with sloping shoulders, arching neck and queenly air—all as he had dreamed.

As these thoughts passed through his brain with the rapidity of lightning, he glanced up in time to witness the sudden start, the deep blush, the half-repressed exclamation at the utterance of his name, and assurance became doubly sure.

Presently, under pretense of examining some plant or shrub, he drew the elder lady a little one side and, in a low tone, said:

"Mrs. Van Dorn, I am most anxious to extend my acquaintance with your cousin, Miss Westbrook, and can you manage it for me without her knowledge of the fact?"

"Nothing is easier," she began.

"Mrs. Van Dorn, you are an angel," he interrupted, eagerly.

"No doubt," said the lady, with a light laugh. "But as I was about to remark, if you will take a seat in my carriage I will invite you to dine with us."

And so it was settled.

"Charming! exquisite!" burst from the lips of her enraptured auditor.

"Is it not?" she said, simply. "When I play that I always fancy myself in some dim forest, and I think I hear the wind sighing amid the pines, and the birds calling from their green recesses."

"Miss Westbrook," he returned, gently, "I know not which most to praise, your admirable genius, or——"

"Pray don't compliment me—I do not deserve praise; music for me is a pleasure, a recreation, a delight."

"If this lovely, artless child be not Althea," he said to himself, "I do not care to find her."

The following afternoon saw him again in the Van Dorn mansion. He had given no card, but inquired simply for Miss Althea, who, as she recognized him on entering, became deadly pale, and trembled so violently that it was with evident difficulty she reached a sofa.

"Miss Westbrook," commenced the judge, who, while pitying her agitation, yet welcomed it as an omen of success—"Miss Westbrook, I have an important question to ask you—but first, I have a little story to tell. Some months ago I received a letter from a young lady, who signed her named Althea. Shall I repeat it?"

"No! no!" she said, putting out her fair hand as if to ward off a blow. "I was mad, mad, to do so unwomanly an act. Oh, how you must despise me!"

"Despise you, my dear child? I have no other sentiment for you than love and admiration," said Judge Lindsey, impressively. "For years I had closed my heart against all affection, but your letter, so naive, so imprudently and innocently frank, thrilled through my being like a ray of sunshine. And since the hour I received it, your fancied image has continually haunted me, for, try as I would, I could not banish you from my thoughts. If I have loved you not knowing you, how much deeper is my affection now that I have seen you! And if you could return my love, I should consider that there was nothing further in this life worth asking for. Dear Althea, can you bid me hope?" he added, with an inexplicable quiver in his voice.

Althea did not speak; indeed, she could not, but she lifted her eyes to his, and smiling through her tears, extended her fair hand. And Judge Lindsey, completely mastered by the outrush of tenderness at the sudden thought that this sweet young girl really loved him, actually folded his arms about her protectingly, and kissed away the two large tears resting on her cheeks.

Althea was not angry, but she drew back a little in timid happiness, and he could now sit beside her and speak less constrainedly.

In half an hour he left the house an engaged man, his soul not his own, but in the keeping of the fair young girl, to whom he had bound himself.—New York Weekly.

Mrs. Dodge was visiting the farm some time later, and, happening to think of her namesake, she said: "By the way, Frank, how does little Mary Mapes Dodge get along?"

"The funny thing about little Mary Mapes Dodge," said he, "is that she turns out to be a Thomas Bailey Aldrich."—Everybody's.

Profit From the Smoke Nuisance.

In Brussels, Malines, and other Belgian towns a novel method of not only getting rid of smoke, but turning it to good account, has recently been employed. The smoke is driven by a ventilating fan into a filter filled with porous material, over which a continuous stream of petroleum, benzine, alcohol or some liquid hydrocarbon flows. The result is that the smoke is entirely suppressed, while the filter yields a gas of great heating power, which can be used for domestic purposes and for driving gas engines. The filtering material itself also becomes a good combustible during the process.

A POINT RIP PILOT.

By GEORGE STORY HODSON.

"It bids fair to be a middlin' fish day. don't it, Cap'n Joel?" shouted young William Mayhew, as their dories ranged together in the narrow channel.

"Tol'ble." Joel cleared his throat nervously, with never an upward glance at his neighbor. Their courses diverged. Mayhew pulled strongly round the point and down the beach toward his fish net, while Joel Bunker pointed his old craft straight into the offing toward the rising sun.

Both were Point Rip pilots. They lived among the scrub oaks just back from the line of sand in the cove. Joel, veteran in the service, held a record of many a hard fought battle with the blinding storms of winter. Mayhew had but recently secured a license to bring deep draft vessels into port.

The advancing age was Joel's handicap. His worn out muscles twitched, and a vigil afloat was no longer play. But in his refusal to quit the calling the old man plodded on and did his best he could.

This morning Joel had planned a master stroke. The schooner Eva May was bound in from Nova Scotia with a cargo of lumber. She was last reported near the headlands.

To the old man hoped to board the vessel before local pilots could intercept her, and so prove to his comrade that he was a bit more clever than the smartest of them all.

Even with an occasional smile and a half suppressed chuckle he urged the dory into the offing. Cold and forbidding, the sea surged through the gloom. Joel saw no vessel, and continued rowing till in the strengthening light the view up and down the coast was unobstructed.

Then, to occupy the time while waiting he followed the custom among Point Rip pilots, and prepared to set his trawl.

"Whoa, girl!" he called to the dory, that reared on the rushing waves. He threw the buoy keg overboard and ran out the 300 feet or more of warp to which at intervals of a fathom were knotted short, stout lines, each armed with large, freshly tinned hooks.

The job finished, Joel made the warp fast to the rear end of the warp and settled down for a rest. But the veteran pilot did not relax watchfulness while the fish were biting.

"I'll show you a thing or two, my boy," he said, with emphatic nod, the remark being directed at Mayhew, now far away inshore.

The sun had rolled up clear of the ocean, its rays gilding a bank of golden vapor that presaged fog and increasing wind.

"She'll come boomin' for the Rip in the weather thicker'n mud," was Joel's muttured comment as he scanned the horizon and noted the unfavorable signs.

Suddenly the old man bent sharply forward and half rose, a hollowed hand shading his eyes. A faint, ashy line had sprung into view as by magic and leaned against the cloud. "She's coming! I make out her topsails!" Joel cried.

He hurried feverishly to gather up the trawl so as to be able to set sail ahead off the vessel. Foot by foot the dripping gear responded to his haste and haul. But Mayhew had noticed the vessel and was under way. Joel was two miles nearer the danger, and Mayhew knew it meant many minutes of hard sailing to force the buoyant dory into the eye of a rising wind and jumping sea.

The cod that had swallowed Joel's bait hundered and threshed over the rail. The old man did not even pause to knock off the fish, but cast them into the already tangled trawl that littered the craft in an ever growing mass.

The schooner now swung full against the wavering sky line, her black sides and deckload gleaming gayly in the sunshine. Joel, his face contorted with exertion, presently had overrun the trawl. He clambered with unsteady motion over the swarming fish and stepped the mast. He tried to set his pilot's flag at the head of the slender spar. A vicious puff of wind whipped the square of bunting round and round the mast, where it hung, a tiny wad of color.

Beseeching on tiptoe to clear the rigging Joel stumbled. Breathlessly he grabbed at a frayed halyard end that was hanging out toward him. He strove to find a foothold on the gunwale. Under his weight the dory shivered and reeled till water poured in torrents over its side.

Joel shot backward ten feet under the breaking wave. "Bill! Bill Mayhew!" he cried.

The mere wisp of sound died to a whistle as the sea closed over his head.

The old pilot threshed his way up toward the indistinct shadow of the dory. The trawl, thrown out in the confusion, swathed him in a quickly settling mass. Fish he had caught only a few minutes before pushed into his face, and Joel, in desperation, tore them off with sweeping blows.

The ill-fated dory, brimming to the gunwales, heavy in the water, followed just out of Joel's reach. The wooden sail and oars, held captive by a lanyard, drifted with the ebb.

William Mayhew's boat was speeding toward the schooner. Joel saw his rival as a comber flung him up and forward, and knew no aid could reach him from that direction. He must strike out and work his own salvation.

Quick as a flash a cross sea sank the trawl hooks into Joel's legs and body. The barbs tore and cut, and he could not escape the lacerating points. Setting his thin lips tight, the poor fellow tried to swim and tow the deadly trawl to the side of the dory. Choking and goaded by wounds that seemed to open wider with each new struggle to escape, Joel saw the boat was drifting faster than he swam. He faltered at the mocking sight. But presently he rallied and again toiled on.

Something rasped against his face. It was the warp, and putting a feeble strain upon the line he brought it to the surface. The effort sent him under, and he was sinking when the warp resisted. Hope came to him. With new vigor he regained the surface, despite the weight of gear that bore him down. The warp passed over the side of the dory and out of sight.

Joe hauled against the buoy he knew must be wedged in the dory. Frequent were his breathless pauses, yet he persevered.

With a favoring sea he thrust out a trembling hand, and the fingers hooked themselves across the oaken rail and clutched it.

Joel was still facing deadly peril, for the heavy waves sent his body crashing painfully against the planking. A chill of wind in the sufferer's face recalled him to further effort, feeble though it was. He pressed one elbow, then the other, over the sharp rail, but was too utterly exhausted to lift the hampering gear.

A fish knife quivered in its sheath behind a seat as he fumbled its handle. He had not strength to wrench it free. Then Joel's head fell upon an arm. His fingers straightened as a vicious sea tore him bodily from the meager support.

The sudden, violent motion of the wave imparted a jerking to the mast, and released the tangled flag that snapped its full breadth noisily in the wind.

The lookout on the schooner saw the signal the instant it appeared. Until then they had given the dory but passing notice, thinking she was engaged in fishing, and was low in the water owing to a heavy catch. But the flag told another story, and glasses trained on the dory revealed the true situation in all its peril.

With rattling rigging and slatting canvas the schooner luffed sharply and bore up in a smother of foam. Joel, head thrown back, with open mouth and upturned eyes, was in desperate straits.

"We'll save you!" came a hoarse bellow from the deck of the vessel, but the old man never heard. Davits clanked and tackles whirred; the yawl boat dropped with a tremendous splash. Men slid down the falls like insects. Two to an oar, they rowed furiously.

"Looks like he's done for keeps," said a sailor, as they lifted Joel to the deck of the schooner and hauled in the trawl.

But Joel soon rallied under the heroic treatment the heavy handed sailors applied. He raised himself a little and looked about. His eyes caught a glimpse of the heap of trawl. The sight sent a shudder through his frame.

"Where be I?" he whispered, like one roused from a fearful dream.

"Aboard the Eva May, Bob Meek, master, bound in with lumber. And who be you?" It was a white haired man, seemingly in authority, who spoke.

"Joel Bunker, Point Rip pilot, sir, swamped while tryin' to board ye," murmured Joel.

"What's the course to the bell buoy?" briskly asked the captain. "I'm hurryin' to work the rising tide up river. Can you take us in?"

They lifted Joel to the quarter-bitts and placed a coil of rope at his back. The crew jumped to sheets and halyards to point the vessel on the course he gave. So brave old Joel, suffering, yet gradually mending, was happy. Into port he carried his prize and safely docked her.

William Mayhew reluctantly gave up the chase in astonishment at the Eva May's strange tactics. He knew nothing of the accident till he had returned to Point Rip cove from his fish net down the beach.—Youth's Companion.

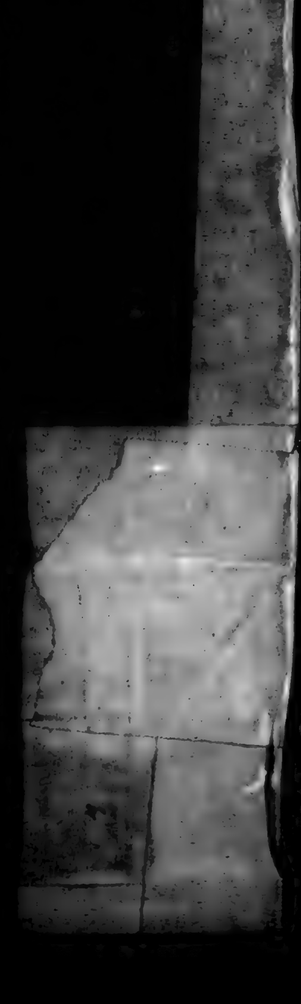
WINE OF CARDUI



A Story of Thanksgiving Time

It always made Ben feel solemn to watch the river in a storm. To-day it was gray and rough and noisy, and the few boats which went down toward Lake Huron pitched about so that their decks slanted first one way, then another, and their sides were coated with ice.

"Gran'ma, what day's to-day?" he asked at last, turning from the stormy river to glance about their warm, comfortable little room.

"Wednesday, Benny," answered the small old woman who crouched over the stove.

"Then to-morrow will be Thanksgiving day, and the Rosses are going to have a turkey," said Ben, excitedly. "What are we going to have, gran'ma?"

Mrs. Moron looked over her glasses at her grandson's small, thin figure, in its patched and faded clothes, and at his bright, eager face.

"Benny, dear, what do you think gran'ma has for Thanksgiving?" she asked, gently.

The expectant look faded from Ben's face, and he winked hard to keep the tears from running over. He did not need to be told how bare of dainties their cupboard was, for everything there he had brought with his own hands. Bacon and smoked fish enough for all winter were stored away; flour, potatoes, and a few other vegetables were there.

dry bread, pale fishing grubs, and put the mixture in the pot.

"Your father shall make the best turkey stuffing he ever ate," she said, with satisfaction. "We'll see how it comes out, Benny."

"I can't hardly wait till dinner-time," Ben said, with an excited skip. "I b'lieve I'll go down to the beach and pick up driftwood for a while. You call me when the things are most cooked, gran'ma."

The storm of the day before had left many a bit of board or end of a log on the beach that would be just the thing for Mrs. Moron's stove. Ben worked so hard that he did not notice a big barge that was coming slowly down the river, towing two other boats behind it, until he heard a voice ask:

"Hullo, kid! What makes you work so hard on Thanksgiving day?"

Then he straightened up, to see the boat's captain standing near its pilot-house, and shouting through a great trumpet.

"I'm waiting for dinner to cook," Ben answered in his piping voice.

"Can't hear you!" roared the captain. "Run home and get your horn and talk to me."

Ben ran up the little hill to Mrs. Ross' and borrowed her trumpet, or megaphone. One's voice sounds much louder when these are used, and they are to be found at every

"No, sir!" Ben's voice was shrill, but clear. "My father had mince

O'er home and field.

"Tell me about a real Thanksgiving dinner," the small boy begged, after the first disappointment had been bravely put away. Mrs. Moron took off her spectacles, and leaned back cautiously in her broken-rocking chair.

"I remember one Thanksgiving, when your pa was alive, we had a dinner fit for a king. There was a ten-pound turkey, with bread stuffing. I put the sage and onions into the stuffing with my own hands—"

"We could have some stuffing," interrupted Ben, eagerly.

"So we could, sonny, so we could. It takes you to think of things," and Mrs. Moron affectionately patted the little brown head on her knee. "It never would 'a' come to me that we might have turkey stuffing ever if we didn't have any turkey."

Ben beamed with delight at this praise. "And was there anything else besides the turkey and the stuffing, gran'ma?"

"Land, yes, child. There was turnips, and mashed potatoes, and mince pie, and your pa got two pounds of grapes, though grapes was expensive at that time o' year. Yes, nobody could ask for a better dinner than that was."

"We could have one just like it, all but the turkey and the mince pie and the grapes," said Ben, hopefully.

"So we can, and will, too, child," answered the old woman. "Trust you for making the best of things," as the two smiled at each other happily.

Next morning Ben watched his grandmother add an egg, some sage and chopped onion to a bowlful of house on the shores of the St. Mary's, for the people on the boats and those on the land often want to say "How do you do?" to each other. It was all Ben could do to hold the great tin trumpet out straight, for it was nearly as long as he was.

"I'm waiting for dinner to cook!" the boy shouted again, and this time the captain heard him.

"Going to have turkey, I suppose?" the captain asked.

"No, but we're going to have turkey stuffing," answered Ben, with pride.

"WHEN THE PEACH IS ON THE PUMPKIN AND THE CORN IS IN THE SHOCK."

pie for Thanksgiving dinner once, though."

"Did, did he?" The captain dropped his trumpet again. "That boy's all right," he said to the first mate. "He's too plucky to be laughed at. I'm going to send him some turkey for his stuffing, Morgan. Tell the cook to get ready half a turkey and a mince pie, and say, Morgan, have him send up one of those small baskets of grapes. We'll tie them to a piece of plank, and they'll float ashore all right. Tell the cook to hurry, or we'll be too far down-stream for the boy to get the things." Then he raised his trumpet again.

"Say, kid, can you row that boat that's tied to your dock?"

"Yes, sir!"

"Well, you hurry out into the river, and I'll put off a float with some things for your Thanksgiving dinner. You're going to have some turkey for that stuffing."

You may be sure Ben lost no time in pushing the rowboat off into the stream, where the end of a plank and its delicious load were soon bobbing up and down on the water. How he did smack his lips when he lifted them into the boat, and how pleased he was for grandma!

"First the stuffing, and then the turkey! My, ain't I lucky?" Nip did not know that the captain had said he was plucky, and that luck is very apt to follow pluck.—Katharine Grace Hulbert, in Youth's Companion.

We thank Thee, O Father, for all that is bright—
The gleam of the day and the stars of the night;
The flowers of our youth and the fruits of our prime,
And blessings that march down the pathway of time.

We thank Thee, O Father, for all that is drear—
The sob of the tempest, the flow of the tear;
For never in blindness, and never in vain,
Thy mercy permitted a sorrow or pain.

We thank Thee, O Father, for song and for feast—
The harvest that glowed, and the wealth that increased;
For never a blessing encompassed earth's child
But Thou in Thy mercy looked downward and smiled.

We thank Thee, O Father of all, for the power
Of aiding each other in life's darkest hour;
The generous heart, and the bountiful hand,

The Woman's Festival.

Thanksgiving is woman's high festival of all the year. On this day men and women gather in churches especially to thank God for happy homes and the continuation of plenty. The mother and wife is the queen of the day. It is the work of her hands that crowns the feast. For weeks she has labored for this day. This is the grand occasion of the year for the display of her housewifely skill. This is the day when her children and grandchildren gather from afar to testify their love and loyalty to the old home and the queen and priestess of that home.

However far our children have wandered, their thoughts turn home on this day if their visible presence cannot be with us. When only the stars of heaven have been over their heads and the glow worm in the grass a lamp to light their footsteps, the remembrance of the lights of their old home has followed them and been a spiritual lamp and guide. The remembrance of a mother's voice, as she repeated the simple evening prayer of their childhood, has drawn her sons and daughters from luxury and the dangerous pleasures of the world. The hand of the mother who guided his trembling footsteps in babyhood still guards and guides many a strong man and keeps him true to his better nature, though that mother has long since passed from her earthly work.

Let There Be No Hurry.

That there should be no hurry at the Thanksgiving dinner goes without saying. For once one must, at least, there ought to be respite from the usual contriving thought of a train to catch, an engagement to keep or "a man to meet."

A Turkey for the Stuffing—

A THANKSGIVING DAY STORY

It always made Ben feel solemn to watch the river in a storm. To-day it was gray and rough and noisy, and the few boats which went down toward Lake Huron pitched about so that their decks slanted first one way, then another, and their sides were coated with ice.

"Gran'ma, what day's to-day?" he asked at last, turning from the stormy river to glance about their warm, comfortable little room.

"Wednesday, Benny," answered the small old woman who crouched over the stove.

"Then to-morrow will be Thanksgiving day, and the Rosses are going to have a turkey," said Ben, excitedly. "What are we going to have, gran'ma?"

Mrs. Moxon looked over her glasses at her grandson's small, thin figure, in its patched and faded clothes, and at its bright, eager face.

"Sonny, dear, what do you think gran'ma has for Thanksgiving?" she asked, gently.

The excitement took flight from Ben's face, and he winked hard to keep the tears from running over. He did not need to be told how bare of dainties the cupboard was, for everything he ate he had brought with his own hands. Bacon and smoked fish enough for the winter were stored away; some potatoes, and a few other vegetables were there.

"Gran'ma, what do you have for Thanksgiving?" he repeated, in a voice that trembled.

"Why, child, I've got a fine piece of pork, and some potatoes and onions, and I'll make a pot pie," she said, cheerfully.

"Is that all?" Ben asked, in a disappointed tone.

"Why, yes, child. There was turnips, and mashed potatoes, and mince pie, and your pa got two pounds of grapes, though grapes was expensive at that time o' year. Yes, nobody could ask for a better dinner than that was."

"We could have one just like it, all but the turkey and the mince pie and the grapes," said Ben, hopefully.

"So we can, and will, too, child," answered the old woman. "Trust you for making the best of things," and the two smiled at each other happily.

Next morning Ben watched his grandmother add an egg, some sage and chopped onion to a bowlful of dry bread, pour boiling water over, and put the mixture in the oven.

"Your father said I made the best turkey stuffing he ever ate," she said, with satisfaction. "We'll see how it comes out, Benny."

"I can't hardly wait till dinner-time," Ben said, with an excited skip. "I b'lieve I'll go down to the beach and pick up driftwood for a while. You call me when the things are 'most cooked, gran'ma."

The storm of the day before had left many a bit of board or end of a log on the beach that would be just the thing for Mrs. Moxon's stove. Ben worked so hard that he did not notice a big barge that was coming slowly down the river, towing two other boats behind it, until he heard a voice ask:

"Hullo, kid! What makes you work so hard on Thanksgiving day?"

Then he straightened up, to see the boat's captain standing near its pilot-house, and shouting through a great trumpet.

"I'm waiting for dinner to cook," Ben answered in his piping voice.

"Can't hear you!" roared the captain. "Run home and get your horn and talk to me."

Ben ran up the little hill to Mrs. Ross' and borrowed her trumpet, or megaphone. One's voice sounds much louder when these are used, and they are to be found at every house on the shores of the St. Mary's, for the people on the boats and those on the land often want to say "How do you do?" to each other. It was all Ben could do to hold the great tin trumpet out straight, for it was nearly as long as he was.

"I'm waiting for dinner to cook!" the boy shouted again, and this time the captain heard him.

"Going to have turkey, I suppose?" the captain asked.

"No, but we're going to have turkey stuffing," answered Ben, with pride.

"Turkey stuffing, but no turkey—If that isn't the best I ever heard!" The captain had dropped his trumpet, and doubled up with sudden laughter. Luckily, Ben did not hear. "What else you going to have?" he called, when he had repeated the joke to those about him. "Mince pie without any mincemeat?"

"No, sir!" Ben's voice was shrill, but clear. "My father had mince pie for Thanksgiving dinner once, though."

"Did, did he?" The captain dropped his trumpet again. "That boy's all right," he said to the first mate. "He's too plucky to be laughed at. I'm going to send him some turkey for his stuffing, Morgan. Tell the cook to get ready half a turkey and a mince pie, and say, Morgan, have him send up one of those small baskets of grapes. We'll tie them to a piece of plank, and they'll float ashore all right. Tell the cook to hurry, or we'll be too far down-stream for the boy to get the things." Then he raised his trumpet again.

"Say, kid, can you row that boat that's tied to your dock?"

"Yes, sir!"

"Well, you hurry out into the river, and I'll put off a float with some things for your Thanksgiving dinner. You're going to have some turkey for that stuffing."

You may be sure Ben lost no time in pushing the rowboat off into the stream, where the end of a plank and its delicious load were soon bobbing up and down on the water. How he did smack his lips when he lifted them into the boat, and how pleased he was for grandma!

"Tell me about a real Thanksgiving dinner," the small one begged, after the first disappointment had been bravely put away. Mrs. Moxon took off her spectacles, and leaned back comfortably in her broken-rocker chair.

"I remember one Thanksgiving, when your pa was alive, we had a dinner fit for a king. There was a ten-pound turkey, with bread stuffing. I put the sage and onions into the stuffing with my own hands—"

THANKSGIVING

Whence comes this song of Harvest cheer,
This hymn of praise unto the sky;
So strong, that all the world may hear
It rise on high?

'Tis grateful people thanking Him
Whose hand hath led their steps aright
A faithful Guide, however dim
And dark the night.

What is the song of praise they sing,
In which the people all take part;
So full that in its strength they bring
A nation's heart?

'Tis the Thanksgiving Harvest prayer
Of gratitude for ample yield,
For tender love and watchful care
O'er home and field.

PRESIDENT RETURNS HOME

Panama Canal the Subject of a Special Message.

The Work, Porto Rico, and the Navy Are Commended—The Washington Crippled on the Trip.

Washington, D. C.—President Roosevelt returned to Washington after a tour that included Panama and Porto Rico. The trip up the Potomac on the converted yacht Mayflower, to which he and his party were transferred from the Louisiana at Piney Point, was made without special incident. As the Mayflower pulled into the dock at the rear of the office of the commandant of the Navy Yard, Miss Ethel Roosevelt, the President's daughter, and Miss Wagner, Mrs. Roosevelt's secretary, were awaiting to greet the party.

Speaking of his trip the President said:

"We had a very pleasant, very enjoyable time, and I am deeply impressed with the United States Navy, with Panama, and with Porto Rico."

The Panama Canal, it was said by the President, will be a subject of a special message to Congress.

The Louisiana, on which the President traveled, passed in by the Virginia Capes in the morning, followed by the Tennessee. The wireless station at Cape Henry was advised that the engine of the Washington had been disabled, and that she would not reach the Capes until the afternoon.

Captain Adams, commanding the Washington, announced later that he was compelled to stop the starboard engine of his ship because of hot brasses.

An unfortunate incident occurred in the lower Potomac in connection with the President's trip up the river. The yacht Oneida, in the service of the District of Columbia naval militia, and on which were the commanding officers and others of the militia, had dropped down the Potomac to Piney Point to welcome the President and was returning when a gasoline boat in tow capsized. Melvin Cleveland, nineteen years old, of this city, boatswain's mate, was drowned.

CRAPSEY QUITS CHURCH.

Rector Convicted of Heresy Asks Dismissal From Ministry.

Rochester, N. Y.—In view of his conviction of heresy and failure of his appeal, Rev. Dr. Algernon S. Crapsey, rector of St. Andrew's Church, this city, sent to Bishop Walker a letter requesting dismissal from the Protestant Episcopal ministry. Dr. Crapsey, in his letter, stands staunchly by the beliefs for which he has been deemed heretical and announces his determination to preach them to the world-at-large with the ultimate hope of winning the support of the public conscience.

Although he makes no direct assertion as to the means he intends to employ in propagating his so-called heretical ideas, Dr. Crapsey's assertion tends to lend color to the report that he has been offered and will accept the pastorate of a large church of another than the Episcopal denomination in New York City.

COMMANDER LOST OVERBOARD.

Lieutenant Garrett, in Charge of the U. S. S. Albatross, Perishes at Sea.

Honolulu, Hawaii. — Lieutenant-Commander Leroy H. Garrett, commander of the United States steamship Albatross, was washed overboard from the ship while the vessel was 500 miles northwest of Honolulu.

After Lieutenant-Commander Garrett had been lost overboard the Albatross stood by all night playing her powerful searchlight across the water in the neighborhood of the spot where the tragedy occurred.

At daylight the search was abandoned and the steamship proceeded on her course with the first officer in command.

Lieutenant-Commander Garrett was a native of New York, and his mother is a resident of Plattsburg.

MILLION DOLLARS FOR CHARITY

Daniel B. Shipman Leaves Bulk of Fortune to Public Uses.

Chicago. — Bequests aggregating more than $1,000,000 are to be distributed to charity by the will of Daniel B. Shipman, the paint manufacturer, who died unattended by a single relative.

Chicago charitable institutions will get nearly all the money. Mr. Shipman's only near relative, a sister, Mrs. Olive J. Cone, was in Connecticut too feeble to attempt the journey to his bedside. She is about the same age as Mr. Shipman, eighty-six. The sister has been provided for, and except a few minor bequests the estate will go to charity.

WOMAN SHOOTS DIPLOMAT.

Former French Finance Minister is Wounded—Boulevard Incident.

Paris, France. — M. Merlou, formerly Minister of Finance and now Minister to Chile, was shot with a revolver on the Boulevard des Italiens by Mme. Dallemagne, a former friend of his. She fired four shots at him, only one of which hit him, resulting in a wound in the thigh.

The woman was arrested. She assaulted M. Merlou publicly last year.

BIG CROP GAIN SHOWN BY SECRETARY WILSON

CEREAL VALUES FALL OFF

Need of Local Meat Inspection is Urged—Agricultural Explorers Find Valuable New Plants—Some Records Broken.

Washington, D. C.—The tenth annual report of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson was presented to President Roosevelt. It describes the measures to enforce the new meat inspection and pure food laws, and contains a detailed description of current crop and live stock conditions. The new form of spelling is used in the report, such terms occurring as "drest poultry," "thro," "altho," "past by Congress," "dropt," "thru," and "lookt."

The laws made by Congress at its last session, Secretary Wilson says, have required and received special attention. The meat law is being enforced and inspection is now made in over a thousand houses. Not less than thirteen hundred experts have been added to the inspection force.

The economic revolution in the art and science of agriculture continued during 1906, Secretary Wilson continues, with tremendous results on the National prosperity. The value of crops continues to rush forward beyond comprehension, and crops are straining the freight-carrying ability of the railroads.

Taken at that point in production at which they acquire commercial value, the farm products of the year have a farm value of $6,794,000,000. This is $485,000,000 above the value of 1905, $635,000,000 above that of 1904, $877,000,000 above that of 1903, and $2,077,000,000 above the census of 1899.

While the value of all cereals "dropt" about $40,000,000 below the total of 1905, and about $12,000,000 below the total of 1904, the number of bushels for 1906, which was 4,688,000,000, was 120,000,000 bushels above the yield of 1905, 570,000,000 above the yield of 1904 and 835,000,000 bushels above the yield of 1903.

Corn remains by far the most valuable crop, estimated at $1,100,000,000. Next comes the cotton crop, which, including seed, should be worth to the growers nearly $640,000,000. The value of hay, which is third in order, approaches $600,000,000. Wheat may be worth $450,000,000; oats $300,000,000, potatoes $150,000,000.

Barley, with a value of $65,000,000, shows a gain of twenty-one per cent. in production in the past seven years. The tobacco crop will be worth about $55,000,000. A remarkable development is that of the sugar beet, now the ninth crop in value. The production in 1906 is placed at 345,000 long tons, valued at $34,000,000. The value of all kinds of sugar and molasses aggregates $75,000,000.

Passing to the Bureau of Animal Industry, Secretary Wilson says the Federal meat inspection was conducted at 163 establishments in fifty-eight cities, and 42,901,284 animals were inspected at the time of slaughter. This represents the greatest amount of work done in any one year since the inspection was inaugurated in 1891.

Of the animals inspected 158,953 carcasses and 126,159 parts of carcasses were condemned for disease or other cause. The total cost of the meat inspection, including the microscopic inspection of pork for export, was $852,561.70. The Secretary, however, urges the need of local inspection.

The farm still overshadows the mill, the factory and the workshop in providing exports, and with his surplus beyond the nation's need the farmer has loaded the fleets of oceans. For the fiscal year ended June 30, 1906, this surplus has been exported to the value of nine hundred and seventy-six millions, the largest amount ever reached by agricultural exports for this or any other country and exceeding the export value of 1901, previously the record year.

Five thousand seven hundred and forty-nine samples of imported food products were examined in the fiscal year. Of the 1246 samples which were found not to comply with the law, 531 were released without prejudice, because it was evident that no intent to defraud existed; 577 were admitted, after being relabeled so as to comply with the provisions of the law; 138 invoices were required to be reshipped beyond the jurisdiction of the United States.

The effect of the food-inspection law on foreign commerce has been salutary, the report says. In many cases food products which were formerly very generally misbranded are now found to be almost universally free of suspicion.

The search by agricultural explorers in foreign lands for new crops has been continued. A trained man has spent the last year in the cultivated fields and wild mountains of North China and Manchuria searching for new plants and seeds worthy to be transplanted to this country and for wild forms of our cultivated fruits and vegetables which may have characters of hardiness or unusual vigor that will make them useful for the plant breeders of the United States.

Shipments of scions and of seeds representing hundreds of interesting things have been sent in, and are now growing in the trial gardens of the department. Among the things obtained are new hardy Pekin persimmon varieties, interesting varieties of the English walnut, the Chinese pistache, wild and cultivated apricots, the wild peach, from its supposed original home; hardy apples and edible-fruited hawthorns, millets and field beans, a lawn sedge that is promising, and a very remarkable lot of Chinese grape varieties, not to mention a most unusually interesting collection of ornamental trees and shrubs suited to the climate of the Eastern and Middle States.

FIFTY KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

Blowup in Roburite Factory Shakes Large Section of Germany.

Berlin. — Two terrific explosions shortly after 8 o'clock p. m., in a roburite factory between Witten and Annen, Westphalia, completely wrecked Annen. Every window was shattered as far as Dortmund, which is five miles from the factory, and the inhabitants fled in a panic.

It is officially stated that twenty-six persons were killed and fifty severely and one hundred slightly wounded. Crowds gathered at the scene of the disaster and some of the incidents were heartbreaking.

The official figures refer to the bodies recovered. The dead are put unofficially at fifty.

The second explosion killed or injured many of the onlookers, whom Chemical Manager Kunze had just assured there was no further danger. Kunze himself was blown to atoms. Bierman, the manager of a neighboring steel foundry, was killed. Director Franke of the roburite factory was severely injured. Owing to the explosion demolishing many houses and unroofing others, hundreds of persons are homeless. The impression prevails that the explosion was the work of a criminal.

JAPAN MUCH DISTURBED.

Consul General Miller Thinks She Might Fight on the California Issue.

San Francisco.—According to the statement of Harry B. Miller, United States Consul General at Yokohama, Japan is prepared to use her military and naval strength, if necessary, to fight the discrimination that has been made by the San Francisco Board of Education against Japanese who want to attend our schools with white children. Mr. Miller, who has been on a visit to his home in Eugene, Oregon, is here under orders from Washington to look into the difficulty prior to his return to Japan. He will meet the School Board.

"The Japanese are highly incensed over this affair," he said, "and to save the national dignity are willing to go to war. They feel that they are powerful in their military and naval departments, and open comment is made on the probability of a show of fight to compel the American people to cease discrimination against the Japanese."

THREE KILLED IN WRECK.

Italian Laborers Try to Take Vengeance For Deaths on Engineers.

New Haven, Conn.—Italian laborers attempted to mob the engineers of two work trains which collided in the cut here, when three of their number were killed and four seriously injured.

Both locomotive drivers fled, leaving their firemen and other train hands to care for the engines.

One train consisted of an engine, a flat car and a passenger coach in which seventy Italians were riding home from work on the tracks. This backed down into a gravel train moving in the opposite direction. When the foreigners saw their mangled comrades under the wreckage they drew knives, picked up pieces of wreckage and started for the engines. The engineers and firemen saw them coming and fled to the streets. A mistake in signals caused the collision.

BANDITS ESCAPE THE ROPE.

Jury Recommends Clemency For Alleged Train Robbers.

East Las Vegas, N. M.—James Black, John Black and John Murphy, who have been on trial for several days, charged with holding up a train at Logan, N. M., in July, 1904, were found guilty, but clemency was recommended. The robbery was committed by the three men, and the two Black boys and Murphy were captured in Oklahoma and returned here for trial. Two mistrials resulted.

The theory of the prosecution was that James Black, John Murphy and Tom Boswell, who was later shot in attempting to break jail, committed the robbery, and that John Black conspired with them.

Train robbery is a capital offense in New Mexico.

PRESIDENT SPENCER DIES IN RAILROAD WRECK

Head of the Southern and Three Guests Meet Death.

OPERATOR'S ERROR THE CAUSE

Rear End Collision on President's Own Line Claims Seven Victims—General Philip Schuyler, of New York, Perishes by Fire.

Lynchburg, Va.—Samuel Spencer, president of the Southern Railway, one of the foremost railroad men of the country and friend and associate of J. Pierpont Morgan for a score of years, was killed on his own railroad in a Thanksgiving Day horror that probably has never been equalled.

General Philip Schuyler, grandson of General Schuyler, of Revolutionary fame and grandnephew of Alexander Hamilton, who was accompanying President Spencer on a hunting trip to the latter's lodge at Friendship, N. C., also lost his life in the rear end collision, in which seven persons were killed and eleven seriously injured.

The seven lives were crushed out in the private car of President Spencer.

Mr. Spencer was killed instantly while he slept and his body was charred almost beyond recognition by the flames that consumed his car immediately after the collision.

The dead: President Samuel Spencer, New York City; General Philip Schuyler, New York City; Charles D. Fisher, Baltimore; Francis T. Redwood, Baltimore; D. W. Davis, of Alexandria, Va., private dispatcher to President Spencer; J. W. Shaw, colored, Spencer, N. C., fireman; badly crushed and both legs broken, died later in Lynchburg hospital.

An unknown person, whose head and limbs are burned off short, who is believed to be the third porter on the private car.

E. A. Merrill, Mr. Spencer's private secretary, was badly burned about the head and arms. Willis J. Winston, of No. 233 East 127th street, New York, suffered a broken leg. The other injured persons were negroes.

The accident, the worst that has occurred on the Southern road in many years and practically unparalleled in railway accident history in that it cost the life of the president of the road on which it occurred, seems to have been due to a mistake by the operator of the block signal at Rangoon, four miles north of the scene of the accident, in letting the second train through before his block was cleared. Mattox, the operator, disappeared.

H. B. Spencer, who is a vice-president of the Southern Railway, and the son of President Spencer, was a passenger on the northbound train from the South which reached the scene of the wreck soon after it occurred. He spent several hours there until the charred remains of his father were taken from under the locomotive and then he came to the city with them and those of the others of President Spencer's party.

Samuel Spencer was regarded as perhaps the biggest figure in the railroad and financial world that the South has ever produced. He was fifty-nine years old and in the height of his career. Mr. Spencer was born in Columbus, Ga., the son of Lambert and Vernona Spencer. His father was a prosperous storekeeper. As a mere youth he shouldered his father's musket and went to the front as a private in the Nelson Rangers, and independent company of Confederate cavalry, operating on scout duty. After serving for several months with the Nelson Rangers he joined General Forrest's cavalry troop and later served under General Hood in Atlanta and in the campaign about Nashville. At the close of the war young Spencer entered the University of Georgia, taking a civil engineering course. He married Miss Vivian Benning, of Georgia, in 1872. He is survived by his wife and three children—Henry B. Spencer, sixth vice-president and general manager of the Southern Railway; Vivian Spencer and Mrs. James T. Lang, Jr., wife of the vice-president of the Michigan Central.

The interests of the South were always prime considerations with Mr. Spencer, and he probably did as much as any other one man to promote the South's industrial development. He was regarded as one of the most democratic railroad presidents in America.

DIES TO SAVE FRIEND.

Girl Pushes Her From Harm to Be Herself Killed.

Creston, Ohio.—In saving the life of Miss Nettie McIntyre, a girl friend, from death by a fast Erie passenger train, Miss Nellie Carter, daughter of Judge Carter, was struck by the train and instantly killed. Miss McIntyre was uninjured.

The two young women, inseparable companions, went for a walk and on their return strolled along the railroad track to take a short cut to the Carter residence. They were so engrossed in conversation that they did not notice the approach of the passenger train behind them.

THE PULPIT

A SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. IRA W. HENDERSON, THE FAMOUS DIVINE.

Subject: The Message of Christ to Capital.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Speaking at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the theme, "The Message of Christ to Capital," the Rev. I. W. Henderson, pastor, took as his text Matthew 7:12, "Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." He said:

Labor and capital. The great correlated facts of the economic life of to-day, as throughout all ages they have been, are labor and capital. But though they are correlated, capital is of secondary importance. In a simple society labor is central. In a complex society labor and capital may with reason be allowed to possess an almost equal position of importance in the economic system. But no matter how influential and how powerful capital may become it can never usurp the central, primal, fundamental, ultimate position of labor in the economic affairs of man.

The economic tendency of to-day upon the side of capital is toward centralization, toward combination, toward concentration. With this tendency toward centralization we have the spectacle of immense corporations gifted with a chartered power at the hands of a sovereign people. And these corporations are engaged, many of them, in the exercise of this power in endeavors to control the output of the necessities of life; direct and govern the markets of the world, and dictate prices for the necessaries of life without due regard to fairness or to the universal laws, very largely, of supply and demand. There are good and there are evil results to be expected and to be found in the economic trend of our day.

The dangers of this economic tendency so far as capital is concerned are many fold; and the first danger is, that in the centralization of wealth and the increase of capital beyond the bounds of safety, we shall have two different and distinct classes in the social life of our land. The danger is, that, with a society in which there shall be, in effect, but two classes of men, we shall have a return, in an economic way, to the unhealthy conditions of the feudal regime. The danger is that, upon the one hand, we shall have the employer, on the other hand, the employe; on the one hand, the men of money and, on the other, the salaried. The danger is that, on the one hand, we shall have a class of independent wealthy men and, on the other, a mass of dependent retainers; on the one hand, the wealth holders and, on the other, the wage workers.

The second danger is from corporate concentration. By virtue of Governmental enactments a corporation, though composed of personalities, is itself an impersonality before the law. The sense of individual responsibility is lessened and men are released, by the law itself, from that lively sense of personal duty which is incumbent and felt upon the part of the individual man with a personal relation to the law and to trade. Men become the engineers of a huge mechanism. Humanity is lost in the machinery of commercial life.

Another danger of the economic tendency on the part of capital to-day is that, by virtue of its immense powers, it shall grow up as a State within a State. With the numberless and increasing ramifications and alliances of our larger corporations there has grown up an alarming situation. Take, for instance, the most noted corporation in the land. However valuable the public services of this corporation may have been; however important its contributions to society, as a leader in the march of trade, may be admitted to be; however much we may praise it for the many excellencies which it possesses, we cannot escape the fact that it stands to-day, as do many other corporations, as a danger to the public welfare and as a possible enemy to the common weal. The ramifications, the business alliances, the political coalitions of this one corporation are so diverse, so Nation wide, so stupendous as to be almost past belief. All this is wise from the standpoint of a pure commercial life. There is nothing inherently wrong in such a condition of affairs if the correlative power which it brings be exercised with an eye single toward the light of righteousness. But if ever this enormous influence and capacity for good or for ill should become vested in the hands of unscrupulous men the danger to our civil liberty would be very real. If, in the course of time, the power of such corporations should become the property of unjust and ungodly men, whose creed should be selfishness and whose commercial aim should be directed toward the satisfaction of unbridled self-interest, immediate and intense iniquity would, of sequence, result. The danger to these American people lies not in the strength of military force; not in an unselfish imperialism which strives for the amelioration of the peoples of the islands of the sea; but in the unholy use of dishonest power by immoral and conscienceless men of wealth. Then will be realized the prophecy of the State within the State. Then will come the test of capital, made arrogant with wealth, in the lists against the Governmental authority.

It does not necessarily follow, whatever may be our fears, that combination per se is evil. Combination is a natural and a logical result of the conditions under which we live. Anything, whatever its name, which lightens labor, enlarges efficiency, and increases the impetus of commercial life, is of value to humanity at large. Impersonality before the law is not in itself an unmitigated evil if so be the men who manage corporations do not forget humanity and God. Combinations and corporations are beneficial so long as they are good.

It also does not follow, necessarily, that the possession of great wealth is a crime. Wealth is a sin only when it is unrighteously acquired or inhumanly expended and used. The man who becomes rich in righteousness is an honor to the Commonwealth. The man who spends his substance in a decent way with due regard for the public good is a credit to the State. But bad men whose wealth is the result of malicious depredations upon the public, and whose moneys are expended in unclean ways, are public criminals and disgraces to humanity. It also does not follow necessarily that a system of corporate combination destroys individuality. It may destroy to some extent the money making capacity of the individual; but to destroy a man's ability to exercise his financial instinct is not to destroy the man. Individuality is not a matter so much of money as of mind, heart, and soul. And any system which permits men to enjoy a larger opportunity for the exercise of their intellectual, moral and spiritual capacities, and which enables humanity to realize in a larger fashion the fulness of human personality upon every side, must be valuable to mankind. Righteous combination will afford opportunity for all the faculties. The individualism of to-day is an insult, in the last analysis, to personalities who are made in the image of Almighty God. About all that it emphasizes is our capacity and desire to make money. And however valuable money may be and however much we may all need it, this is the eternal truth of God, that that system which emphasizes this side of man's nature almost to the stultifying of his mental, ethical and spiritual characteristics is a thing of sin.

The message of Christ to capital. And what is this gospel? If I understand the truth of God unto men of wealth as it has been revealed unto us in Jesus Christ our Lord, it is this, that money is a trust; that wealth is a talent; that the possession of extraordinary ability for financial success and commercial leadership is a gift of God compelling inescapable duties upon those so blessed and enforcing tremendous obligations. A man's money is to be used not unto the satisfaction of his selfish desires, but for the good of all. Men are not to be treated as slaves. They are not to be considered as machines. Bearing in mind the admonition of our Lord, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them," our men of financial and commercial prominence should remember that even the humblest man is a personality and not a mechanism; that even a laborer is a child of the living God. If there are any men who should have patience, forbearance, charity, loving kindness, tenderness, compassion with and for the men who toil, they are the men who in the providence of God are supremely endowed with the fulness and the fatness of the good things of life. It is the business, as, under God, it should be the happiness, of our men of means and of commercial prominence to study the comfort, to enhance the joy, to foster the education, to assist the moral and spiritual upliftment of the man who is working for a wage. Their delight it should be, as it is their duty, to lighten labor and to increase wages to the utmost limit that the economic conditions which are existent will allow. They should see that the toiler has free hours, sufficient and often enough not only for rest, but also for honest recreation. Men do not ask for alms, they simply desire a chance and an opportunity to do something more than exist—to live. In the darkest days of African bondage there were no worse, though there were different, conditions, than those which characterize the inhuman white slavery that is a feature of the economic system of to-day. Multitudes of men eke out but a bare and, at best, a miserable existence, as the fruit of honest, laborious and oftentime dangerous, toil; while those who pay their wages live in splendor, affluence, and, many times, in supercilious and arrogant indifference to the needs of men. The message of Christ to the man of wealth is a call for selfishness, self-sacrifice and honest philanthropy.

The great need of capital to-day is an instillation in its heart of the principles and the personality, of the character and the convictions of Jesus Christ. We cannot hope for a sound exercise of commercial authority; we cannot, wisely and sensibly, expect a true development of our commercial life without the presence of His truth as the guiding and controlling factor in the hearts and the minds and the souls of our men of wealth. Filled with the spirit of Christ they will love men; and loving men, we shall have no fear.

A Mistake Frequently Made.

Professor P. Brouardel in an address on the measures adopted by different nations for the prevention of consumption, calls attention to a mistake made in the different countries by ministers who have the charge of the financial department of the State. He says they like to calculate the sum the State gets from the duty on alcohol, but they should deduct from it the cost to the community of the family of the ruined drunkard, his degenerate, infirm, scrofulous and epileptic children, who must have shelter. This invasion of alcoholism ought to be regarded by everyone as a public danger, and this principle, the truth of which is incontestable, should be inculcated into the masses, that the future of the world will be in the hands of the temperate.

Response to Prayer.

There is no true prayer without some response. Invisible wires from heaven to earth are ever vibrating with divine blessings, and when prayer touches them the electric stream of love enters the soul.—Newman Hall.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 9.

Subject: Jesus on the Cross, Luke xxiii., 33-46—Golden Text, Luke xxiii., 34—Memory Verses, 42, 43—Commentary.

I. Jesus crucified (v. 33). 33. "When they were come." A great company of people and of women followed Jesus to the cross, who also bewailed and lamented Him. The three Marys were there: Mary, the mother of Jesus; Mary, the wife of Cleopas; and Mary Magdalene, with several other friends (v. 49). "Calvary." Calvary is the Latin, and Golgotha the Hebrew word with the same meaning. It is just outside the city of Jerusalem. "They crucified Him." His hands and feet were nailed to the cross (Luke 24:39, 40), and then it was lifted and sunk into the ground with a sudden shock producing great pain. "The malefactors." Two thieves were crucified with Jesus, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

II. The mocking crowd (vs. 34-37). 34. "Father, forgive them." There were seven sayings of Christ while on the cross. This, the first one, is a prayer for His murderers. "Parted His raiment." The four soldiers divided among themselves His outer robe, head-dress, girdle and sandals, but for His "coat," that is, His tunic or under garment, which was without seam and which would have been ruined if divided, they cast lots (John 19:23, 24). "Cast lots." See Psa. 22:18. What a picture! 35. "The people stood beholding." Vast crowds were in Jerusalem to attend the feast of the Passover. "The rulers." The dignitaries and members of the Sanhedrin. "Derided Him." The crowd mocked Him from 9 till 12 o'clock. The women were last at the cross and first at the grave. "Let Him save Himself." They thought that if Jesus were the Messiah, surely He could deliver Himself from the Roman cross.

36. "Vinegar." The soldiers pretend to treat Jesus as a king, to whom the festive cup is presented.

III. The superscription (v. 38). "Superscription." The white tablet nailed upon the cross, above the head of the victim, to declare the crime for which He was crucified. "Was written." Pilate wrote this superscription evidently in derision (John 19:19). "King of the Jews." The words are somewhat different in the different gospels, probably because some of the writers copied from one language and some from another.

IV. The robber's conversion (vs. 39-43). 39. "Railed on Him!" The two thieves crucified with Him may have belonged to the band with Barabbas. "Save Thyself," etc. Prove your claim to the Messiahship by delivering yourself and us from death. 40. "Dost not thou fear God." Whatever the reckless crowd may do, thou art near death; does this have no effect upon you? 41. "We—justly." He is a true penitent, confessing his sins. "Nothing amiss." He may have heard and seen much of Jesus at the trial.

42. "Lord." The very use of the word implies faith. "Thy kingdom." He thus recognized Christ as a real King.

43. "To-day." This was the second saying of Christ on the cross. "Paradise." This is a word of Persian origin, denoting a beautiful park.

V. The supernatural darkness (vs. 44, 45). 44. "Sixth hour." Noon. "Darkness." The darkness continued three hours, from noon till 3 o'clock. "Over the whole land." (R. V.) Of Palestine. This darkness was typical of the moral darkness that filled the land. This was a miraculous occurrence, showing the amazement of God at the wickedness of the crucifixion of Him who is the light of the world and the sun of righteousness. "The ninth hour." The hour of the offering of the evening sacrifice. During the darkness occurred Christ's fourth utterance on the cross: "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" (Matt. 27:46). The fifth saying was, "I thirst" (John 19:28).

45. "The veil." The great veil of the temple that hung between the Holy Place and the Holy of Holies, 40 cubits (60 feet) long, and 20 (30 feet) wide, of the thickness of the palm of the hand, and wrought in 72 squares, which were joined together. These veils were very heavy. "Was rent." Its rending typified "that the veil that shut out the vision of holiness from the hearts of the people had been taken away" (2 Cor. 3:14-16). "Its rending was emblematical and pointed out that the separation between Jews and Gentiles was now abolished, and that the privilege of the high priest was now communicated to all mankind."

VI. Our Lord's death (v. 46). 46. "With a loud voice." As it were the triumphant note of a conqueror. What He said first at this time is recorded in John 19:30, and was His sixth saying on the cross. "It is finished." "Father," etc. This was His seventh saying. "The word 'Father' shows that His soul has recovered full serenity." Not long before this when struggling in the darkness He calls to His "God;" now the darkness is gone and He sees God as a loving "Father." "I commend My spirit." I deposit My soul in Thy hands. Here is another proof of the immortality of the soul, and of its separate existence after death. "Gave up the ghost." "He dismissed the spirit." He Himself willingly gave up that life which it was impossible for man to take away. As Jesus gave up His spirit there was an earthquake of such power as to rend the rocks and open the tombs (Matt. 27:51-53).

Alcohol in Hospitals.

In a speech recently at the Bishopsgate Institute, Sir Victor Horsley gave some remarkable figures to show how the use of alcohol in hospitals was declining. In 1862 nearly $40,000 was spent on alcohol in the London hospitals and $15,000 on milk; in 1902 the situation was almost exactly reversed, about $15,000 being spent on alcohol and over $40,000 on milk.—National Advocate.

It is estimated that alcoholic liquors kill every year 60,000 in America.

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

The wettest place on earth is reputed to be Cherrapunji, India, and a recent fall of seventy-four and one-half inches of rain in five consecutive days must discourage other competitors for the record.

Modelling in breaderumbs, which are soaked in liquids of various colors and are made elastic and almost unbreakable by a special process, is the curious new art of Suzanne Meyer, a French woman.

The record for thirst endurance belongs to Pablo Valencia, a Mexican, who recovered after fully 160 hours in the desert without water. So far as is known, half of the victims of the desert have died within thirty-six hours, another quarter in forty-eight hours, and very few have survived longer than seventy to eighty hours.

To give some idea of how weeds multiply it may be stated that a single plant of pepper grass will produce 18,000 seeds; dandelion, 12,000; shepherd's purse, 37,000; wheat thief, 7000; common thistles, 65,000; ragweed, 5000; pursiaine, 375,000; plantain, 47,000, and burdock, 43,000. The importance of not allowing a single weed to procure seed cannot be alluded to too frequently. A single hour's work in destroying weeds may save weeks of labor next season.

A. P. Powell, a Mississippi Choctaw, who lives near Homer, I. T., went to the Ardmore land office to register. He was the father of fifteen children, but found that he had forgotten the name of one of them. "After half a dozen names had been suggested by the affable clerk in the enrolling department," says the Ardmorelte, "Powell thought of the right one. This child bore the name of its father and Powell had forgotten his own name." The seventeen allotments belonging to the Powell's family are worth about $80,000.

So peculiar is the formation of their feet that night and day the Tonquinese can run with perfect security over most dangerously rough and smooth places. From a narrow heel the feet broaden remarkably toward the toes, of which the great one is so separated from the others as to form with them a wide angle. And from the toes grow nails that can be fixed in the ground like hooks. This peculiarity in the feet of the natives of Tonquin has obtained for them among the Chinese the name of Cao-Ci—the people with the crooked toes.

DANCE OF AFRICAN NATIVES.

Gathering of the Dancers — Weird Music and Strange Figures.

The high cliffs of the valley showed clearly in the bright moonlight, when the strains of a native band were heard coming from a native village. Through the long guinea cornstalks men and women came out like so many shadows from the various clusters of huts, writes Hans Vischer, describing a dance he saw in northern Nigeria, in the Geographic Journal. The sonud of the fiddles and the rattling of a calabash filled with pebbles came ever nearer, till the band with many followers emerged from the dark fields to the open space, where a broad, sandy river bed formed a natural playground.

A merry crowd had now gathered, chattering and laughing and thoroughly enjoying itself after the way of the African. The musicians, three stout men and woman, played in that typical way common to all primitive people, one fiddle leading with a slightly varying wailing tune, when the second fiddle took up the air, repeating it in lower notes, and the woman accompanied with a rhythmic swinging of her calabash. It is a weird, melancholy noise, naturally in a minor key, full of ever growing excitement.

All the young people had now formed into two rings, the men inside, and around them an equal number of girls. They started walking around slowly in opposite directions. Then, as the music became faster, they quickened into a kind of two-step, the men dancing in and around the girls, who kept moving the other way. Each time the boy faced the girl he turned around, gave a little jump, and smacking her outstretched hand, moved off to the next beauty, where the performance began again.

All was done in time to the music, and the movements of the laughing youngsters could not have been better measured. Without reserve all abandoned themselves to the most thorough enjoyment, dancing and yelling as if we had been acquainted for years. A little way off sat the matrons and the old men, watching and talking over what they had done in their younger days.

Behind was the black bush, with here and there a higher palm tree coming out and showing in clear silhouette against the white rocks, while the stars moved slowly over the sky, and the great silver moon made it all look wonderful and uncanny. Quite unconsciously I recalled old familiar scenes, other music, other costumes, and a smaller room; and these naked savages were, after all, not so very different from the wise Westerners.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Able Document Setting Forth Some Needed Legislation

STRONG ON MORALITY

President Writes a Particularly Strong Message In Which He Deals With Live Issues Such as Injunctions and Lynchings and Their Causes, and Other Matters of Vital Interest to the Whole Country.

[illegible] Recommendations.

[illegible] Campaign Contributions.

[illegible] Right to Appeal in Criminal Cases.

[illegible] Judgments and Grounds of New Trials.

providing something to the effect that:

No judgment shall be set aside or new trial granted in any case, civil or criminal, on the ground of misdirection of the jury or the improper admission or rejection of evidence, or for error as to any matter of pleading or procedure unless, in the opinion of the court to which the application is made, after an examination of the entire cause, it shall affirmatively appear that the error complained of has resulted in a miscarriage of justice.

Injunctions.

In my last message I suggested the enactment of a law in connection with the issuance of injunctions, attention having been sharply drawn to the matter by the demand that the right of applying injunctions in labor cases should be wholly abolished. It is at least doubtful whether a law abolishing altogether the use of injunctions in such cases would stand the test of the courts; in which case of course the legislation would be ineffective. Moreover, I believe it would be wrong altogether to prohibit the use of injunctions. It is criminal to permit sympathy for criminals to weaken our hands in upholding the law; and if men seek to destroy life or property by mob violence there should be no impairment of the power of the courts to deal with them in the most summary and effective way possible. But so far as possible the abuse of the power should be provided against by some such law as I advocated last year.

In this matter of injunction there is lodged in the hands of the judiciary a necessary power which is nevertheless subject to the possibility of grave abuse. It is a power that should be exercised with extreme care and should be subject to the jealous scrutiny of all men, and condemnation should be meted out as much to the judge who fails to use it boldly when necessary as to the judge who uses it wantonly or oppressively. Of course a judge strong enough to be fit for his office will enjoin any resort to violence or intimidation, especially by conspiracy, no matter what his opinion may be of the rights of the original quarrel. There must be no hesitation in dealing with disorder. But there must likewise be no such abuse of the injunctive power as is implied in forbidding laboring men to strive for their own betterment in peaceful and lawful ways; nor must the injunction be used merely to aid some big corporation in carrying out schemes for its own aggrandizement.

Lynching.

In connection with the delays of the law, I call your attention and the attention of the nation to the prevalence of crime among us, and above all to the epidemic of lynching and mob violence that springs up, now in one part of our country, now in another. Each section, North, South, East, or West, has its own faults; no section can with wisdom spend its time jeering at the faults of another section; it should be busy trying to amend its own shortcomings. To deal with the crime of corruption it is necessary to have an awakened public conscience, and to supplement this by whatever legislation will add speed and certainty in the execution of the law. When we deal with lynching even more is necessary. A great many white men are lynched, but the crime is peculiarly frequent in respect to black men. The greatest existing cause of lynching is the perpetration, especially by black men, of the hideous crime of rape—the most abominable in all the category of crimes, ever worse than murder. Mobs frequently avenge the commission of this crime by themselves torturing to death the man committing it; thus avenging in bestial fashion a bestial deed, and reducing themselves to a level with the criminal.

Lawlessness grows by what it feeds upon; and when mobs begin to lynch for rape they speedily extend the sphere of their operations and lynch for many other kinds of crimes, so that two-thirds of the lynchings are not for rape at all; while a considerable proportion of the individuals lynched are innocent of all crime. Governor Candler, of Georgia, stated on one occasion some years ago: "I can say of a verity that I have, within the last month, saved the lives of half a dozen innocent negroes who were pursued by the mob, and brought them to trial in a court of a law in which they were acquitted." As Bishop Galloway, of Mississippi, has finely said: "When the rule of a mob obtains, that which distinguishes a high civilization is surrendered. The mob which lynches a negro charged with rape will in a little while lynch a white man suspected of crime. Every Christian patriot in America needs to lift up his voice in loud and eternal protest against the mob spirit that is threatening the integrity of this Republic." Governor Jelks, of Alabama, has recently spoken as follows: "The lynching of any person for whatever crime is inexcusable anywhere—it is a defiance of orderly government; but the killing of innocent people under any provocation is infinitely more horrible; and yet innocent people are likely to die when a mob's terrible lust is once aroused. The lesson in this: No good citizen can afford to countenance a defiance of the statutes, no matter what the provocation. The innocent frequently suffer, and, it is my observation, more usually suffer than the guilty. The white people of the South indict the whole colored race on the ground that even the better elements lend no assistance whatever in ferreting out criminals of their own color. The respectable colored people must learn not to harbor their criminals, but to assist the officers in bringing them to justice. This is the larger crime, and it provokes such atrocious offenses as the one at Atlanta. The two races can never get on until there is an understanding on the part of both to make common cause with the law-abiding against criminals of any color."

Moreover where any crime committed by a member of one race against a member of another race is avenged in such fashion that it seems as if not the individual criminal, but the whole race, is attacked, the result is to exasperate to the highest degree race feeling. There is but one rule in dealing with black men as with white men; it is the same rule that must be applied in dealing with rich men and poor men; that is, to treat each man, whatever his color, his creed, or his social position, with even-handed justice or his real worth as a man. White people owe it quite as much to themselves as to the colored race to treat well the colored man who shows by his life that he deserves such treatment; for it is surely the highest wisdom to encourage in the colored race all those individuals who are honest, industrious, law-abiding, and who therefore make good and safe neighbors and citizens. Reward or punish the individual on his merits as an individual. Evil will surely come in the end to both races if we substitute for this just rule the habit of treating all the members of the race, good and bad, alike. There is no question of "social equality" or "negro domination" involved; only the question of relentlessly punishing bad men, and of securing to the good man the right of his life, his liberty, and the pursuit of his happiness as his own qualities of heart, head, and hand enable him to achieve it.

Every colored man should realize that the worst enemy of his race is the negro criminal, and above all the negro criminal who commits the dreadful crime of rape; and it should be felt as in the highest degree an offense against the whole country, and against the colored race in particular, for a colored man to fail to help the officers of the law in hunting down with all possible earnestness and zeal every such infamous offender. Moreover, in my judgement, the crime of rape should always be punished with death, as is the case with murder; asault with intent to commit rape should be made a capital crime, at least in the discretion of the court; and provision should be made by which the punishment may follow immediately upon the heels of the offense; while the trial should be so conducted that the victim need not be wantonly shamed while giving testimony, and that the least possible publicity shall be given to the details.

The members of the white race on the other hand should understand that every lynching represents by just so much a loosening of the bonds of civilization; that the spirit of lynching inevitably throws into prominence in the community all the foul and evil creatures who dwell therein. No man can take part in the torture of a human being without having his own moral nature permanently lowered. Every lynching means just so much moral deterioration in all the children who have any knowledge of it, and therefore just so much additional trouble for the next generation of Americans.

Let justice be both sure and swift; but let it be justice under the law, and not the wild and crooked savagery of a mob.

Capital and Labor.

In dealing with both labor and capital, with the questions affecting both corporations and trades unions, there is one matter more important to remember than aught else, and that is the infinite harm done by preachers of mere discontent. These are men who seek to excite a violent class hatred against all men of wealth. They seek to turn wise and proper movements for the better control of corporations and for doing away with the abuses connected with wealth, into a campaign of hysterical excitement and falsehood in which the aim is to inflame to madness the brutal passions of mankind. The sinister demagogs and foolish visionaries who are always eager to undertake such a campaign of destruction sometimes seek to associate themselves with those working for a genuine reform in governmental and social methods, and sometimes masquerade as the reformers. In reality they are the worst enemies of the cause they profess to advocate, just as the purveyors of sensational slander in newspaper or magazine are the worst enemies of all men who are engaged in an honest effort to better what is bad in our social and governmental conditions. To preach hatred of the rich man as such, to carry on a campaign of slander and invective against him, to seek to mislead and inflame to madness honest men whose lives are hard and who have not the kind of mental training which will permit them to appreciate the danger in the doctrines preached—all this is to commit a crime against the body politic and to be false to every worthy principle and tradition of American national life. Moreover, while such preaching and such agitation may give a livelihood and a certain notoriety to some of those who take part in it, and may result in the temporary political success of others, in the long run every such movement will either fail or else will provoke a violent reaction, which will itself result not merely in undoing the mischief wrought by the demagog and the agitator, but also in undoing the good that the honest reformer, the true upholder of popular rights, has painfully and laboriously achieved. Corruption is never so rife as in communities where the demogog and the agitator bear full sway, because in such communities all moral bands become loosened, and hysteria and sensationalism replace the spirit of sound judgment and fair dealing as between man and man. In sheer revolt against the squalid anarchy thus produced men are sure in the end to run toward any leader who can restore order, and then their relief at being free from the intolerable burdens of class hatred, violence, and demogogy is such that they can not for some time be aroused to indignation against masdeeds by men of wealth; so that they permit a new growth of the very abuses which were in part responsible for the original outbreak. The one hope for success for our people lies in a resolute and fearless, but sane and cool-headed, advance along the path marked out last year by this Congress. There must be a stern refusal to be misled into following either that base creature who appears and panders to the lowest instincts and passions in order to arouse one set of Americans against their fellows, or that other creature, equally base but no baser, who in a spirit of greed, or to accumulate or add to an already huge fortune, seeks to exploit his fellow Americans with callous disregard to their welfare of soul and body. The man who debauches others in order to obtain a high office stands on an evil equality of corruption with the man who debauches other for financial profit; and when hatred is sown the crop which springs up can only be evil.

The plain people who think—the mechanics, farmers, merchants, workers with head or hand, the men to whom America traditions are dear, who love their country and try to act decently by their neighbors, owe it to themselves to remember that the most damaging blow that can be given popular government is to elect an unworthy and sinster agitator on a platform of violence and hypocrisy. Whenever such an issue is raised in this country nothing can be gained by flinching from it, for in such case democracy is iteself on trial. The triumph of the mob is just as evil a thing as the triumph of the plutocracy, and to have escaped one danger avails nothing whatever if we succumb to the other.

Railroad Employees' Hours and Eight Hour Law.

I call your attention to the need of passing a bill limiting the number of hours of employment of railroad employees. The measure is a very moderate one and I can conceive of no serious objection to it. Indeed, so far as it is in our power, it should be our aim steadily to reduce the number of hours of labor, with as a goal the general introduction of an eight-hour day. There are industries in which it is not possible that the hours of labor should be reduced; just as there are communities not far enough advanced for such a movement to be for their good, or, if in the Tropics, so situated that there is no analogy between their needs and ours in this matter. On the Isthmus of Panama, for instance, the conditions are in every way so different from what they are here that an eight-hour day would be absurd; just as it is absurd, so far as the Isthmus is concerned, where white labor can not be employed, to bother as to whether the necessary work is done by alien black men or by alien yellow men. But the wageworkers of the United States are of so high a grade that alike from the merely industrial standpoint and from the civic standpoint it should be our object to do what we can in the direction of securing the general observance of an eight-hour day.

Employers' Liability.

Among the excellent laws which the Congress past at the last session was an employers' liability law. It was marked step in advance to get the recognition of employers' liability on the statute books; but the law did not go far enough. In spite of all precautions exercised by employers there are unavoidable accidents and even deaths envolved in nearly every line of business connected with the mechanic arts. This is inevitable sacrifice of life may be reduced to a minimum, but it can not be completely eliminated.

Investigation of Disputes Between Capital and Labor.

The commission appointed by the President October 16, 1902, at the request of both the anthricite coal operators and miners, to inquire into, consider, and pass upon the questions in controversy in connection with the strike in the anthricite regions of Pennsylvania and the causes out of which the controversy arose, in their report, findings, and award express the belief "that the State and Federal governments should provide the machinery for what may be called the compulsory investigation of controversies btween employers and employees when they arise."

Withdrawal of Coal Lands.

It is not wise that the Nation should alienate its remaining coal lands. I have temporarily withdrawn from settlement all the lands which the Geological Survey has indicated as containing, or in all probability containing, coal. The question, however, can be properly settled only by legislation, which in my judgment should provide for the withdrawal of these lands from sale or from entry save in certain especial circumstances. The ownership would then remain in the United States, which should not, however, attempt to work them, but permit them to be worked by private individuals under a royalty system, the Government keeping such control as to permit it to see that no excessive price was charged consumers.

Corporations.

The present Congress has taken long strides in the direction of securing proper supervision and control by the National Government over corporations engaged in interstate business—and the enormous majority of corporations of any size are engaged in interstate business. The passage of the railway rate bill, and only to a less degree the passage of the pure food bill, and the provision for increasing and rendering more effective national control over the beef-packing industry, mark an important advance in the proper direction. In the short session it will perhaps be difficult to do much further along this line; and it may be best to wait until the laws have been in operation for a number of months before endeavoring to increase their scope, because only operation will show with exactness their merits and their shortcomings and thus give opportunity to define what further remidial legislation is needed. Yet in my judgment it will in the end be advisable in connection with the packing house inspection law to provide for putting a date on the label and for charging the cost of inspection to the packers. All these laws have already justified their enactment.

Agriculture.

The only other persons whose welfare is as vital to the welfare of the whole country as is the welfare of the wageworkers are the tillers of the soil, the farmers. It is a mere truism to say that no growth of cities, no growth of wealth, no industrial development can atone for any falling off in the character and standing of the farming population. During the last few decades this fact has been recognized with ever-increasing clearness. There is no longer any failure to realize that farming, at least in certain branches, must become a technical and scientific profession. This means that there must be open to farmers the chance for technical and scientific training, not theoretical merely but of the most severely practical type. The farmer represents a peculiarly high type of American citizenship, and he must have the same chance to rise and develop as other American citizens have. Moreover, it is exactly as true of the farmer, as it is of the business man and the wageworker, that the ultimate success of the Nation of which he forms a part must be founded not alone on material prosperity but upon high moral, mental, and physical development. This education of the farmer—self-education by preference, but also education from the outside, as with all other men—is peculiarly necessary here in the United States, where the frontier conditions even in the newest States have now vanished, where there must be a substitution of a more intensive system of cultivation for the old wasteful farm management, and where there must be a better business organization among the farmers themselves.

Marriage and Divorce.

I am well aware of how difficult it is to pass a constitutional amendment. Nevertheless in my judgment the whole question of marriage and divorce should be relegated to the authority of the National Congress. At present the wide difference in the laws of the different States on this subject result in scandals and abuses; and surely there is nothing so vitally essential to the welfare of the nation, nothing around which the nation should so bend itself to throw every safeguard, as the home life of the average citizen. The change would be good from every standpoint. In particular it would be good because it would confer on the Congress the power at once to deal radically and efficiently with polygamy; and this should be done whether or not marriage and divorce are dealt with. It is neither safe nor proper to leave the question of polygamy to be dealt with by the several States. Power to deal with it should be conferred on the National Government.

When home ties are loosened; when men and women cease to regard a worthy family life, with all its duties fully performed, and all its responsibilities lived up to, as the life best worth living; then evil days for the commonwealth are at hand. There are regions in our land, and classes of our population, where the birth rate has sunk below the death rate. Surely it should need no demonstration to show that wilful sterility is, from the standpoint of the nation, from the standpoint of the human race, the one sin for which the penalty is national death, race death; a sin for which there is no atonement; a sin which is the more dreadful exactly in proportion as the men and women thereof are in other respects, in character, and bodily and mental powers, those whom for the sake of the state it would be well to see the fathers and mothers of many healthy children, well brought up in homes made happy by their presence. No man, no woman, can shirk the primary duties of life, whether for love of ease and pleasure, or for any other cause, and retain his or her self-respect.

International Morality.

On the question of International morality Mr. Roosevelt comes out strongly, advocating clean dealing between the nations of earth and also strongly advocates international arbitration as a means of settling all difficulties that may arise.

American Shipping.

Let me once again call the attention of the Congress to two subjects concerning which I have frequently before communicated with them. One is the question of developing American shipping. I trust that a law embodying in substance the views, or a major part of the views, exprest in the report on this subject laid before the House at its last session will be past. I am well aware that in former years objectionable measures have been proposed in reference to the encouragement of American shipping; but it seems to me that the proposed measure is as nearly unobjectionable as any can be. It will of course benefit primarily our seaboard States, Maine, Louisiana, and Washington; but what benefits part of our people in the end benefits all; just as Government aid to irrigation and forestry in the West is really of benefit, not only to the Rocky Mountain States, but to all our country. If is prove impracticable to enact a law for the encouragement of shipping generally, then at least provision should be made for better communication with South America, notably for fast mail lines to the chief South American ports. It is discreditable to us that our business people, for lack of direct communication in the shape of lines of steamers with South America, should in that great sister continent be at a disadvantage compared to the business people of Europe.

Currency Reform.

I especially call your attention to the second subject, the condition of our currency laws. The national bank act has ably served a great purpose in aiding the enormous business development of the country; and within ten years there has been an increase in circulation per capita from $21.41 to $33.08. For several years evidence has been accumulating that additional legislation is needed. The recurence of each crop season emphasizes the defects of the present laws. There must soon be a revision of them, because to leave them as they are means to incur liability of business disaster. Since your body adjourned there has been a fluctuation in the interest on call money from 2 per cent to 30 per cent; and the fluctuation was even greater during the preceding six months. The Secretary of the Treasury had to step in and by wise action put a stop to the most violent period of oscillation. Even worse than such fluctuation is the advance in commercial rates and the uncertainty felt in the sufficiency of credit even at high rates. All commercial interests suffer during each crop period. Excessive rates for call money in New York attract money from the interior banks into the speculative fields; this depletes the fund that would otherwise be available for commercial uses, and commercial borrowers are forced to pay abnormal rates; so that each fall a tax, in the shape of increased interest charges, is placed on the whole commerce of the country.

Our Island Possessions.

It is urged that these shall receive the careful consideration of Congress and that tariffs, etc., shall be upon a just basis.

Army and Navy.

The message goes at length into the matter of the efficieney of our army and navy. The President is much gratified at the progress we are making in both branches of our common defense. In the matter of rifle practice the President says:

The Congress has most wisely provided for a National Board for the promotion of rifle prictise. Excellent results have already come from this law, but it does not go far enough. Our Regular Army is so small that in any great war we should have to trust mainly to volunteers; and in such event these volunteers should already know how to shoot; for if a soldier has the fighting edge, and ability to take care of himself in the open, his efficieney on the line of battle is almost directly proportionate to excellence in markmanship. We should establish shooting gallaries in the large public and military schools, should maintain national target ranges in different parts of the country, and should in every way encourage the formation of rifle clubs throughout all parts of the land. The little Republic of Switzerland offers us an excellent example in all matters connected with building up an efficient citizen soldiery.

"Diabolical Social Equality."

Dr. Rice, pastor of the leading Methodist church in Montgomery, a man of learning and ability, made a recent visit to Tuskegee Institute. He was invited there to talk to the students in the chapel of that famous institution. He took in all of the surroundings and closely scanned the faces of his auditors.

The press specials to the Alabama dailies afterwards reported a sermon he delivered to his Montgomery congregation following his trip to the famous Negro school. In this sermon Dr. Rice told his congregation that he had visited Tuskegee Institute; that he had talked to the student body; that he had taken note of them and of their color; and that there was a "diabolical social equality" going on in the South. It is the duty, therefore, he said, for the white people of the South to give these Negroes the training which Tuskegee Institute affords.

Dr. Rice's idea is not to "mince" words. He told his congregation understand just what he knew and just what they had a knowledge of as to the "diabolical social equality." He showed a fearlessness of speech and asserted the paramount duty of whites in caring for the welfare of those in whose veins some whites had caused white blood to be injected.

In almost every community in the South there can be found some individuals whose stock in trade is abuse of the "nigger." In some instances there may be "picked out, from among these, one or more men to whom may be traced past or present participation in this "diabolical social equality." Yet, these unmerited wretches are often political gutter-snipes, who go about prating it around that a white Republican is no better than a "nigger," and that to be a Republican is to uphold "social equality." The white man to whom may be traced the fatherhood of some Negro woman's illegitimate child or immoral companionship with Negro women is as guilty not the one to howl against it, any man, irrespective of party or ... (Southern American, Alexander ...

It seems odd to hear these Democratic "orators" howl about Booker Washington and his "social equality" when on looking at a list of the Board of Regents, we find hearing the list as president, Charles Coleman Thach of Auburn; then comes Hon. R. R. Poole and Messrs. W. W. Campbell and Charles W. Hare, all men who are Democrats, the remaining three of the board of seven are rounded and we presume are Democrats also as there were only five Republican votes cast in the county of Macon in which Tuskegee is situated.

"Just a Voter."

Well, Mr. Editor, the election is over and the people have won another victory. I had thought I would not write any more letters while not I feel so good that I can't hold my peace. Say by the way, I notice a bill advertised in the Banner saying there will be a bill introduced in the coming Legislature to establish a Board of Revenue for Chilton county. Don't this jar you? but you know the Democrats always show themselves at the wrong time; they just can't keep from letting their meanness out. This bill full, proves this true and if we had elected a Democrat to the Legislature there's no telling what we would have had in the way of legislation. Well, thank the Lord we didn't elect a Democrat and I hope no such calamity will ever befall us. I've seen some mighty bad legislation enacted in this state when prejudice was high and the Democrats could say that legislators were elected by Negro votes, but now all the Negroes have been disfranchised and about half of the whites, and yet some Democrats in this county want to take away the right of the people to elect their own officers. What excuse can they put up for wanting to appoint a Board of Revenue for th ecounty? I can't imagine, except that the Democrats want our county to get in debt like the Democratic counties are, nearly all of them have debts from $50,000 to $100,000, and their public buildings are no better than ours. You know the Democrats can't stand prosperity; they like things to be in a drag, in the place of a full dinner pail they want soup houses, and they like mortgages in the place of cash. I wondered before the election what the Democrats had up their sleeve, and when this bill was advertised I saw that Rutland had let the cat out of the bag, or you might call it a kitten. I expect they've a big cat in the bag yet. I hope the decent Democrats will speak out on this proposition and let the people know where they stand on this kind of legislation. Come out and express yourselves and say whether or not you are for the people electing their officers or to have the governor appoint them. Mr. Atchison said if they ever got in they would stay. I see now what he meant. They would not let the people vote any more and so they could always stay in. But poor Atchison, he ran behind everybody else (except R. F. Bates.) You see, he is too smart for the people of Chilton. He ought to get a place on the staff of some paper larger than the Banner; his hore is too large for Chilton. Well really, it does seem hard for the Democrats of Chilton. You see, we've had so many traitors in our party the last few years that the Democrats have been gaining on us, but now we've started up again and it looks gloomy for them. You see some folks have been sitting on the fence and when they saw our increased majority this time they just fell kerwhop on our side. But I think our party is better off without some folks. The Lord only knows what will become of the Democratic party with all that crowd of chronic office seekers in it. I tell you if we hadn't got shed of some of them we'd had trouble. Too many of them like to have got with us two years ago. You see it was our turn to have them then and they came near knocking us out of the box. How Mr. Harrison reared back on his dew claws in the last Banner because it was said he was trying to trade the Democratic remnant in Jemison for a postoffice. I'd like to ask him if it is not a fact that he got a petition up just before the election, asking to be appointed postmaster at Jemison. I wonder if he expected to remain a Democrat and hold office under a Republican administration (though there are some that do that, but they are not very nice people.) I wish he would tell the people on what grounds he asked for the postoffice at Jemison. But you all know it is Lord any way or anyhow with Democrats to get an office. They would take one from a Republican or Booker Washington or anybody else. Now boys, pay your poll tax up if you are behind and lets keep this thing moving on. As Atchison says, if the Democrats ever do get in its "Goodby my honey, I am gone," for they will pass laws and have all your officers appointed. Mr. Guilledge seems to be offended at some Democrats about the way they acted in the last campaign, but he ought not to be too hard on them. They had an awful load to carry, even the Banner groaned under the burden. I tell you Democrats you had better look out; when a horse runs away with a plow ... of the same thing happens ... again, and some of your ... can away with the plow ... twice. You'd better keep a ... on them and well ... up.

JUST A VOTER.

Court Notes.

Court convened for the second week on Monday. The jurors for this week were:

Jury No. 1—J. A. Weaver, S. M. Yates, Sr., J. T. Williams, George Moore, J. H. Cox, Frank Mulkey, Joseph Cox, Walter Moore, A. N. Miner, S. H. Driver, Reuben Wyatt and Andrew Deason.

Jury No. 2—Dock Hunt, J. R. Johnson, Burt Hankins, W. T. Vinzant, J. F. Rawlinson, J. H. Willoughby, A. T. Hathcock, S. D. McCary, L. W. Robinson, W. L. Bates, C. C. Crumpton and W. P. Childress.

Jury No. 3—J. T. Norris, D. W. Cobb, William Rasberry, J. A. Lowery and J. D. Hudgens.

The interest last week seemed to center in two cases, viz: Thos. E. Dennis et al., vs. Huston Price, and G. W. Maddox, the plaintiff, won the land suit for, but without any damages for detention or costs. Six days were allowed the defendants to file bill of exceptions. W. R. Lowery vs. Z. S. Avery, verdict for Avery. This is the case tried at the spring term in which a verdict was given to Lowery, but Smith & Middleton, Avery's lawyers, obtained an order for a new trial, with the result as above. B. H. Lidden of Florida, general stenographer, is here and will take the proceedings in several cases this week. It would be well for the circuit court to have a permanent stenographer.

Grand Jury Report.

To the Honorable A. H. Alston, Supernumerary Judge of the State of Alabama:

We the Grand Jury empanelled for the fall term of 1906, do hereby respectfully present the following report:

We have examined the County Poor farm and find that there are at present eleven inmates at the farm. We find that the place is in good condition and well cared for, and that all proper and necessary accommodations are furnished the inmates. We have also examined the jail and find that it is kept in perfect condition and that the prisoners are well fed and cared for. Our examinaitons of the books and bonds of the county officers, so far as the limited time at our disposal would permit, show that the books are neatly and correctly kept and that the bonds appear to be good and sufficient. We recommend that the Road Apportioners and Overseers be made to comply with the requirements of the law, to the best of their ability, and that the roads be better worked and kept in better condition. We have investigated 55 cases of alleged violations of the laws and have examined 150 witnesses, and have found 19 true bills. We wish to thank your Honor for the able charge given us before beginning our investigations. We also wish to thank the solicitor, the bailiff and the sheriff for their kind assistance and willingness to aid us in our work. Having finished our work we now request that we be discharged.

Thorsby News.

A very good musical entertainment was given at the Thorsby Institute on Wednesday night, November 28. Misses Jackson and Hawkins of Birmingham rendered a number of vocal and instrumental selections, and Miss Webb of Birmingham gave some very interesting and amusing recitations.

Rev. George D. Bates and wife of Birmingham spent Thanksgiving Day here.

ROAD APPORTIONERS.

The Board of County Commissioners at their last session appointed road apportioners for every beat in the county. These officers hold for four years and have the appointing of road overseers, etc. Now let us see what we can do for the roads of our county. Here is the list: Beat 1—Arkey Mahan, R. T. Robinson and Carter Willis.

Beat 2—Charley Glasscock, Will Cofer and W. G. Conway.

Beat 3—C. C. Williams, J. C. Veazey and G. A. Dawson.

Beat 4—E. B. Calloway, G. H. Massey and G. F. Mims.

Beat 5—Joel Guiledge, David Norris and Graff Sims.

Beat 6—R. N. Wilkins, C. D. Foshee and J. H. Hayes.

Beat 7—E. C. Lawrence, G. W. Fox and E. E. Deramus.

Beat 8—George Williams, S. R. Letcher and Wade Harris.

Beat 9—Alex Maddox, Green Burnett and J. L. Vines.

Beat 10—J. P. Parrish, A. M. Yates, Jr., and Hiram Devaughan.

Beat 11—W. J. Gentry, Albert Gore and G. W. Willis.

Mims' Mill.

Editor Union:

It has been quite a long time since I saw anything from this place, so I will endeavor to give a little sketch of the latest happenings.

Health is good except Mrs. J. W. Riggins, who is sick. Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hayes visited with their daughter, Mrs. Henry Eiland, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Petis Collins were visitors at Rufus Littlejohn's Sunday. Monroe Foshee and wife visited the latter's parents last week. We are sorry to hear that we are going to lose some of our neighbors, such as Jim Johnson's family and J. W. Hayes. We hear that Mr. Hayes has taken charge of the Thorsby rural route until Uncle Sam settles the matter, as the mail must go and Teddy Lefstad, the former carrier, has resigned. Mr Lefstad has been appointed railway mail agent, but his run has not been named yet. We wish Mr. Hayes well and hope he will give satisfaction, as those people over there are awful hard to please. We have one among the best carriers in the state, William J. Armstrong, carrier on Clanton route 4. He has to carry a lot of Union's too. The mill business is slow since the best teams were sold off. Say but didn't L. H. look timid Sunday? Ha! ha! He has something over about the mill that takes his eye. One of our young men who goes east on Sunday locked long-faced last Sunday but says that he'll take along the "faint-bottle" next Sunday. Our new professor seems like he means business. Ha! ha! What was the matter with E. R., J. P. and F. C. Sunday? Wonder what is the matter down the Branch? Seems like there isn't so many stamps used on that route these days. Miss Thulia Baker spent last week with relatives here. F. C. Collins and wife visited the latter's parents last week. Well, if this escapes that dreadful waste basket, I may come again. Success to The Union and its readers.

BROWN EYES.

Union Grove.

Dear Editor:

Please allow me a small space in our dear Union. I am glad to say that health here is very good at present, and we all hope it will stay that way. Well, boys, I saw a number of letters in our dear old Union last week and it didn't seem possible that not one was from our settlement. Don't stand back, boys, your letters will be appreciated by all the Union readers. We were sorry when the day came for Miss Lee Robinson to call her scholars together for the last session of her very successful music school here, but we all hope to welcome her back again. Success to The Union and its host of readers.

LITTLE W.

Beat Three.

Editor Union:

Just a few words as to stock law which is being discussed a good deal now in our county paper, The Union. I myself don't think that we need any stock law at all here in Chilton county. We have a free county now and let it stay free. If we get that thing called stock law, we won't have any peace; I say, hold fast to what you have; when people are doing well be contented with what you have got. I've been in stock law in three counties and they look like they were throwed away counties. An uncle of mine lived in stock law. Some one asked him when he was here if he lived in stock law. He said yes, and then he said no, that he lived in "Sheol," or if it was not exactly Sheol it was own brother to it. So come on, boys, let's fix our fences and let our stock run at large and eat the grass and weeds that God put here for that purpose. Success to The Union and its many readers.

Yours truly,
J. A. MIMS.
Thorsby Route 1.

THORSBY ITEMS.

Quite a number of people came down from the North on the last excursion in October. Among the number were Mrs. Albertson and daughter, Hustin Baty, J. F. Lucas, R. Yarger, Claude Sherry and Miss Mabel Orr from Pennsylvania; Messrs. Carl Olson, Dalin and Silk from Hancock Mich.; Rev. J. M. Eggen and wife and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson from Lyle, Minn.

Quite a number of our citizens have attended Circuit Court at Clanton during the session. Mr. G. H. Gerald of Thorsby is on the grand jury.

T. J. Barrow of Coopers has purchased the place once owned by G. A. Lundee. He expects to move to Thorsby in a few days.

J. A. Lindquist is building a dwelling house on his land recently purchased of P. C. Smith.

I. E. Sarber spent a day here last week looking after his waterworks property.

Miss Millie Mims and James Honeycutt were married on the 25th of November at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Mims. Both the bride and groom are well and favorably known in this section and their many friends join in wishing them a prosperous voyage on the sea of life.

TO THE VOTERS OF BEAT THREE.

I see a good many letters in our paper on the stock law question, and in my opinion both those that are for and those against it are all on the extreme. I've heard some good people objecting on account of such hard words being used against each other, and I don't approve of it myself, so let us all get down to reason and common sense. I've been in some stock law districts and there have been some as fine cattle as I ever saw anywhere and never heard any complaint among the people; then I've seen some fine stock on free range and have heard neighbors complaining at each other. I don't care where you go, you can find both good and sorry cattle, and some in peace, and some in confusion so I say give us good people and we will have peace whether it is stock law or free range. If you want good cattle, you must take care both in breeding and raising, stock law or not.

In my opinion we people in Beat 3 can get along better and have a better chance, both in breeding and raising cattle under stock law. As to breeding good stock or hogs on free range it just can't be done, for this reason: Your cattle and hogs out on the range with everybody else's, you just can't control the breeding. Some say, well, if you want to do that, just put your stock up. But that isn't fair; it is a fact that rail timber is a thing of the past in this country, and the range is no good, and it would be the best money-saving law to the people of this Beat of anything we could do. We can sow some patches of Bermuda grass and some to Burr clover and orchard grass, and cultivate our best spots and make clear dollars where we now make coppers.

Yours truly,
J. H. THOMAS.

NOTICE.

Thorsby ,Ala., Nov. 28, 1906.

To the Citizens of Thorsby, Ala., and to Whom It May Concern:

There will be a petition presented to the next session of the Legislature of Alabama to repeal or amend the charter of the city of Thorsby, Alabama, to repeal the latter clause of section twenty-four (24) of said charter, which reads as follows, viz: "Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of the grape or other wine fruits, and the City Council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of said wine, and the license for the use of the State of Alabama shall be the same as required by the State from dealers in wines exclusively in other parts of the state."

To read as follows, viz: Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines mades from the juice of grapes, and the City Council shall have power to license and regulate the sale of said wines, but wine shall not be sold in less quantities than one gallon, and shall not be drank on the premises where sold, and shall not be drank in the house where sold, nor in a room adjoining the same.

Any person selling wine in less quantities than one gallon, or permitting it to be drank on the premises, or in the house where sold, or in a room adjoining the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs for every offense. And the license for the use of the State shall not be less than fifteen dollars. And all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed. J. BICE.

NOTICE.

Thorsby, Ala., Nov. 28, 1906.

To the Citizens of Thorsby, Ala., and to Whom It May Concern:

There will be a petition presented to the next session of the Legislature of Alabama to repeal or amend the charter of the city of Thorsby, Alabama, to repeal the latter clause of section twenty-four (24) of said charter, which reads as follows, viz: "Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of the grape or other wine fruits, and the City Council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of said wine, and the license for the use of the State of Alabama shall be the same as required by the State from dealers in wines exclusively in other parts of the state."

To read as follows, viz: Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines mades from the juice of grapes, and the City Council shall have power to license and regulate the sale of said wines, but wine shall not be sold in less quantities than one gallon, and shall not be drank on the premises where sold, and shall not be drank in the house where sold, nor in a room adjoining the same.

Any person selling wine in less quantities than one gallon, or permitting it to be drank on the premises, or in the house where sold, or in a room adjoining the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs for every offense. And the license for the use of the State shall not be less than fifteen dollars. And all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed. J. BICE.

One of the first signs of disease of the spine, the hip, or some other joint, is a night cry, and the possibility of some beginning trouble in the back or hip should be borne in mind.

A steel making company in Indiana has given the largest single order for gas engines ever placed by one company. It is for eight gas engines, of 3000 horsepower each, capable of delivering 30,000 cubic feet of free air per minute to the furnaces which produce the blast-furnace gas, which, in its turn, is also used to operate the engines.

The new celluloid patented in Italy by a British inventor is made uninflammable by mixing glue, gum arabic and colza oil with the ordinary composition. When purified from acetic ether, the new material can be used as an inexpensive substitute for any kind of tortoise shell, and under the most unfavorable conditions it merely carbonizes, without igniting or spreading fire.

A novel charge is brought against the common bedbug (Cimex lectularius) by Dr. W. J. Goodhue, medical superintendent of the Molokai Leper Settlement, who regards it as a chief agent in spreading leprosy. It is believed to have greater influence than the gnat, for it comes noiselessly, and during the patient's sleep, and bedding among lepers is too little disinfected. After long research Dr. Goodhue has demonstrated the presence of the bacillus of leprosy in the mosquito (Culex pungens) as well as in the bedbug.

The last section of the railway across the Andes between Chile and Argentina has been officially inaugurated, and work has been begun on the highest part of the line, where, at an altitude exceeding 10,000 feet, great tunnels are to be constructed. The largest of these tunnels will have a length of 3405 yards, not far from equally divided between the Chilean and Argentinian sections. With the use of that portion of the line already completed, the journey between Valparaiso and Buenos Ayres will be shortened several hours.

A new modification of oxygen seems to have been discovered by Dr. Erich Ladenburg. From the gas of oxygen, developed by electrolysis of boiled potassium hydrate, he prepares liquid ozone, and thus he allows to vaporize into a vacuum, obtaining nearly pure ozone gas, which has a deep blue color in a thickness of eight inches. The absorption spectrum shows five new lines that do not belong to ozone. They always appear when the liquid ozone is allowed to vaporize, and the gas to which they belong can be separated. The molecular weight is higher than that of ozone.

Fame For Friends Only.

Now I wish to say again to you all that in sending me anything whatsoever you need not be afraid of getting your name in the paper, if you will do as I requested some time ago. Just put this sign on the package, card or whatever else, and you may rest assured your name will not be in the paper, so far as I am concerned—(X). Now ain't that easy to make, and it says, No. There was a lady in to-day who said she would be offended should I write her name. When I had been thinking for several days of sending her, among others, a card with my picture on it, but I am glad now that I found it out in time, for when I know that people don't wish to have me write their names I will not do so under any circumstances whatever. Life, death, feast or funeral, and from this date I will say that I will also never write the name of any person on earth who I may have reason to think is not a friend to me, as I am writing to please my friends, none others, and don't forget it. Now a joke. I would give $1 to see the paper come out just one issue with no one's name in it or on it. I think it would be a great curiosity and capable of causing a krasy kripple to go to Kalifornia or Kalimazoo. — Middletown Times-Press.

Tree Growing in Window.

Upon the window sill of a doctor's office on the second floor of a building at Independence and Forest avenues is a wooden box tied and nailed firmly to the woodwork. The box is only about eight inches wide and ten inches deep, but out of the earth with which it is filled there is growing a sycamore tree nearly ten feet tall and its trunk three inches thick near the roots. The tree trunk is tied and strapped to the sides of the window. Its foliage covers the whole upper half of the window and a part of the adjoining wall. The tree absorbs from the box a great deal of water in a day.—Kansas City Star.

Ship With a Hundred Paddles.

An entirely new idea in the propelling mechanism of vessels has been patented by a Massachusetts man. A glance at the illustration will suffice to show the theory of his invention. Many such schemes look good on paper, but a practical demonstration is always necessary to prove their worth. This mechanism is located amidships in a vessel and below the keel, and consists of numerous paddles working in sprocket wheels. These paddles do not extend at each side of the vessel, but are located within the interior in pairs. To secure the greatest efficiency of propulsion, the paddles are set at an angle with the bottom of the boat, so that when they are doing service in the water their submerged portions will incline toward the bow of the vessel. This will tend to raise the bow as the vessel is propelled, the paddles leaving the water freely and with less tendency to retard the progress of the vessel as they leave the water. The great number of paddles engaging the water at the same time, the inventor claims, will give such constant and advantageous hold upon the water that the propelling power is exerted to the greatest advantage and attainment of speed.

A Certain Sandwich Man.

At the noon hour a prominent Wall Street banker was hurrying out of his office when he suddenly stopped upon noticing a man across the street, and tipped his hat very respectfully. The man was carrying a sandwich board emblazoning the merits of a near-by quick-lunch parlor, and looked altogether seedy. A friend of the banker, who had observed the momentary performance, started to guy him. "Who's your friend?" he asked. "He is a man I have considerable respect for," was the reply. "He was once a prosperous citizen down here, and worth several hundred thousand. He lost everything, and finally had to come to this. Even the best of us are liable to go the same way, you know, and that is why I am not afraid to be respectful to a once brilliant man."—New York Correspondence Pittsburg Dispatch.

Lost Arts of Egypt.

Analyses of weapons and tools, dating from very ancient times in Egypt, have convinced the American members of the Anglo-Egyptian Archaeological Expedition that the old Egyptians used pure copper in the manufacture of such objects. They displayed much ingenuity in manipulating that metal. A chisel was made by folding thin strips of copper over one another and then forging them into a solid blade, while hollow needles were formed from copper-leaf by a method very similar to that employed at the present day in making heliacal tubing for bicycles and automobiles.

CHEWING GUM FOR THE WORLD.

Its History and Manufacture---Origin in the Spruce Forests of Maine---Making the Modern Kind.

Not quite everybody in America chews gum, but among its devotees to-day are to be found people of all ages and conditions, and it is now some years since the only patrons of the industry were children. It's a big business now, too, the total product of the country footing up to $8,000,000 a year wholesale, and in view of the fact that the product is generally sold in one-cent packages, this means at least 800,000,000 retail sales a year.

Gum chewing is essentially an American habit, though it is now making its way in other countries, notably in South America and recently in England and other European countries. The old theory that so much chewing altered the shape of the jaws and destroyed the contour of the face was harped upon for a long time in order to discourage the habit among young women, but this has finally been given up. So have the jibes of the comic paragraphers and the objections of the writers on etiquette. Instead of all this, wing gum is now sometimes served with the bonbons at the end of a ceremonious dinner. Doctors—some of them in Europe—are [illegible] about its value as an aid to digestion and a preservative of the teeth, and some of them actually prescribe its use for some of their patients. Since the Spanish-American War, when e gum makers of this country pa[illegible] ne Government $800,000 in special stamp taxes, the industry is supposed to have very nearly doubled in volume.

With all this change, which has come in the last decade or so, chewing gum is as yet made only in America. More, indeed, than this is true. Though the great chewing gum trust is now ten years old and is presumably flourishing, controlling nine or ten brands, it makes in no one place as much gum as is made in one independent factory in this city, and of 4,500,000 pounds of raw material from which practically all gum is now made, and which comes from Mexico, more than 600,000 pounds, or over one-eighth of the whole, is used annually in Philadelphia.

The origin of the chewing gum habit is undoubtedly to be traced to the woodsmen of the spruce forests of Maine, who found chewing the raw, unsweetened gum which exuded from the spruce trees pleasant and perhaps healthful. Gradually there was a growing demand for this gum, and as long as forty-five years ago it was put upon the market in small, raw chunks. In this form it found its way to points far away, but its popularity was never very great and the business was always a very small one. Then came the idea of white wax, which was simply paraffin and sugar kneaded together, rolled into sticks or strips and wrapped in tissue paper. This found great favor with the children, but not with grown people, and though its manufacture was regularly engaged in in various parts of the country it never assumed large proportions.

About thirty-five years ago the sap of the sapota tree, now known to the trade as "chicle gum," was brought to this country as a substitute for Para rubber, which it was thought to resemble. But it was found that it would not vulcanize and so could not be used. But being purely vegetable, was hit upon by the chewing gum makers and found to fill all demands. Now practically all the chewing gum is made of this chicle. Immense tracts of land in Yucatan and Tuxpan, Mexico, are devoted to its cultivation, and the entire crop comes to the American chewing gum factories.

The raw chicle gum, of a light brown, chocolate color, reaches the factory in large cakes and is stored in bins on the top floor. Here it is broken into smaller pieces by cleavers and fed into grinding mills, which, with 2300 revolutions a minute, soon reduce it to a powder of the size of ground coffee. These mills, by the way, are the only ones of the kind in the country, and were invented and made in this Philadelphia factory. When ground, the pieces of sapota bark and other extraneous matter are picked out by hand, the operators here being young girls. Then the ground chicle is dried by being placed in trays and run into chambers furnished with steam pipes, with forced drafts, to warm and dry, and a separate suction chute to draw out the damp air. These drying chambers have fans revolving 1200 times a minute and a total capacity of 16,000 pounds, the drying process requiring a full week.

On the same floor are the sugar mills, which grind the toothsome and important ingredient of the finished product into an impalpable powder, in which condition it is flowed to the gum making floor below, where the three ingredients are mixed in hoppers without being permitted to touch human hands. On the gum making floor, in huge mixing pots or caldrons, which are furnished with revolving paddles, the gum, sugars, medication and flavor are blended at the rate of 600 pounds every twenty minutes for each mixer. Then the mixture is kneaded by men with heavy gloves and passed through six sets of rollers, sizing it as it passes along and dusting it with powdered sugar constantly. The surplus sugar in this operation is caught by a device beneath the rollers and after being strained and sifted is ready to use again.

Now the gum is in long, soft cakes and ready for the scoring machines, which cut it nearly through in sizes to fit the particular brand which is being manufactured. After scoring it runs to the breaker machines, which break it up along the scored lines and then it falls on sieves, which allow the surplus sugar to separate from it. Now, if the gum is to be of the pillow shape, which has become so popular, it goes to the pan room, in which each separate globule gets its candy coating. Forty-two candy pans, which make this the largest candy pan room in the world, are here constantly revolving, being watched by operators who supply the candy covering as it is required until each globule is of the necessary size, being built up just as a snowball is made to increase in size by rolling in the snow. Then the globules go to the finishing pans, where more revolving and rubbing one against the other, with the addition of a little sweetened beeswax, puts the polish on.

Wrapping and packing the finished gum is, of course, an important part of the business. The globular gum is carried by endless belts from the polishing pans to the table, where it falls into the boxes in which it is sent out. The stick gum, which does not go to the pans, is wrapped both by hand and by machinery. Hand wrapping is done by girl[illegible], who become very expert, doing as many as 6000 tablets in a single day. Wrapping by machinery is done at the rate of 24,000 packages a day. This includes putting on the tissue paper, tinfoil and label. In the factory where these processes were observed there are twenty-five of these machines, with a steady average output of 20,000 packages each a day, and the establishment is so far behind in the filling of its orders that it is about to erect a new building, larger than the one it now occupies. The output named is for stick gum, and is in addition to the 2,000,000 pieces of the candy coated gum produced every working day, or at the rate of 600,000,000 a year. These, if placed in a straight line, would reach a distance of 7645 miles, or if laid in a single sheet, or layer would cover ninety-four acres. Such a product would weigh 3,750,000 pounds, or 1880 tons, not counting wrappers and boxing. Of its total value of $3,000,000, the Government would get $90,000 as duty on the gum, while the sugar in it would cost $80,000 and something like $36,000 the cost of its flavoring. Its transportation would cost upward of $50,000, and the cost of packing would be over $141,000. Making this much candy coated gum gives a year's employment to 250 people, not counting the clerical force of the factory, nor the hundreds of Indians who gather the raw gum in the Mexican plantations.

Everything is very clean in a chewing gum factory of the proper sort. All ingredients are cleansed before using, and though the gum is touched hardly at all by the hands of the operators, the utmost strictness is observed in the sanitary conditions of the establishment.—Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune.

Weeklies Delivered Free.

Country publishers should know that weekly papers are to be delivered free of postage on rural routes within the county in which they are published. It appears that some postmasters have insisted that newspapers published in the county and delivered by carrier should pay the cent-a-pound rate, but the Third Assistant Postmaster-General in a letter bearing on the subject makes the ruling that such weekly papers are to be delivered over rural mail routes without the payment of postage.

According to the postal regulations, too, if a subscriber to a county paper resides within the county where the same is "printed in whole or in part, and is published," he is entitled to receive his copy thereof from the postoffice at which he regularly receives his mail, though such office may be outside of the said county."

Had Their Ears Pulled.

The French in ancient times had a queer way of closing a trade of land. When the title was formally to be transferred the parties to the transaction met in the presence of twelve men and twelve boys, all of whom were witnesses to the sale. The means adopted to make the boys remember the event was unique. Each of them had his ears pulled until he squealed like a pig and then received a sound thrashing. The impression made by this treatment was strong and lasting, you may be sure, and the boys never forgot what they witnessed.

Yellow Glasses For Sensitive Eyes.

Motais has been prescribing for fifteen years in cases of ultra-sensitiveness to light glasses of a yellowish tint, slightly orange, with a brownish tint on reflection. They increase the perception of light, while soothing the eyes. The yellow tint evidently prevents the passage of the chemical rays to some extent. These yellow glasses, he states, will be found far superior to smoked or blue glasses, while they do not impair the vision. When they are taken off even the most brilliant sunlight seems dead and lifeless in comparison.—American Journal of Homeopathy.

NEW YEAR'S CALLS

A New Drink to Replace Time "Apple-Jack."

Twenty-five years ago the [illegible] of making New Year's calls a delightful one for all concerned, some of the boys got more [illegible] or "apple-jack" than they could successfully carry.

Then the ladies tried to [illegible] ble and the gentlemen tried [illegible] chivalrous as ever and stay [illegible] the same time.

If anyone thinks there has [illegible] considerable improvement in the last quarter of a century in the use of alcoholic beverages, let him stop to consider, among other things, the fact that the old custom of New Year's calls and the gentlemen [illegible] is nearly obsolete.

The custom of calling on friends, however, at the beginning of the new year, is a good one, and another good habit to start at this time is the use of well-made cocoa instead of coffee or spirits.

A Staten Island doctor has a [illegible] ble daughter who has set [illegible] fore her guests as a good [illegible] drink at Yule Tide, and a [illegible] to begin the New Year. [illegible] writes:

"My daughter and I [illegible] Postum for some time past [illegible] feel sure it contains wholesome material.

"I shall not only recommend [illegible] my patients, but my daughter is [illegible] most pleased to give a dollar's worth of Postum to our Christmas and New Year's callers." Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

POOR MIDDLE CLASS.

Reformers Fail to Consider Sad Plight.

While Mrs. Norton and her sister philanthropists are devoting their lives to the comfort of the poor, and Mrs. Blaine is erecting model habitations for the helpless rich, who is giving a thought to the sufferings and annoyances of the middle classes? Why should so much time and energy be expended on extremes while the mean is struggling against the most discouraging conditions? The rich have their troubles—as who has not—and the poor are entitled to a measure of human sympathy, but what are their petty griefs and discomforts as compared with the overwhelming burdens of downtrodden middle class. The rich buy their assistance and relief; the poor are accustomed by habit and circumstances to assist and relieve themselves; the plain middle class folk cry out in their dire extremity: "Save us, or we perish!"

The model tenement or apartment for the middle class should be a compromise between the Ghetto plan and the Lake Shore drive idea. It should be entirely devoid of the frills that so plainly annoy Mr. Bartzen. Or, if there are any frills at all, they should be in the rear of the apartment, where the frilly lady commonly resides. The usual apartment occupied by the middle class person who has an income not to exceed $20,000 a year—a mere bauble in this area of prosperity—is ridiculous in its failure of provision for Scandinavia. The lady with the linen telescope arrives, takes one look at the limitation of a closet where she is supposed to slumber at intervals, or the basement room provided for all domestics, says something (probably offensive) in a strange and unfamiliar tongue, and departs for Mrs. Blaine's rest cure, where the families have relays of help and day and night shifts. How can the middle class avail against such opposition as that?

As a representative of this suffering stratum of society, madam asserts that Bartzen is wholly in the wrong and that she speaks up for all the frills so dear to Mrs. Norton's heart, including the gymnasium, hospital and amusement hall. The gymnasium and amusement hall are for the benefit of the lady help, the hospital for the enforced accommodation of the mistress of the apartment. She believes also in a rear sitting room, large enough to hold a piano of ordinary dimensions, and in a conservatory filled with horticultural allurements, from the waving palms to orchids, whither in resting periods the lady help may resort and dream of the old home and the luxuries thereof. Other features have suggested themselves to madam which are likely to be approved by all intelligent housekeepers. A guest room for the lady help is indispensible, a room in which she may lodge a friend who is temporarily unemployed and who is resting before taking up again the burden of life at the Raymond. Just off this guest room should be a separte bathroom, with a shower and other appurtenances, in order that the lady help may not be embarrassed by surrendering her own bathing conveniences to her visiting friend. Special attention should be paid to closets, large and airy enough to accommodate the picture hat and the contents of the linen telescope. The lady help is particular in the matter of suitable closet room.

The ideal kitchen is the necessary concomitant of the ideal apartment. It should be arranged so as to contain the icebox and one or more rocking chairs. A kitchen without an icebox and rocking chair is an absurdity in these days of luxurious domestic service. Special attention should be paid to the gas stove, and only that design should be put in which enables the lady help to perform the culinary functions without stooping over to inspect the broiler. A lady help in these days should never be asked to stoop or otherwise lower and demean herself. —Chicago Tribune.

CIRCUS TOUR IN AUTOMOBILES.

To Abandon Railroad Method of Transportation After This Season.

Barnum & Bailey's "Greatest Show on Earth" has sounded the doom of the picturesque six, eight and ten horse circus driver and of the gorgeously caparisoned and plumed steed of the parade. The organization will tour the country in mammoth automobiles, beginning next year, it was announced by "Tody" Hamilton.

With the news of this radical departure from all custom and tradition came information of the dissolution of the Circus Trust and the resumption of the old time hostility. This will mean a renewal, after this year, of the bitter warfare which characterized circus conduct until the late James A. Bailey formed a friendly business union.

For many years the expense of railroad transportation has been a source of growing alarm to the circus proprietor. Railroads do not want the job of hauling the big three section organization. The work delays passenger traffic, and the danger of accident, involving tremendous damages, is great. Several railroads have gone to the extremity of positively refusing to accept the business and others have made rates so high that circuses cannot travel on their lines with profit.

Mr. Bailey appreciated the urgency of overcoming this condition long before his death last spring and had settled upon the automobile as the solution. Before the electric and and gasolene mode of transportation had reached its present high state of efficiency he once nearly decided to return to the "wagon show" days, when horses furnished the motive power, but the modern necessity of long "jumps" forced him to abandon the plan. His show took to the road from Madison Square Garden last April with several experimental automobiles. These have demonstrated their ability so conclusively that next year will see the canvas enterprise moved from town to town by chauffeur and battery.

The Barnum & Bailey circus numbers one hundred and twenty-five wagons—pole, canvas, baggage, property, cage, tableau and chariot vehicles—and the average daily run is sixty miles. Sometimes the distance reaches a hundred or more miles, but only on a Sunday. The average daily railroad bill approaches one thousand dollars.—New York Herald.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "In Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed or absent monthly period), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the

POOR MIDDLE CLASS.

Reformers Fail to Consider Sad Plight.

While Mrs. Norton and her sister philanthropists are devoting their lives to the comfort of the poor, and Mrs. Blaine is erecting model habitations for the helpless rich, who is giving a thought to the sufferings and annoyances of the middle classes? Why should so much time and energy be expended on extremes while the mean is struggling against the most discouraging conditions? The rich have their troubles—as who has not—and the poor are entitled to a measure of human sympathy, but what are their petty griefs and discomforts as compared with the overwhelming burdens of downtrodden middle class. The rich buy their assistance and relief; the poor are accustomed by habit and circumstances to assist and relieve themselves; the plain middle class folk cry out in their dire extremity: "Save us, or we perish!"

The model tenement or apartment for the middle class should be a compromise between the Ghetto plan and the Lake Shore drive idea. It should be entirely devoid of the frills that so plainly annoy Mr. Bartzen. Or, if there are any frills at all, they should be in the rear of the apartment, where the frilly lady commonly resides. The usual apartment occupied by the middle class person who has an income not to exceed $20,000 a year—a mere bauble in this area of prosperity—is ridiculous in its failure of provision for Scandinavia. The lady with the linen telescope arrives, takes one look at the limitation of a closet where she is supposed to slumber at intervals, or the basement room provided for all domestics, says something (probably offensive) in a strange and unfamiliar tongue, and departs for Mrs. Blaine's rest cure, where the families have relays of help and day and night shifts. How can the middle class avail against such opposition as that?

As a representative of this suffering stratum of society, madam asserts that Bartzen is wholly in the wrong and that she speaks up for all the frills so dear to Mrs. Norton's heart, including the gymnasium, hospital and amusement hall. The gymnasium and amusement hall are for the benefit of the lady help, the hospital for the enforced accommodation of the mistress of the apartment. She believes also in a rear sitting room, large enough to hold a piano of ordinary dimensions, and in a conservatory filled with horticultural allurements, from the waving palms to orchids, whither in resting periods the lady help may resort and dream of the old home and the luxuries thereof. Other features have suggested themselves to madam which are likely to be approved by all intelligent housekeepers. A guest room for the lady help is indispensible, a room in which she may lodge a friend who is temporarily unemployed and who is resting before taking up again the burden of life at the Raymond. Just off this guest room should be a separte bathroom, with a shower and other appurtenances, in order that the lady help may not be embarrassed by surrendering her own bathing conveniences to her visiting friend. Special attention should be paid to closets, large and airy enough to accommodate the picture hat and the contents of the linen telescope. The lady help is particular in the matter of suitable closet room.

The ideal kitchen is the necessary concomitant of the ideal apartment. It should be arranged so as to contain the icebox and one or more rocking chairs. A kitchen without an icebox and rocking chair is an absurdity in these days of luxurious domestic service. Special attention should be paid to the gas stove, and only that design should be put in which enables the lady help to perform the culinary functions without stooping over to inspect the broiler. A lady help in these days should never be asked to stoop or otherwise lower and demean herself. —Chicago Tribune.

CIRCUS TOUR IN AUTOMOBILES.

To Abandon Railroad Method of Transportation After This Season.

Barnum & Bailey's "Greatest Show on Earth" has sounded the doom of the picturesque six, eight and ten horse circus driver and of the gorgeously caparisoned and plumed steed of the parade. The organization will tour the country in mammoth automobiles, beginning next year, it was announced by "Tody" Hamilton.

With the news of this radical departure from all custom and tradition came information of the dissolution of the Circus Trust and the resumption of the old time hostility. This will mean a renewal, after this year, of the bitter warfare which characterized circus conduct until the late James A. Bailey formed a friendly business union.

For many years the expense of railroad transportation has been a source of growing alarm to the circus proprietor. Railroads do not want the job of hauling the big three section organization. The work delays passenger traffic, and the danger of accident, involving tremendous damages, is great. Several railroads have gone to the extremity of positively refusing to accept the business and others have made rates so high that circuses cannot travel on their lines with profit.

Mr. Bailey appreciated the urgency of overcoming this condition long before his death last spring and had settled upon the automobile as the solution. Before the electric and and gasolene mode of transportation had reached its present high state of efficiency he once nearly decided to return to the "wagon show" days, when horses furnished the motive power, but the modern necessity of long "jumps" forced him to abandon the plan. His show took to the road from Madison Square Garden last April with several experimental automobiles. These have demonstrated their ability so conclusively that next year will see the canvas enterprise moved from town to town by chauffeur and battery.

The Barnum & Bailey circus numbers one hundred and twenty-five wagons—pole, canvas, baggage, property, cage, tableau and chariot vehicles—and the average daily run is sixty miles. Sometimes the distance reaches a hundred or more miles, but only on a Sunday. The average daily railroad bill approaches one thousand dollars.—New York Herald.

Cures Woman's Weaknesses.

We refer to that boon to weak, nervous, suffering women known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Dr. John Fyfe one of the Editorial Staff of THE ECLECTIC MEDICAL REVIEW says of Unicorn root (Helonias Dioica) which is one of the chief ingredients of the "Favorite Prescription":

"A remedy which invariably acts as a uterine invigorator * * * makes for normal activity of the entire reproductive system." He continues "in Helonias we have a medicament which more fully answers the above purposes than any other drug with which I am acquainted. In the treatment of diseases peculiar to women it is seldom that a case is seen which does not present some indication for this remedial agent." Dr. Fyfe further says: "The following are among the leading indications for Helonias (Unicorn root). Pain or aching in the back, with leucorrhœa; atonic (weak) conditions of the reproductive organs of women, mental depression and irritability, associated with chronic diseases of the reproductive organs of women; constant sensation of heat in the region of the kidneys; menorrhagia (flooding), due to a weakened condition of the reproductive system; amenorrhœa (suppressed or absent monthly periods), arising from or accompanying an abnormal condition of the digestive organs and Anæmic (thin blood) habit; dragging sensations in the extreme lower part of the abdomen."

If more or less of the above symptoms are present, no invalid woman can do better than take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, one of the leading ingredients of which is Unicorn root, or Helonias, and the medical properties of which it most faithfully represents.

Of Golden Seal root, another prominent ingredient of "Favorite Prescription," Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says:

"It is an important remedy in disorders of the womb. In all catarrhal conditions * * and general enfeeblement, it is useful."

Prof. John M. Scudder, M. D., late of Cincinnati, says of Golden Seal root:

"In relation to its general effects on the system, there is no medicine in use about which there is such general unanimity of opinion. It is universally regarded as the tonic useful in all debilitated states."

Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Medical College, says of Golden Seal:

"Valuable in uterine hemorrhage, menorrhagia (flooding) and congestive dysmenorrhœa (painful menstruation)."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription faithfully represents all the above named ingredients and cures the diseases for which they are recommended.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies; those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the Cotton Crop Estimates.

In the opinion of W. H. Moler this year's cotton crop contains more low grade staple than in many years which will have the effect of putting a high premium on middling and better qualities. The world's consumption of American cotton is estimated by European and American experts at between 12,300,000 and 12,350,000 bales.

Cotton has advanced one cent a pound within the last two weeks.

Mr. Moler's estimate of the American crop fir 1906 is 12,100,000 bales.

The annual estimate of the American cotton crop issued by Dick Bros. & Col. places the yield of 1906 at 12,-114,000 bales.

Of the cotton growing states Texas ranks highest as a producer, its crop being estimated at 3,763,000 bales; Georgia comes next with 1,527,000 bales; then Mississippi with 1,426,000 and Alabama with 1,093,000 bales.

FUNERAL CORTEGE

Over One-Third of Wealth of United States Represented at Funeral.

SENDS FLOWERS TO HOSPITALS.

Every Wheel on Nearly 5000 Miles of Railways Stops For Five Minutes as Mark of Respect.

Washington.—All that is mortal of Samuel Spencer, late president of the Southern Railway whose tragic death on his own road on the morning of Thanksgiving day, shocked the people of two hemispheres, was laid to rest in the receiving vault of Oak Hill cemetery, there to await final disposition.

A notable tribute was paid to the memory of the distinguished railroad magnet by statesmen and by menemi nent in all the walks of public life. The final obsequies were held in historic St. John's Protestant Episcopal church and were attended by railroad officials, financiers and public men from all parts of the country. Many of them were lifelong associates.

Shortly before 1:30 p. m., the officers and employes of the Southern railway, 319 in number, assembled at the general office of the company, and proceeded in a body to St John's church. They were headed by thefour general superintendents of the company, Foraker, Loyal, Richey and Coapman—and included General Passenger and Traffic Manager Hardwick, General Passenger Agent Tayloe and assistant General passenger Agent Carey. Practically all the officers throughout the system of nearly 5000 miles were in attendance.

Joining their friends of the Southern railway in paying respects to President Spencer were representatives of the Mobile and Ohio, Georgia, Southern and Florida, the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific, the New Orleans and Northeastern, the Central of Georgia, the Atlantic Coast Line, the Seaboard Air line, the Chesapeake ond Ohio, the Pensylvania and the Norfolk and Western.

Among the distinguished people who attended the church services were Vice President Fairbanks, Justice White of the supreme court of the United States Senator and Mrs. Foraker of Ohio; Senator Bacon of Georgia, Governor Swanson and Senator Martin if Virginia, Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock and former Senator Henry G. Davis of West Virbinia.

Just at 2 o'clock the soft strains of Chopin's funeral march pealed through the church from the organ. At the same instant, throughout the system of railroads lately presided over by Mr. Spencer, every train came to a dead stop, every wheel ceased to turn, every employee put aside his work. For five minutes over thousands of miles of railway every employee paid silent respect to the dead president. To the funeral march the surpliced choir of forty mail voices silently entered the church and ranged itself on each side of the altar.

The choir was followed by the Right Rev. Henry V. Satterlee, bishop of Washington; Rev. Dr. Roland Cotton Smith, rector of St. John's, and assistant rector of the church.

Directly after J. Pierpont Morgan of New York, a lifelong friend and business associate of Mr. Spencer; First Vice President Andrews and Second Vice President Finley of the Southern railway entered the pew reserved for them. They were followed by the funtral party, the great concourse of people rising and remaining standing staning as the casket bearing the remains was placed in front of the altar and the members of the family were ushered to their seats.

It was particularly appropriate that the body bearers should have been selected from among the colored porters of the Southern Railway. All of them have been in the employ of the company for many years, several of them nearly a life time, and all of them were known personally to President Spencer.

Following the body came the honorary pall-bearers, all of them personal and official friends of Mr. Spencer. They were personally presidents or high officials of the railroads of America, and it was noted, either personally or by proxy, they represented quite one-third of the vast wealth of the United States. E. H. Harriman, a life time friend, was one of the last to trrive at the church The funeral service was strictly in accordance with the ritual of the Protestant Episcopal church.

Cotton Warehouse Burns.

Camp Hill, Ala.—Fire destroyed Fargason's new warehouse and about 200 bales of cotton, a carload of seed hulls, Robinson's machine shop and equipment and a carload of wagons and some buggies and farm machinery belonging to Seroyer & Co.

No insurance except on the vehicles and part of the cotton. Total loss about $15,000.

Toulon, France.—Admiral Touchard's squadron has sailed for Tangier.

Convicted of Misappropriating Funds.

Birmingham, Ala.—Gordon DuBose, former president of the First National Bank of Ensley, was convicted in the federal court of misapplying the funds of the bank and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

The case has occupied the attention of the court for more than a week and was strenuously fought by the government and the defendant. The indictment returned by the grand jury charged the defendant with embezzling, abstracting and misapplying the funds of the bank to the extent of $48,000 and was based upon a series of notes which DuBose had discounted without putting up any collateral security.

New Paper at Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala.—H. S. Ryall, John S. Sparrow and John R. Hornady, all well-known newspaper men, will on January 1 start a new morning paper in Birmingham to be known as the American. Mr. Ryall has gone North to buy machinery and secure press service. The project is said to have good backing, but who the capital is to come from is not stated.

Surveying New Road.

Sylacauga, Ala.—A corps of surveyors of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad Company are now located about six or seven miles south of town, near Stewartsville, in Coosa county, making a preliminary survey of a road to run from Clay county intersection of the main line in the direction of Selma.

Given Fifty Years.

Montgomery, Ala.—The jury in the case of Eugene Dowling, the white carpenter charged with criminally assaulting his beautiful 16-year-old daughter, Daisy, returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at fifty years in the penitentiary.

Will Be Siam's Adviser.

Cambridge, Mass.—Prof. Henry Edward Strobel Bemis, professor of international law at the Harvard Law School, has tendered his resignation from that chair and will assume a position permanently with the government of Siam as general adviser. Professor Strobel was formerly connected with the United States legation at Madrid.

Killed by Cattleman.

Ardmore, I. T.—Sol Oates, a jointist at Dougherty, I. T., was shot three times and instantly killed by Bose Johnson, a wealthy cattleman of the Chickasaw nation. It is said that Oates while intoxicated went to the home of Johnso nand started the trouble.

Washington.—Paymaster O'Leary, the pay officer of the armored cruiser Tennessee, which acted as a convoy for the Louisiana on its trip to Panama with President Roosevelt, came to Washington from Newport News and entered an empahtic denial of the stories that the stokers of the Tennessee mutinied, making it necessary to put sixty of the men in the brig.

Kick on Bill of Fare.

Macon, Ga.—The prisoners in the Bibb county jail are kicking about the meals which are served to them. They say that the only square thing they see about the meals served to them is the hunk of corn bread, which comes regularly. They receive two meals a day, and they are very good as far as they go, but they don't go, they say, far enough.

Tennessee's Official Vote.

Nashville, Tenn.—The official vote for governor at the recent election in this state fellows: Patterson, democrat, 111,869; Evans, republican, 92,-812; Ray, socialist, 869.

Killed by Dynamite.

Knoxville, Tenn.—A disastrous explosion occurred at Moccasin Gap, Va., twenty miles west of this place. A force of four men and a foreman names of all unknown, were instantly killed by a dynamite blast.

San Domingo Quiet.

San Domingo.—The United States gunboat Marietta, with United States Minister Dawson on board, has arrived from Porto Rico. The country is quiet.

Siege Ended.

San Salvador.—The state of siege in the Republic of Salvador, which was proclaimed at the time of the discovery of the plot against the government, September 11, ended Saturday.

Uniform Box Rent.

Washington.—D. C.—An order has been issued by First Aassistant Postmaster-General Hitchcock, effective January 1, looking toward the adoption of uniform rates of rent for boxes in postoffices.

Syndicate Is Completed.

London.—The syndicate planned by Speyer & Co., of New York; Speyer Bros., of this city, and the Hong Kong and Shanghai Bank of London for the reconstruction of the Manila Railway Company and an extension of its line, is completed. The capital, $25,000,000, was oversubscribed.

There will be an oil pipe line across the isthmus.

PEOPLE WHO GET STRANDED.

When It is Advisable to Make Sacrifices in Regard to Salary.

Some people are models of reliability and industry as long as they are moving along a beaten track. But they have very little initiative or originality, and if unlucky enough to lose their situation they are hopelessly stranded.

After seeking for a berth for a long time without success, they can devise no other way of making a living, and if they possess friends, gradually resign themselves to being kept by them.

Being out of a situation too long is always risky, and this should make a man very careful not to give up one berth before he can secure another, even if his present place is a poor one. If he does find himself "out," he should lose as little time as possible in trying to obtain fresh employment of some sort.

It is much better to make sacrifices with regard to salary and position, to put one's pride in one's pocket, and determine to work all the harder to make up the leeway than to risk becoming a confirmed idler.

As long as a man keeps his working powers intact, no matter how humble a position he occupies, he has the chance of making his way.

When it is difficult to obtain a situation in the same line of business, it is often advisable to change one's vocation altogether and to learn a new one if possible.—Scottish American.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Art thou a beggar at God's door, be sure thou gettest a great bowl, for as thy bowl is so will be thy mess. According to thy faith, saith He, be it unto thee.—John Bunyan.

Kind looks, kind words, kind acts and warm handshakes — these are secondary means of grace when men are in trouble and are fighting their unseen battles.—John Hall.

I have looked up every Scripture where anything like meditation is mentioned, and I find that we are never once told to meditate upon sin. —W. H. Griffith Thomas.

Who is meant by our neighbors we cannot doubt; it is every one with whom we are thrown into contact, he or she, whosoever it be, whom we have the means of helping.—Dean Stanley.

You can help your fellow men; you must help them, but the only way you can help them is by being the noblest and the best man that it is possible for you to be.—Phillips Brooks.

Who could believe that from that unpromising bulb would spring the gorgeous flower enveloped in its sheltering leaves? Yet such shall be our body then compared with our body now.—E. H. Bickersteth.

The cure for heartache is to be found in occupations which take us away from our petty self regardings on self pityings, our morbid broodings, and which connect our life with other lives and with other affairs; or merge our individual interest in the larger whole.—Charles G. Ames.

If there be a pleasure on earth which angels cannot enjoy, and which they might almost envy man the possession of, it is the power of relieving distress. If there be a pain which devils might pity man for enduring, it is the death bed reflection that we have possessed the power of doing good, but that we have abused and perverted it to purposes of evil. —Lacon.

By giving to the repetition of an act of duty a fixed regularity, I can multiply my moral power in that direction as much as a man multiplies his material power when he gets hold of a lever. By faithful habit I can make that which was at first laborious come to be after a while less difficult, then easy, and perhaps at last spontaneous and delightful.—G. S. Merriam.

Sam Lewis' Millions.

The death of Mrs. Sam Lewis-Hill releases for charitable purposes two or three million pounds in which her late husband, the noted money lender, bequeathed her a life interest.

Mrs. Hill's first husband, the money lender, left her the whole of his large fortune, which was estimated at the time to amount to $20,000,000, for her life, with the stipulation that on her death $5,000,000 of it should go to King Edward's hospital fund.

Mrs. Lewis about two years ago married a young lieutenant of the Scots Guards named Hill, who had to resign from his regiment in consequence of the alliance, although the bride sent a check for $25,000 to the Guards' charities, in a vain attempt to mollify Hill's brother officers. They accepted the money, but remained obdurate.—London Special to New York Sun.

Black Walnut.

Black walnut is produced in this country at an annual rate of about 33,000,000 feet. The larger portion of it now comes from Southwestern Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Indian Territory, although there is some scattering growth still picked up in Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee and West Virginia. The most considerable stand of the wood remaining east of the Mississippi River is on the upper waters of the Guyandotte River in West Virginia. The home demand for black walnut lumber is only for comparatively small quantities. Its use is largely confined to gun stocks, novelties, electrical work, etc. The chief demand for walnut comes from Germany, and Hamburg is the commercial centre of the market.—The Southwest.

Nominations.

Washington.—The president has sent to the senate the following nominations:

Register of the land office at Gainesville, Fla., Henry S. Chubb.

Receiver of public moneys at Gainesville, Fla., Shields Warren.

Commissioner of corporations, Herbert Knox Smith, Connecticut.

Captain on active list to be rear admiral on retired list, Franklin J. Drake.

Postmasters — Arkansas, E. Hall Stuttgart; Indian Territory, E. A. Martin, Marietta; W. H. Harrison, Poteau; Mississippi, Emma Harris, McHenry; Oklahoma, G. Y. Walbright, Stroud; South Carolina, G. E. Smith, Mullins.

General Electric Tied Up.

Schenectady, N. Y.—The 2,500 members of the industrial workers employed at the General Electric Works who ceased work Monday because the company refused to reinstate several discharged employes, went back to the works Tuesday morning, but at 9 o'clock walked out in a body. They made no demonstration.

The company employes 15,000 hands the majority of whom are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, which is not concerned in the present trouble. There has been bad feeling between the I. W. W. and A. F. L. for some time and it is understood that the federation has volunteered to the company to fill the places of the striking I. W. W.

Poultry Show at Mobile.

Mobile, Ala.—Entries to the third annual poultry show of the Mobile Poultry Breeders' Association will close Saturday and from the number coming in it is the impression if Secretary Hayssen that the exhibits at the approaching show will be larger, much finer and covering a much larger range of breeds than any previous exhibit. About a thousand exhibits will be had this year, embracing all kinds of fancy and pet fowl and stock ,Belgian hares and pigeons. Extensive exhibits are to be made by breeders of Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi and Georgia and many northern states.

PostMaster-General's Report.

Washington, D. C.—The annual report of Postmaster-General Cortelyou reviews the work of the department for the past year, gives in detail the postal revenue and expenditures, discusses important changes that have been made in departmental organization and makes such suggestions and recommendations as appear to be warranted.

The following is a statement of the department's finances:

The receipts for the year were $167,932,782.95; the expenditures, $178,449,778.89; excess of expenditures over receipts, $10,516,995.94.

Contract Let for New Railway.

Jackson, Miss.—The New Orleans and Great Northern road, better known as the Goodyear system, has awarded a contract to C. D. Smith & Co., of Memphis and Birmingham, general contractors, for the construction of their line in a northeasterly direction up the Pearl river valley from Jackson to Edinburg, on the eastern border of Leake county, and the grading will be commenced by the first of January.

Only One Chief Left.

Manila.—Full reports from the Island of Leyte show that the fight on December 5 between the troops and constabulary and a band of Pulajanes was an important victory for the government. Four Pulajane leaders were killed, leaving only one important chief still at large. The bandits lost forty-three killed. Major-General Wood has ordered the troopers of the Seventh cavalry to participate in the active persuit.

Increase Asked for Rural Carriers.

Washington, D. C.—Congress has been asked to increase the compensation of rural letter carriers from $700 to $900 per annum. Senator Clay introduced a bil providing for the increase. He thinks the rural carriers are entitled to such an increase inasmuch as they provide their horses and vehicles.

Macon Fire Loss $250,000.

Macon, Ga.—Fire broke out in the large retail dry goods establishment of Burden, Smith & Co., completely destroying the immense stock and building, which fronts on three streets. The building and stock were destroyed, 135 persons as an immense stock of holiday goods had been opened.

Shot by Thief.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Marshall Harvey, a railroad watchman, was shot by a coal thief whom he had halted. Harvey was struck by three out of four shots fired at him, a bystander getting the other. Harvey is very seriously wounded.

CONGRESS MEETS AGAIN

The Fifty-ninth Convenes For Its Short Session.

The Question of the Dismissal of the Negro Troops Immediately Brought to the Senate's Attention.

Washington, D. C.—The second session of the Fifty-ninth Congress convened. It had not got its machinery started before the predictions of those who have been expecting excitement were verified. Two of the stanchest Republican Senators, Foraker and Penrose, introduced resolutions demanding from the President information on his discharge of a battalion of negro troops before the Senate had even notified the President that it was in session and ready to transact business.

Within ten minutes after the Senate met the matter had been brought up by Senator Penrose. It was an absolutely unprecedented interruption of the regular procedure.

The Senate opened with the usual round of cordial greetings and the accompanying display of ermine and winter millinery in the galleries. There were no new faces at the second session; no new Senators stalking into the Senate chamber to be piloted about by the pages or pointed out by the Capitol guides to visiting sightseers who occupy their time speculating as to how many millions the new Senator may have.

One incident of the opening that created comment was the fact that the Empire State had full representation for the first time in almost a year. Both Senators Platt and Depew were present.

There were hundreds in the waiting line of the Senate galleries when the gavel of the Vice-President fell and the chaplain, the Rev. Edward Everett Hale, prayed thankfully to the Lord, who had "led the people through the temptations of prosperity."

The first legislative act was the swearing in of Senator-elect Henry A. Du Pont, the new Senator from Delaware, who was escorted to the desk by his colleague, Senator Allee.

Senators Hale, of Maine, and Pettus, of Alabama, were appointed a committee to wait upon the President.

It was rather a sombre convening of the House of Representatives. The new rule forbidding the display of flowers upon the desks of members operated to maintain the monotonous color scheme.

Just as the clock was on the stroke of 12 Speaker Cannon appeared at his desk. His presence brought a hearty outburst of applause. The proceedings were begun with prayer by Chaplain Couden.

A call of the roll developed the presence of 294 members. "A quorum," said Speaker Cannon, whereupon the Representatives elected to fill vacancies were presented, and, after their credentials were read, sworn in.

Mr. Cushman (Rep., Wash.) announced the presence of Frank H. Waskey, the first delegate elected from Alaska. His credentials were read and the oath of office administered to him by the Speaker.

Messrs. Payne, of New York; Boutelle, of Illinois, and Williams, of Mississippi, were appointed to join Senators Hale and Pettus in the duty of notifying the President that Congress was ready to receive any communication he may have to make.

Deaths of members that occurred in the recess of Congress were announced as follows:

By Mr. Lowden, that of R. R. Hitt. By Mr. Payne, that of General J. H. Ketcham. By Mr. Nelson, that of H. C. Adams. By Mr. Gillette, that of Rockwood Hoar.

The usual resolution of regret in each case was adopted, and at 12.55 o'clock, as a further mark of respect, the House adjourned. The Senate had already adjourned after having been in session forty-four minutes.

ELIJAH DOWIE INSANE.

Founder of Zion Loses Senses While Delivering an Address.

Chicago.—John Alexander Dowie, the founder of Zion City, went raving mad while delivering a sermon to a few faithful of his flock. Little hope is entertained of his recovery. Unless he improves he will be taken to an insane asylum, where he will probably spend the remainder of his days.

While it was known that his mind had been failing for some time, his seizure was most dramatic. "Elijah III.," as Dowie is popularly known, preached in Shiloh House in the evening to about 200 of his followers. He had not gone far before his auditors saw that something unusual was the matter with the white-haired old man.

The audience was dismissed without further ceremony and the news quickly spread through Zion that the former autocrat of the city was hopelessly crazy.

FEATURES OF PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

President Roosevelt in his message to Congress specifically recommends:

The passage of a law prohibiting corporations from contributing to political campaign expenses.

The passage of a law conferring upon the Government the right of appeal in criminal cases, on questions of law.

A law modifying the use of the injunction in labor cases.

That the crime of criminal assault should always be punished by death; that such assault, attempted, should also be made a capital crime, at the discretion of the court; that the trial and punishment of these cases should be swift, and that the victim should be shielded in the giving of testimony.

A law limiting the number of hours of railroad employes.

A drastic child-labor law for the District of Columbia and the Territories.

An addition to the employers' liability law placing the entire "risk of a trade" on the employer—in other words, making the employer directly responsible for compensation in the case of death or accident, where this occurs in the legitimate line of duty.

A law for a Federal strike investigation commission.

A law providing for the withdrawal of coal lands from sale or from entry, save in special circumstances.

An addition to the packing house inspection law providing that a date shall be put on the label, and charging the cost of the inspection to the packers.

A graduated income tax law and a graduated inheritance tax law. Says the man of great wealth owes State a peculiar obligation and should pay for protection he receives and as a means of reaching private fortunes unduly or dangerously swollen.

National legislation on the whole question of marriage and divorce.

A ship subsidy bill.

An amendment to the law which would enable the Secretary of the Treasury to treat funds derived from customs duty as he treats funds obtained under the international revenue laws.

A law providing a lower tariff or absolute free trade in Philippine products.

A law enabling Porto Ricans to become American citizens.

A law providing for the naturalization of Japanese; and an amendment to the present Federal statutes which will enable the President to enforce the rights of aliens under treaties.

Revision and amendment of the laws for the protection of the seals within the jurisdiction of the United States.

In addition to the specific recommendations mentioned above other interesting features of the message are:

A discussion of the use of the legal injunction in labor questions.

A discussion on the subject of public criticism of judges.

A discussion on the subject of lynching and race prejudice.

A discussion of questions affecting capital and labor, of the menace of demagogues, and of strikes.

A suggestion that combinations of capital are necessary and that it is unfortunate that the present laws forbid, instead of sharply discriminating between those which do good and those which do evil; a discussion of corporations.

An emphatic approval of more technical and industrial training institutions throughout the country.

Two paragraphs discussing the home in which are references to the question of race suicide.

A brief presentation of the most prominent currency reform plans.

A long discussion, under the head, "International Morality," of the Japanese question presented in California, in which the shutting out of Japanese from the public schools in San Francisco is characterized as "a wicked absurdity."

A brief review of recent history in Cuba, with the hope that the next Cuban Government will run more smoothly, that the "insurrectionary habit" will not become so fixed as to lead to a second intervention by the United States.

A review of the conditions in South and Central America.

A presentation of the fur seal situation, drawing attention to the rapid process of destruction of the seal and to the necessary preventive measures.

A discussion of the subject, "peace and righteousness," in which the President repeats his previously expressed ideas about "just wars."

A lengthy review of Navy and Army affairs; a request that the Navy be maintained at its present strength by the building of at least one first-class battleship each year; a recommendation of the principle of selection in promotion, and of the establishment of shooting galleries and rifle clubs throughout the country.

L. L. DILWORTH ENDS HIS LIFE.

Wealthy Pittsburger Shoots Himself in a Mysterious Manner.

Pittsburg, Pa.—One of the biggest sensations since the suicide of Thomas O'Connor Jones here developed when it became known that Linford L. Dilworth, bachelor member of one of the oldest and most wealthy families of Pennsylvania, had committed suicide. Mr. Dilworth, who was a member of some of the most exclusive clubs of Pittsburg as well as New York, shot himself through the head at an unnamed place in Allegheny and was taken to the home of his brother, J. C. Dilworth, where he died later. He was fifty years old and worth a million.

CORNELL BOYS DIE IN CHAPTER HOUSE FIRE

Three Prominent Ithacans, Volunteer Firemen, Also Perish.

SEVEN STUDENTS WERE HURT

Members of Chi Psi Fraternity Sacrifice Their Own Lives to Rescue Comrades Penned in Upper Stories—Victims Trapped Asleep.

Ithaca, N. Y.—Four men students of Cornell University and three members of the Volunteer Fire Department of Ithaca were killed and seven students were injured in the burning of the Chi Psi Fraternity house on Cornell campus. Two bodies remain in the ruins.

Thirty students lodged in the house, which originally was the McGraw-Fiske mansion, and was the most palatial fraternity lodge at any college in the United States. All except three escaped when the fire was discovered roaring up both stairways at 4 o'clock a. m. Two of the victims died as heroes, returning to rescue comrades, and the three firemen were killed together under a falling wall.

Students Dead.

Grelle, Ferdinand W., twenty, South Orange, N. J., freshman in engineering school; body missing.

McCutcheon, James, Jr., Pittsburg, halfback on Cornell eleven, sophomore class; died in hospital.

Nichols, William Holes, Chicago, senior class; body not positively identified.

Schmuck, Oliver Leroy, Hanover, Pa., senior class; jumped from third story after trying to rescue Nichols; died in hospital.

Volunteer Firemen Dead.

Landon, E. J., salesman, Ithaca.

Robinson, Alfred S., lawyer, Ithaca, graduate of Cornell.

Rumsey, John C., hardware merchant, Ithaca.

Students Injured.

Pope, Clarence J., East Orange, N. J., freshman; football eleven; went back to rescue comrade; probably fatally burned.

Curry, Henry M., Pittsburg; burned attempting with Pope to rescue a comrade.

DeCamp, H. S., New York.
Goetz, W. W., Milwaukee.
Powers, R. R., Atlanta.
Sailor, G. R., Pittsburg.
Uiblein, H. A., Milwaukee.

The fire started in the kitchen, and when H. S. DeCamp, a New York student, who lodged on the third floor, was awakened by smoke and gave the alarm, the flames had reached the hall on the first floor and started up both stairways, cutting off escape from the upper floors.

DeCamp shouted to awaken the men on the third floor and ran through the blinding smoke to the attic. From a window he slid down the vines and ran to another chapter house and a student there sent in an alarm from the nearest box on the campus.

Most of the students roomed on the third floor, and they were confronted by injury if they jumped, death if they remained.

Oliver Schmuck got safely out of the building before he discovered that his roommate, Nichols, had not followed him. He dashed back through the flames, but could not find his friend. Driven, finally, to save himself, he had to jump from a third-story window. His charred body was unconscious when carried away and he died within a few hours.

McCutcheon gave his life, too, remaining too long to assist other boys to escape. He roomed with Curry and Pope. McCutcheon was made helpless before he would consent to flee. Then his comrades put him on the coping outside a window, and having nothing with which to lower him to the ground, had to leave him there while to save their lives they escaped from the flames that drove them out of a window. When men from a neighboring fraternity house got a ladder up to the window McCutcheon was nearly dead.

Grelle and Nichols finally retreated to the tower, where from a window they called for help. The volunteer firemen had arrived by this time, having taken a half hour to get their apparatus up the steep hills that are everywhere in Ithaca. They were stringing a hose alongside the tower when the two students appeared there. It was impossible to rescue them, and they hesitated to jump.

Firemen and students in horror watched the flames, fanned by a forty-mile gale, lick up the structure below the helpless boys. Suddenly the tower crumbled, the two penned-in victims fell with it, and underneath were three of the firemen volunteers.

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Profit by the Experience of One Who Has Found Relief.

James R. Keeler, retired farmer, 2nd Pleasant St., Cazenovia, N. Y., says: "About fifteen years ago I suffered with my back and kidneys. I doctored and used many remedies without getting relief. Beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills, I found relief from the first box, and two boxes restored me to good, sound condition. My wife and many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and I can cheerfully recommend them."

STUDIED DANCES OF INDIANS.

Mlle. Gabrielle Spent Years in Effort to Trace Origin of Gyrations.

Mlle. Gabrielle spent nearly two years among the Indians of America studying their dances to see if he could discover from their gyrations a clew to their origin.

He found among the Pueblos forms which convince him that their religious dances were of Chinese, or at least of Oriental origin, while he firmly was convinced that the Apaches derived their war dances, their sun dances and other ceremonial dances from Asiatic forms.

Among the northern Indians he declares he found semblance to Icelandic—and therefore Norge dances—and traces of old Jewish ceremonial dances, especially in their council lodge dances.

The ancient dance of the Eskimos was a chief feature of their festivals. The natives formed in a group, in the center of which stood the chief performer.

He sang a weird song, beating time on a drum, gesticulating and dancing like a madman.

Sometimes the song was meant merely for the entertainment of the company, who held hands and circled around him like children do when they play "Frog in the Meadow."

But generally the song and dance had a ceremonial, if not a religious, significance. The man in the center launched a satirical "nith song" against another Eskimo, who made significant responses.

Perhaps the strangest of dances is that of the wild Hairy Ainu, the mountain savages of Japan. In one of their few public semi-religious festivals the girls put on long yellow gowns painted with rude splotches of white and red, and with a mottled bear cloth slung over their backs. The significance of this peculiar garment has not been revealed to travelers who have seen their dances.

Two little children are placed in the center of a cleared circle, and two oddly dressed Ainu girls go around and around, calling out certain words repeatedly and hopping always on one foot.

The dance in a slight way is said to resemble the "Sir Roger de Coverley," and, though it is uncouth and barbarous to a degree, it is not without a certain wild beauty.—Chicago Tribune.

Lava, it is said, retains its heat longer than any other known substance. It has been known to remain at boiling point a foot below its surface for fifty-three years.

NO MEDICINE

That Change of Food Gave Final Relief.

Most diseases start in the alimentary canal—stomach and bowels.

A great deal of our stomach and bowel troubles come from eating too much starchy and greasy food.

The stomach does not digest any of this starchy food we eat—white bread, pastry, potatoes, oats, etc.—these things are digested in the small intestines, and if we eat too much, as most of us do, the organs that should digest this kind of food are overcome by excess of work, so that fermentation, indigestion, and a long train of ills result.

Too much fat also is hard to digest and this is changed into acids, sour stomach, belching gas, and a bloated, heavy feeling.

In these conditions a change from indigestible foods to Grape-Nuts will work wonders in not only relieving the distress, but in building up a strong digestion, clear brain and steady nerves. A Wash. woman writes:

"About five years ago I suffered with bad stomach—dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation—caused, I know now, from eating starchy and greasy food.

"I doctored for two years without any benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me. I could not eat anything without suffering severe pain in my back and sides, and I became discouraged.

"A friend recommended Grape-Nuts and I began to use it. In less than two weeks I began to feel better and inside of two months I was a well woman and have been ever since.

"I can eat anything I wish, with pleasure. We eat Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and are very fond of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Equal to the Emergency.

"So you break our engagement, Gwendolen!" he exclaimed, bitterly. "Then in your presence let me end the life which you have blighted!"

Drawing forth a vial marked "poison," he put it to his lips, and drained it to the last drop. As he sank back unconscious, did the beautiful girl fling herself upon his breast in an agony of remorse and burst forth into frenzied sobs? Scarcely!

Hastily quitting the room, she returned presently, her lovely face tragic, yet composed. Kneeling beside the young man she forced between his lips the following: (1) One cup of turpentine; (2) one pint of milk; (3) a bowl of warm soapsuds; (4) a small bottle of aromatic ammonia; (5) a cup of black coffee; (6) a glass of mustard water; (7) a gill of vinegar; (8) juice of a lemon; (9) the beaten whites of six eggs; (10) one cup of flour and water.

"Algenon," she observed, as he began to revive, "it is evident you did not know that I am a graduate of a correspondence course in first aid to the injured. My one regret is that, since it was impossible for me to ascertain whether the poison you took was an acid or an alkali, I was compelled to administer all the antidotes of which we had learned."—Woman's Home Companion.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder, curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous diarrhea), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections, it is often successful in affecting cures.

The "Favorite Prescription" is advised for the cure of one class of diseases—those peculiar weaknesses, derangements and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nervine. For weak worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulæ of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines.

The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

Paper From Cotton Stalks.

The manufacture of paper from the fiber of cotton stalks is one of the latest inventions which are said to have passed the experimental stage. It is asserted that all grades of paper, from the best form of linen to the lowest grade, can be manufactured from cotton stalks. In addition to this, a variety of by products, such of alcohol, nitrogen, material for gun cotton and smokeless powder can also be secured in paying quantities. Mills for the use of cotton stalks in that way may become general in the cotton-growing states. It is estimated that on an area of land producing a bale of cotton, at least one ton of stalks can be gathered. Upon this basis, from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 tons of raw material could be secured for the production of paper, which would increase the value of the South's cotton crop nearly $10,000,000. A company has been organized under the laws of the State of Maine, with a capital stock of $15,000,000, preferred and common, for the purpose of manufacturing pulp and paper from cotton stalks.

Wicked Johannesburg.

Miss Agnes E. Slack, of London, secretary of the World's Christian Temperance Union, said that Johannesburg is about the wickedest spot on earth. The very air there seemed to her charged with the fever of accumulating wealth from the gold mines, and society from top to bottom is dishearteningly sordid. In the Dutch districts, where the people make their living growing grapes for the wine markets of Europe, she said the negroes are generally paid part of their wages in intoxicants, with the result that they all become beastly drunk several times a week. Ladysmith, she said, with all its monuments and graves on the mountain around, is a gloomy settlement.

The Western provinces of Cape Colony, she said, are exquisitely beautiful, and several of the towns literally blazed with gloriously colored flowers. Purples, reds, pinks and yellows there mingled in brilliant profusion. Ferns that are rare in Western hothouses grow there in abundance.—Baltimore Sun.

Good Manners.

An ambassador of a well-known European monarch was riding in the streets of Constantinople when one of the Sultan's carriages rolled by. Seeing it was guarded, his curiosity got the better of him, and when the carriage reached him he was daring enough to peep in at the passenger.

He was surprised and pained to receive a blow in the face from an attendant in charge. Mad with rage, he demanded audience of the Sultan.

The Sultan listened attentively, and for a moment appeared lost in thought. At last he spoke: "My dear———, I have gone carefully into the case and see exactly how it stands. You are, of course, a gentleman, therefore you would never have committed such a breach of good manners as you allege to have taken place. Therefore no attendant could possibly have struck you. The whole affair seems to be a product of your fancy. Let us dismiss it."

A German-Made Town.

According to Consul Jones, in Dalny Manchuria, the Germans have done a to be the greatest number of bricks Tsingtau, China, which is in their hands. The authorities have been conducting a department of forestry and the barren hills of a few years ago are now covered with young forests. Millions of young trees have been set out, and the work has been taken up by the Chinese.

Just outside the city the Germans have built a model village for the Chinese, with broad streets and small but well-constructed brick houses. There are regulations which require the city to be kept clean and they are obeyed. The Chinese have plenty of breathing space and there is no crowding.

The health of the city is always good. Strict hygienic methods are enforced. The city is surrounded with beautiful drives and everything bears evidence of the strictest care. Recently the Germans have opened a European school. There is a model abattoir presided over by a competent veterinarian. The abattoir is fitted with all modern appliances. The The most scrupulous cleanliness prevails. A model truck farm and dairy also add to the comfort of the people.

A business done directly with the United States is the exportation of straw braid. This staple has been diverted from other ports in China. Tsingtau has now become the principal market for straw braid.

The Right to Live.

At the age of fourteen Harold's father gave him a ten thousand-dollar motor car.

Harold was delighted.

He ran it about for several months to the exclusion of everything else.

After this Harold wanted another. He got it.

Next year Harold went in for motor boats. In a couple of years more, however, they had worn themselves out.

At twenty Harold was married. Divorced at twenty-two.

To sum up: At thirty there was nothing else for him to do. He had done every pleasure. And there were no new ones being invented.

Suddenly, however, Harold's parents died and left him fifty millions.

He was about to despair there being no use for the money, when suddenly he realized that the world at large hated and despised him.

"At last," said Harold with a sense of supreme satisfaction, "I am happy once more. I have a new sensation."—Life.

An Old Medicine.

"Ground oyster shells," said the physician, as he squeezed a lemon over his blue points, "were used as a medicine by the mediaeval doctors—a medicine for the rickets and scrofula."

"How absurd!"

"Absurd? Not at all. Oyster shells contain lime, nitrogen, iron, sulphur, magnesia, bromide, phosphoric acid and iodine. Those are all excellent tonics.

"You know how hens eat ground oyster shells and thus produce eggs with good, thick, strong shells? Well, as the oyster-shell powder acts on egg-shells so I have no doubt it acted in the middle ages on the bending, crumbling bones of the rickety, puting strength and firmness into them.

"Ground oyster shells, I am convinced, would be good things for frail children today. They would strengthen the frame, increase the appetite and have a splendid effect on the teeth."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Succession to Austrian Throne.

In connection with the death of Archduke Otto, second nephew of the Emperor Francis Joseph, it is interesting to take note of the curious chain of succession to the throne of Austria. When Archduke Franz Ferdinand, who was heir to the throne after the death of Prince Rudolph, contracted a morganatic marriage with the Countess Choteh, and so lost the right of transmitting the succession Archduke Otto became heir-presumptive. It was soon evident, however, that if ever he came into the order of succession he would be forced to renounce it in favor of his son Archduke Karl, now 19. Thus it comes about that while the present Emperor was the nephew of the Emperor Ferdinand, he will in all probability be succeeded by Archduke Franz Ferdinand, his nephew, and he in turn by his nephew Franz. Watching His Coat.

An engineer from Sunderland was spending a few days in London with a friend, and after a busy morning sightseeing the Londoner chose a large restaurant for luncheon, thinking it would be a novel experience for the man from the north. The visitor appeared to enjoy his luncheon, but kept looking in the direction of the door. "What are you watching?" asked his friend, rather annoyed.

"Well," was the quiet reply. "A's keepin' an eye on ma topcoat."

"Oh, don't bother about that," said the other, "you don't see me watching mine."

"No," observed the guileless engineer, "thee has no call to—it's ten minutes sin' thine went."

DOES YOUR BACK ACHE?

Profit by the Experience of One Who Has Found Relief.

James R. Keeler, retired farmer, [illegible] St., Cazenovia, N. Y., says: "About fifteen years ago I suffered with my back and kidneys. I doctored and used many remedies without getting relief. Beginning with Doan's Kidney Pills, I found relief from the first box, and two boxes restored me to good, sound condition. My wife and many of my friends have used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results and I can cheerfully recommend them."

STUDIED DANCES OF INDIANS.

M. Gabrielle Spent Years in Effort to Trace Origin of Gyrations.

M. Gabrielle spent nearly two years among the Indians of America studying their dances to see if he could discover from their gyrations a clew to their origin.

He found among the Pueblos forms which convince him that their religious dances were of Chinese, or at least of Oriental origin, while he firmly was convinced that the Apaches derived their war dances, their sun dances and other ceremonial dances from Asiatic forms.

Among the northern Indians he declares he found semblance to Icelandic—and therefore Norge dances—and traces of old Jewish ceremonial dances, especially in their council lodge dances.

The ancient dance of the Eskimos was a chief feature of their festivals. The natives formed in a group, in the center of which stood the chief performer.

He sang a weird song, beating time on a drum, gesticulating and dancing like a madman.

Sometimes the song was meant merely for the entertainment of the company, who held hands and circled around him like children do when they play "Frog in the Meadow."

But generally the song and dance had a ceremonial, if not a religious, significance. The man in the center [illegible] a satirical "nith song" against another Eskimo, who made significant responses.

Perhaps the strangest of dances is that of the wild Hairy Ainu, the mountain savages of Japan. In one of their few public semi-religious festivals the girls put on long yellow [illegible] painted with rude splotches of carmine and red, and with a mottled [illegible] cloth string over their backs. The significance of this peculiar garment has not been revealed to travelers who have seen their dances.

Two little children are placed in the center of a cleared circle, and two oddly dressed Ainu girls go around and around, calling out certain words repeatedly and hopping always on one foot.

The dance in a slight way is said to resemble the "Sir Roger de Coverley," and, though it is uncouth and barbarous to a degree, it is not without a certain wild beauty.—Chicago Tribune.

Lava, it is said, retains its heat longer than any other known substance. It has been known to remain at boiling point a foot below its surface for fifty-three years.

In the opera of Salambo as many as 1,293 people have appeared on the stage at one time. This was at the Paris opera house.

NO MEDICINE

What Change of Food Gave Final Relief.

Most diseases start in the alimentary canal—stomach and bowels.

A great deal of our stomach and bowel troubles come from eating too much starchy and greasy food.

The stomach does not digest any of the starchy food we eat—white bread, pastry, potatoes, oats, etc.—these things are digested in the small intestines, and if we eat too much, as most of us do, the organs that should digest this kind of food are overcome by excess of work, so that fermentation, indigestion, and a long train of ills result.

Too much fat also is hard to digest and this is changed into acids, sour stomach, belching gas, and a bloated, heavy feeling.

In these conditions a change from indigestible foods to Grape-Nuts will work wonders in not only relieving the distress, but in building up a strong digestion, clear brain and steady nerves. A Wash. woman writes:

"About five years ago I suffered with bad stomach—dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation—caused, I know now, from eating starchy and greasy food.

"I doctored for two years without any benefit. The doctor told me there was no cure for me. I could not eat anything without suffering severe pain in my back and sides, and I became discouraged.

"A friend recommended Grape-Nuts and I began to use it. In less than two weeks I began to feel better and inside of two months I was a well woman and have been ever since.

"I can eat anything I wish, with pleasure. We eat Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and are very fond of it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Equal to the Emergency.

"So you break our engagement, Gwendolen!" he exclaimed, bitterly. "Then in your presence let me end the life which you have blighted!"

Drawing forth a vial marked "poison," he put it to his lips, and drained it to the last drop. As he sank back unconscious, did the beautiful girl fling herself upon his breast in an agony of remorse and burst forth into frenzied sobs? Scarcely!

Hastily quitting the room, she returned presently, her lovely face tragic, yet composed. Kneeling beside the young man she forced between his lips the following: (1) One cup of turpentine; (2) one pint of milk; (3) a bowl of warm soapsuds; (4) a small bottle of aromatic ammonia; (5) a cup of black coffee; (6) a glass of mustard water; (7) a gill of vinegar; (8) juice of a lemon; (9) the beaten whites of six eggs; (10) one cup of flour and water.

"Algenon," she observed, as he began to revive, "it is evident you did not know that I am a graduate of a correspondence course in first aid to the injured. My one regret is that, since it was impossible for me to ascertain whether the poison you took was an acid or an alkali, I was compelled to administer all the antidotes of which we had learned."—Woman's Home Companion.

What Do They Cure?

The above question is often asked concerning Dr. Pierce's two leading medicines, "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Favorite Prescription."

The answer is that "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most potent alterative or blood-purifier, and tonic or invigorator and acts especially favorably in a curative way upon all the mucous lining surfaces, as of the nasal passages, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, bowels and bladder—curing a large per cent. of catarrhal cases whether the disease affects the nasal passages, the throat, larynx, bronchia, stomach (as catarrhal dyspepsia), bowels (as mucous diarrhœa), bladder, uterus or other pelvic organs. Even in the chronic or ulcerative stages of these affections it is often successful in affecting cures.

The "Favorite Prescription" is advised for the cure of one class of diseases—those peculiar weaknesses, derangements and irregularities incident to women only. It is a powerful yet gently acting invigorating tonic and nervine. For weak worn-out, over-worked women—no matter what has caused the break-down, "Favorite Prescription" will be found most effective in building up the strength, regulating the womanly functions, subduing pain and bringing about a healthy, vigorous condition of the whole system.

A book of particulars wraps each bottle giving the formulæ of both medicines and quoting what scores of eminent medical authors, whose works are consulted by physicians of all the schools of practice as guides in prescribing, say of each ingredient entering into these medicines.

The words of praise bestowed on the several ingredients entering into Doctor Pierce's medicines by such writers should have more weight than any amount of non-professional testimonials, because such men are writing for the guidance of their medical brethren and know whereof they speak.

Both medicines are non-alcoholic, non-secret, and contain no harmful habit-forming drugs, being composed of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American medicinal forest plants. They are both sold by dealers in medicine. You can't afford to accept as a substitute for one of these medicines of known composition, any secret nostrum.

Paper From Cotton Stalks.

The manufacture of paper from the fiber of cotton stalks is one of the latest inventions which are said to have passed the experimental stage. It is asserted that all grades of paper, from the best form of linen to the lowest grade, can be manufactured from cotton stalks. In addition to this, a variety of by products, such of alcohol, nitrogen, material for gun cotton and smokeless powder can also be secured in paying quantities. Mills for the use of cotton stalks in that way may become general in the cotton-growing states. It is estimated that on an area of land producing a bale of cotton, at least one ton of stalks can be gathered. Upon this basis, from 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 tons of raw material could be secured for the production of paper, which would increase the value of the South's cotton crop nearly $10,000,000. A company has been organized under the laws of the State of Maine, with a capital stock of $15,000,000, preferred and common, for the purpose of manufacturing pulp and paper from cotton stalks.

Wicked Johannesburg.

Miss Agnes E. Slack, of London, secretary of the World's Christian Temperance Union, said that Johannesburg is about the wickedest spot on earth. The very air there seemed to her charged with the fever of accumulating wealth from the gold mines, and society from top to bottom is dishearteningly sordid. In the Dutch districts, where the people make their living growing grapes for the wine markets of Europe, she said the negroes are generally paid part of their wages in intoxicants, with the result that they all become beastly drunk several times a week. Ladysmith, she said, with all its monuments and graves on the mountain around, is a gloomy settlement.

The Western provinces of Cape Colony, she said, are exquisitely beautiful, and several of the towns literally blazed with gloriously colored flowers. Purples, reds, pinks and yellows there mingled in brilliant profusion. Ferns that are rare in Western hothouses grow there in abundance.—Baltimore Sun.

Good Manners.

An ambassador of a well-known European monarch was riding in the streets of Constantinople when one of the Sultan's carriages rolled by. Seeing it was guarded, his curiosity got the better of him, and when the carriage reached him he was daring enough to peep in at the passenger.

He was surprised and pained to receive a blow in the face from an attendant in charge. Mad with rage, he demanded audience of the Sultan.

The Sultan listened attentively, and for a moment appeared lost in thought. At last he spoke: "My dear———, I have gone carefully into the case and see exactly how it stands. You are, of course, a gentleman, therefore you would never have committed such a breach of good manners as you allege to have taken place. Therefore no attendant could possibly have struck you. The whole affair seems to be a product of your fancy. Let us dismiss it."

A German-Made Town.

According to Consul Jones, in Dalny Manchuria, the Germans have done a to be the greatest number of bricks Tsingtau, China, which is in their hands. The authorities have been conducting a department of forestry and the barren hills of a few years ago are now covered with young forests. Millions of young trees have been set out, and the work has been taken up by the Chinese.

Just outside the city the Germans have built a model village for the Chinese, with broad streets and small, but well-constructed brick houses. There are regulations which require the city to be kept clean and they are obeyed. The Chinese have plenty of breathing space and there is no crowding.

The health of the city is always good. Strict hygienic methods are enforced. The city is surrounded with beautiful drives and everything bears evidence of the strictest care. Recently the Germans have opened a European school. There is a model abattoir presided over by a competent veterinarian. The abattoir is fitted with all modern appliances. The The most scrupulous cleanliness prevails. A model truck farm and dairy also add to the comfort of the people.

A business done directly with the United States is the exportation of straw braid. This staple has been diverted from other ports in China. Tsingtau has now become the principal market for straw braid.

The Right to Live.

At the age of fourteen Harold's father gave him a ten thousand-dollar motor car.

Harold was delighted.

He ran it about for several months to the exclusion of everything else.

After this Harold wanted another. He got it.

Next year Harold went in for motor boats. In a couple of years more, however, they had worn themselves out.

At twenty Harold was married. Divorced at twenty-two.

To sum up: At thirty there was nothing else for him to do. He had done every pleasure. And there were no new ones being invented.

Suddenly, however, Harold's parents died and left him fifty millions.

He was about to despair there being no use for the money, when suddenly he realized that the world at large hated and despised him.

"At last," said Harold with a sense of supreme satisfaction, "I am happy once more. I have a new sensation."—Life.

An Old Medicine.

"Ground oyster shells," said the physician, as he squeezed a lemon over his blue points, "were used as a medicine by the mediaeval doctors—a medicine for the rickets and scrofula."

"How absurd!"

"Absurd? Not at all. Oyster shells contain lime, nitrogen, iron, sulphur, magnesia, bromide, phosphoric acid and iodine. Those are all excellent tonics.

"You know how hens eat ground oyster shells and thus produce eggs with good, thick, strong shells? Well, as the oyster-shell powder acts on egg-shells so I have no doubt it acted in the middle ages on the bending, crumbling bones of the rickety, puting strength and firmness into them.

"Ground oyster shells, I am convinced, would be good things for frail children today. They would strengthen the frame, increase the appetite and have a splendid effect on the teeth."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Succession to Austrian Throne.

In connection with the death of Archduke Otto, second nephew of the Emperor Francis Joseph, it is interesting to take note of the curious chain of succession to the throne of Austria. When Archduke Franz Ferdinand, who was heir to the throne after the death of Prince Rudolph, contracted a morganatic marriage with the Countess Choteh, and so lost the right of transmitting the succession Archduke Otto became heir-presumptive. It was soon evident, however, that if ever he came into the order of succession he would be forced to renounce it in favor of his son Archduke Karl, now 19. Thus it comes about that while the present Emperor was the nephew of the Emperor Ferdinand, he will in all probability be succeeded by Archduke Franz Ferdinand, his nephew, and he in turn by his nephew Franz. Watching His Coat.

An engineer from Sunderland was spending a few days in London with a friend, and after a busy morning sightseeing the Londoner chose a large restaurant for luncheon, thinking it would be a novel experience for the man from the north. The visitor appeared to enjoy his luncheon, but kept looking in the direction of the door. "What are you watching?" asked his friend, rather annoyed.

"Well," was the quiet reply. "A's keepin' an eye on ma topcoat."

"Oh, don't bother about that," said the other, "you don't see me watching mine."

"No," observed the guileless engineer, "thee has no call to—it's ten minutes sin' thine went."

If this good vessel speeding bore
But those forsaking things unmeet,
Like meaner thought and grosser aim
And lust that leaves the heart awreck
And littleness and senseless blame,
Would you be standing on this deck?"

Ah, no! I fear that I would gaze

Among others reports was one that Perry had said that he knew that his master was murdered by a tinker, and another that he had confessed that he saw him killed and robbed by a gentleman's servant, and described where his body was secreted, but a careful search failed to discover it.

The clergy, the officers of justice and many of his relatives then waited upon Perry, and earnestly exhorted him to make a full confession, suggesting a freer forgiveness of Heaven for a confessed fault, and likewise holding out the hope of more lenient treatment from the officers of the law. These exhortations were not without their effect, and he sent word to the magistrate that he had concluded to make a full confession, and desired to be again examined. He was accordingly again interrogated, and confessed that he knew that his master had been murdered, but denied having had any hand in it himself, nor could he tell who had committed the deed. This was not satisfactory, the magistrate insisting that if he knew his master was murdered, he must know, also, who committed the crime.

At last Perry confessed that he did know, and on being further urged said that the murder had been committed by his own mother and brother. On hearing this, the magistrate cautioned him to consider well what he said, as the words might cost his relatives their lives.

The prisoner responded that he had fully considered everything, and again asserted that he spoke the truth, and the truth only. He then gave a long and circumstantial relation of the whole plot.

He said that ever since he had been in Mr. Harrison's service his mother and brother had been tempting him to steal for them, and finally desired him to inform them when his master went to collect the rents, for they could then waylay and rob him. He said that when his mistress sent him to seek his master he met his brother at the gate. They talked for some time, when a man passed by a few rods from them and entered his master's grounds. Supposing it to be his master, and that he had collected a large amount in rents, he advised his brother to follow and waylay him in the shadow of the thick foliage, while he himself would give him an opportunity by walking about in the adjacent fields while the deed was being committed. After waiting a considerable time, he followed his brother into the grounds, and soon found his master lying on the sward, his brother being on him, and his mother standing by.

On being asked by the magistrate if his master was then dead, he replied that he was not, that after he reached him he heard him cry:

"Ah, rogues! will you kill me?"

He further said that, when he saw his dear, good master struggling in their grasp his heart relented, and he began to beg for his life, when his brother said, "Hush, you fool!" and proceeded to strangle him.

A bag of money was then taken from his person and given to his mother, and she secreted it. He and his brother, he said, carried the body into an adjoining field, and finally to the river, over half a mile distant.

His mother and brother then went home, while he lingered about the gate, and finally met William Reed, as before mentioned. With the dawn of day he started to make inquiries, concerning his master, carrying the hat, headband and comb, which he cut with his knife, and finally left on the highway, where they were found.

This confession was made with such apparent candor and profusion of detail, that it was at once accepted as the true history of the foul crime. Of course the brother and the mother were instantly arrested, and charged with the deed. They stoutly denied all knowledge of it, and when confronted by their accuser, he coolly reiterated his statement, and when a small piece of cord was taken from his brother's pocket he instantly exclaimed that it was the cord with which his late master has been strangled. To all assertions of innocence on their part he responded with a solemn oath, that all he had spoken was the truth.

In a few months they were all brought to trial, and all pleaded not guilty. When his former confession was read to him Perry stated that he was mad then, and knew not what he said. Of course, he was disbelieved, and all were convicted and hung, all protesting their innocence to the last.

And now comes the curious part of this strange history. About five years after the execution of Perry and his supposed accomplices, William Harrison, for whose murder they had suffered, unexpectedly made his appearance in the village of Campden. The sensation created by his advent was profound. At first he was shunned by his late acquaintances, and even by members of his own family, as a terrible specter from the grave; but he finally persuaded them that he was a body of veritable flesh and blood, and gave the following extraordinary account of his disapearance:

He said that when he was on his return from his collecting tour he was met just at dusk by three men, whom he had never seen before, who, without a word of explanation, stopped him, threw a cloak over his head, pinioned his arms, and then carried him to Deal, a seaport some twenty miles distant, where he was kept imprisoned in a lonely house for three days, and finally sold to an Italian captain for seven pounds, kept six weeks at sea, and finally transferred to a Turkish ship, from which he was landed at Smyrna, and sold to an aged physician residing at that port. He attempted several times to explain his position and circumstances to his several masters but they either would not hear, or his ignorance of the language rendered it impossible to make them understand. At length his old master died, and Mr. Harrison, taking advantage of the excitement of his burial, concealed himself on board a Portuguese vessel and was landed at Lisbon, from which point he made his way slowly to England and Campden.

Such was the story related by the returned steward concerning his absence. It is hardly necessary to say that a tale so marvelous did not receive universal credence.

Not a few people believed that for some reason unknown, he desired to leave England for a time, and to avoid scandal, had deliberately left the impression that he had been murdered. What secret complications, what threats of exposure, or what combination of causes forced the necessity upon him, will never be known. Some believed that he was suddenly attacked with insanity, wandered abroad in delirious ignorance, and perhaps imagined the horrors of kidnapping and slavery. Others again credited the story to its fullest extent, and suspected the son, who succeeded to the stewardship, of a desire to secure the position at once, without waiting for his hale parent to vacate it by disease or death.

No farther information was ever obtained, and the case now ranks as one of the most curious in criminal history.—New York Weekly.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

Among the best needle workers in the world are the men of Japan, their chief rivals being the women of Persia.

The E. L. Stewart orchard at Prosser, Wash., is reported sold at $22,000, or $440 per acre, the price being for the fruit, orchard run, on the trees.

Not knowing the nature of a hog a visitor to the farm of Joseph Hilton, East Bradford, Pa., tapped one of his most valuable animals upon the nose with a cane, and it fell dead.

It is estimated than about $100,000,000 worth of soap is used up annually by Americans—over $7,000,000 a month or $250,000 a day. This is based on the fact that there are 20,000,000 families in the United States, and that, conservatively, each family spends on an average of 35 cents a month for soap.

Vegetarians will doubtless hail with delight the advent of a new potato, blue of skin and yellow of interior, which is about to be placed upon the market. This potato is known as the Salanum commersoni violet, and is the result of scientific cultivation at Reading, England. It has a distinct flavor of its own. Epicures describe it as a combined flavor of turnips and asparagus.

In the grounds adjacent to Wentworth castle, in England, is to be seen a unique sun dial, which is composed of a fine yew tree for the pin and closely cropped box bushes for the Roman figures and borderings. It was planted more than two hundred years ago, and is still in a good state of preservation. Its time keeping compares favorably with sun dials of more modern construction.

Prof. Goldwin Smith some time ago formally willed his brains to Cornell University. Some remarkable brains have been sold, not given. An Englishman has disposed of his to an American university for $10,000. He is a man of little education, and for many years worked as a coal miner. He has a marvelous memory, especially for dates, and is now earning a good salary on the music hall stage.

There is nearing completion in the neighborhood of Cameronbridge, England the deepest mineral bore in the world. The object of the bore, which has reached the enormous depth of four thousand feet, was to ascertain whether the lower coal measures existed in the east Fife as they do in the west of the county. At the depth named a seam of splendid splint coal, eight feet in thickness, has been discovered.

The continued drouth is killing trout in the mountain springs by the hundred, says the American Cultivator. Several good trout brooks in Connecticut are practically dry, and their bottoms are covered with dead fish. John G. Hall, who drives the stage between the Berkshire Hills and Winsted, was two hours late arriving there one morning, having spent that time scooping up speckled beauties stranded in pools and placing them further down stream, where there was water.

WEAPON OF THE SAWFISH.

Used Primarily For Grubbing in Mud and Gravel.

The use and significance of that formidable looking weapon, the "saw" of the sawfish, is discussed by P. Pappenheim in a German Natural History periodical. The author points out that the few observers who have seen the animal living have not apparently noticed the real use of the saw. A study of the contents of the stomach of the sawfish, and the peculiar articulation of the skull with the vertebral column, lead to the conclusion that the saw is used primarily for rapid grubbing and burrowing in the mud and gravel. A secondary use may be protective, but there is no evidence that the saw is used as a weapon for ramming. Albert Gunther, in an article on the Rays, to which group the sawfish belongs, says: "The saw is a most formidable weapon of offense, by means of which the fish tears pieces of flesh off the body of its victim, or rips open its abdomen, to feed on the protruding intestines." "Saws' six feet long and one foot broad at the base are of common occurrence.

WISE WORDS.

A man can stand a good many troubles if it isn't the cook.

A man has to have a heap of sense to show any when he is in love.

A man can find out how terribly wicked he is by running for office.

The reason a girl doesn't scream when a man tries to kiss her is somebody might hear.

Most men go on the principle that there will be time enough to repent after you get caught.

When a woman calls her dressmaker a modiste it's a sign the bills aren't paid promptly.

An engaged girl seems to think the rest of her life is going to be something like a matinee.

Either a girl pretends she loves a man when she doesn't or she doesn't when she does.

Half the pleasure in having them is for a woman to speak of her clothes as her wardrobe.

Some men are so self-satisfied they take pride in not having gray hair when they are baldheaded.

This would be a very comfortable world, in spite of our relatives, if nobody ever gave anybody advice.

A useful way for a woman to keep from being scolded by her husband is to do all the scolding herself.

You don't have to be married very long to have your honeymoon seem several centuries back in history.

When a man wouldn't steal an umbrella it's probably because his mind is on something worth while.

A man is so proud to have people think he has more money than he has that he will let them overcharge him.

The only reason people don't like corned beef and cabbage more is because it costs less than nearly all other dishes.

What a woman would like about having her husband President is she would have to dress in a manner suitable to his station.

There is nothing that makes a woman madder than to get a wedding present from a fashionable place and then when she goes to exchange it find only the box came from there. —From "Reflections of a Bachelor," in the New York Press.

Parish Clerk's Tombstone.

In connection with a tombstone in Ecclesall (Yorks) churchyard, on which is inscribed the word "Over," a story is told well worth recording.

The grave is that of an old parish clerk once connected with the church, who was also an ardent cricketer and generally officiated as umpire for the village team. One hot Sunday morning, while the clergyman was delivering his sermon, the old clerk, who sat at his desk at the foot of the pulpit, went to sleep. The sermon having come to an end, every one waited for the clerk to say "Amen!" but, waking up at that moment and having evidently been dreaming of the match of the preceding day, he bawled out in his loudest tones, "Over!"—London Tribune.

Vegetarian Rules.

T. Owen, of Oswestry, who is a vegetarian of sixty-nine, stated at the vegetarian conference in Manchester that for some time he has made it a rule to fast twenty out of the twenty-four hours of each day. He allows himself two meals, and these consist invariably of a little bread or biscuit, fresh dried fruits and a few nuts. To consume these he takes from forty to forty-five minutes, and to each mouthful he administers from fifty to 100 bites. Mr. Owen claims that on this diet he is able to cycle considerable distances and undergo severe mental strain without the least fatigue.—London Daily Graphic.

Blow of a Swordfish.

A remarkable illustration of the force with which a swordfish strikes a blow has recently been reported.

While repairing a ship recently which had completed a long voyage in Pacific waters, a sword was found which had successfully pierced a sheathing one inch thick, a three-inch plank, and beyond that four and a half inches of firm timber. It has been estimated that it would require nine strokes of a hammer weighing twenty-five pounds to drive an iron bolt of similar shape the same distance.—Shanghai Times.

MAN PAYS BOARD TO EARTH.

Simply by Leaving Body to Become Part of General Inheritance.

Science accounts for the coal banked up in the geologic strata by long ages of downpours of steaming mist and warm rain upon the prehistoric earth, feeding fat its fantastic forests. Undoubtedly something of the same process is going on to-day, as it has gone on every year till now, where man has let the rooted life of the planet live its lives out.

Wherever a rocky, broken mountain top or big, long gravelly hill has been worn away at one end or one side by frost and wind, rain and sunshine, snowslides and spring freshets, and even in vacant lots of artificial lands, we witness first the appearance of weeds, then of flowers and grass and finally of trees upon the inhospitable ground.

In the course of time, after the rocks and gravels and silt, the weeds and trees and the fall of the leaf will have laid down the accumulated soil, a few inches, as the case may be, or a few feet in depth.

Meanwhile men and their fellow animals and insects have been evolved and still go on living among the weeds and the trees and off of them, and each one when he dies contributes, with the plants, his little, inconsequent weight of ashes to the soil.

Apparently that is "what we are here for," and there is no evading it. But the ordinary man, whether he is laid in the earth or put into the crematory retort, simply pays his board to the planet like the tree in his quantum of ash. It is evident that this return is nowhere near commensurate with all that he has got out of his brief run (a run being something the handsome 300-year-old elm, or the distinguished 800-year-old oak, never had) upon the face of the globe.

Nor does it represent all that his presence has contributed for better or worse, to his companions. That it is, in obvious fact, such an infinitesimal part of his whole existence only shows how much more important to us, at least, than the things of the flesh and of matter are the things of the mind and of spirit.—Boston Transcript.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Our big sorrows cure our little ones.

Logic is a poor substitute for love.

What Horse Flesh Means.

A question that is now being publicly discussed as to the removal of the Paris horse market has incidentally let in a strong light upon what "horse flesh" means for its unfortunate consumers. At present the market is in the Boulevard Marcel, whence it has to be removed owing to the sale of the site for hospital purposes. The market having to be removed, a strong movement is on foot to have it removed to Vaugirard, where the horse meat market is. The ground upon which this transfer is advocated is significant. There are, of course, several reasons, but the chief argument is that of convenience and humanity. Most of the horses slaughtered can scarcely stand, and to make them walk to Vaugirard is cruel.—London Globe.

Eleven Million Dead Letters.

More than 11,000,000 pieces of mail went astray in these United States last year because they were not directed even well enough for the experts to decipher the names and addresses. Millions of this immense total went to the Dead Letter Office, where a lot of it was opened, the addresses of the writers ascertained and the letters or packages returned. But in a good many cases the writer's address is never found and the letter is really "dead" when neither the sender nor the prospective receiver can be discovered. Assistant Postmaster-General De Graw wants to get people into the habit of writing ther own addresses on the outside of envelopes. This, he says, would save trouble for all hands.—Baltimore Sun.

Tuberculosis and Mummies.

A Frenchman with a lively imagination thinks that the prevalence of consumption in France and Europe generally is largely due to the importation of mummies from Egypt, which started with Napoleon's invasion of that country early in the last century. The Frenchman, Dr. Sornac, declares that mummies and mummy dust spread the bacilli of the disease in question. Such extraordinary vitality is incredible that the idea is not to be considered for an instant without corroboration from other experts. There are enough other ways to account for the existence of tuberculosis without blaming the mummies.

Notice to Subscribers.

The first of January will soon be here, and we want all who owe the Advocate for one year and more to come forward between now and January 1, 1907, and pay up. We have asked some of you several times to pay your subscription and we are getting tired of that, and if you who owe don't pay up as we have stated, by January 1, we are going to proceed to collect at once. We want to thank those who have paid up to January 1, June 2 and for the year 1907. Delinquent subscribers should remember the above and pay up. It takes money worry, hard work and a little of everything else to run a paper.

Subscribers who [illegible] express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals the publisher may continue to send them until all the dues are paid. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the postoffices to which they are directed, they are responsible until they have settled their bills and ordered them discontinued.

If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former address, they are held responsible.

The courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud

If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice at the end of the time if they do not wish to continue taking the paper; otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it and the subscriber will be responsible until an express notice, with payment of all arrearages, is sent to the publisher.

THORSBY ITEMS.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. C. Neal returned last Thursday from an extended visit with relatives and friends in Indiana and Ohio. Adolph Lund, K. M. Paulson and Oliver Jesmie are here again to spend the winter. Among others from the North who expect to spend the winter here we notice Mrs. Marshall and daughter, Kate, and Miss Mina Bruce, from Leechburg, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Olson, from North Dakota. W. C. Edler was here Friday hustling for business. S. E. Norton went to Chicago Tuesday morning. He expects to spend several weeks there S. B. Groves returned from Ohio last week. J. M. Grant, of Cooper's, spent part of Thursday here, and attended the F. E & C. U. meeting at Collins' Chapel. I. E. Sarber spent a day here last week looking after his water works, which P. C. Smith has turned over to him again. Mr. Smith has moved back to his farm, just outside of town. C. L. Waldrop, of Montgomery, was here last week and engaged in preliminary work for the small experiment patches or farms which the United States Department of Agriculture proposes to establish among the farmers.

THORSBY R. F. D. NO. 1.

Editor Union:

Will you permit a new intruder into the circle of Union members? It being my first attempt, I'll not stop long. We regret that our old mail carrier is with us no longer, but nope the new one will do as well as "Teddy" did, although some found room for censure, but people never get so good on earth but that some will find fault. Well, well, didn't "Brown Eyes" put us to the top of the market? Come again, "Brown Eyes," but get better experienced first. Not all of the people are so hard to please. I for one am not so easily pleased, especially if I meet up with a crowd of "Big I's" and "Little U's," such as you are almost daily thrown in contact with. As for the mail business, we had a good carrier, and we are hoping for another just as nice. J. W. Hayes will remain on the route for a few days yet, when we will look for our new carrier. Some of the girls say that the reason that so many stamps are not used now is that time does not afford the opportunity it did a few weeks ago. What has become of so many of our correspondents? Cedar Groveite, where are you? Come along and let's make The Union even more interesting than it is now. Come again, "Brown Eyes," and tell us the rest. Then I'll put in my "clash" again. Succes to our kind editor and his host of readers. BLUE EYES.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

Mrs. Crumpton has returned from Selma in greatly improved health through the treatment of her nephew. Dr. G. DuBose. Dr. Golson, of Prattville, has attended Mrs. O'Neal, who has recovered from a very serious illness. Much patriotism was discharged here Thanksgiving Day. Several entertained and a number of turkeys came to an untimely end. Mr. Merchant has added a fine soldier boy to our ranks—after a while. Mrs. R. H Martin has a fine daughter. Mrs. Claude Kelley, her sister, from Selma was with Mrs. Martin. Mrs. Lawrence was badly hurt while feeding a pet calf. It knocked her down. Miss Alpha Smitherman, of Clanton, is visiting relatives here. Mrs. Emma Ingram has visited her brother her, John Braden. Miss Louise Plant and her grandmother, Mrs. Brown, of Woodlawn, ate their Thanksgiving dinner with Mrs. Plant here. Mrs Mattie Youngblood and brotner, Dave Garner, of Selma, spent Thanksgiving with "the old folks at home." Mrs. Saportas has visited her friends at Randolph, Mr. Brand's family. Sallie Bowline is with her aunt at Centerville Mrs. Snead. Harvey Crumpton, of Evergreen, was here on a visit to his cousin T. U. Crumpton. Arthur Dedrick bruised his hand while handling machinery, which necessitated a trip to Selma for treatment. John Blalock has gone into business at Selma. Mrs John Foshee has visited her parents in Birmingham. Success to The Union

"O."

MAPLESVILLE, ALA.

Editor Union:

Just a little space in your good paper to talk to the voters of Chilton about stock law. We see the matter discussed from both sides, but there is a difference in knowing a thing and guessing at it. Some people are guessing that it is stock law they need, but it will be too late if you get it to remedy your mistake. It will be better for those with plenty of money and plenty of land, but for the poor man and renters it will be the worst thing they ever had imposed upon them We've been fighting for liberty and freedom, and we have it, but just vote in stock law and we will have neither liberty, freedom, peace, milk, butter nor anything but poverty and confusion. It is idle talk to speak about keeping a cow on one or two acres of pasture. Try it and see if it will do Now, if you expect to have any meat milk or butter, every one of you go out on the 15th and put an end to stock law talk. There is a little corner in Chilton down near the Dallas county line that has stock law, and a certain man was paid a nice little sum to work the matter up and get it through, and that man lived there one year and then sold his farm and moved out. It was not what he thought it would be You had better think over this matter well before you cast your vote The people of Chilton have been casting their votes right, and, boys, if you want to stay right give stock law a deadly blow the first pull. If you only knew the evils of it you would not hesitate an instant to put an end to it once for all. Don't forget to pile up the votes against stock law on the 15th. Success to The Union and its readers. W. Y. NIX.

A PENNSYLVANIA LETTER.

Day, Clarion Co., Pa., Dec. 6, 1906.

Mr. Editor:

I wish you would please find space in your valuable paper for a few line from Pennsylvania. I went from here to Alabama on November 19 to look for a farm, and between Birmingham and Thorsby I met with the editor of The Union. When I heard that he edited a paper in Chilton county I asked him what it was worth a year and he said $10.00, but he sold it for $1.00, so I gave him my name and the money, and when I got home on Thanksgiving Day the paper was here and I've enjoyed reading it very much. I like Alabama first rate, and think I shall buy me a farm there very soon. I see you are going to vote on stock law on January 15. I'd like to tell you the way we do here in Pennsylvania. We keep our stock on our own land, and that saves me 400 rods of fence that I do not have to keep up. A rail fence takes up a rod of land, so I have 400 rods of land, which is equal to two and a half acres, which I plant in fodder corn and which is far better feed than the stock can get outside the fence. Again, I saw you make rails out of yellow pine. Now, your pine is worth $40 per 1,000 feet up here; so it will not pay to put such timber into a fence. Then when a man buys a farm he should have full control of that land, and his neighbor should not ask the farmer to keep up a fence so that the neighbor can raise his stock on the farmer's land. With best wishes to all, yours truly.

HUSTIN BATY.

MT. PLEASANT SCHOOL HOUSE.

Editor Union:

It has been quite a while since I've seen anything in The Union from here so I thought I'd drop you a line. Health of community is generally good, Wiley Foshee, is ailing somewhat. Our school is doing well under the careful teaching of Miss Bessie Ellis. Z. Lowery has returned home from his visit to Coosa county and reports a nice time. We are sorry to hear that J. F. Lowery is moving back to Coosa county, but we all wish him the best of luck and a happy Christmas. Mr and Mrs. Pardo have moved into their new home near Wiley Foshee's. There was a candy-breaking at J. Wiley Foshee's last Wednesday night, and a large crowd attended it.

BUTTERWEED.

COUNTY POOR FARM.

Mr. Editor:

Please allow me space to say a few words to those good people of Thorsby who remembered the old people here on Thanksgiving Day. They came with many presents for the old folks, which gave their hearts great joy. I was sorry that I was not at home, but when I did get home the old people were all smiles, and said they were proud that some people would come and see them. It cheers the old souls up to know that some people think of them and remember them in their prayers. The visitors said they would come again another day and bring the preacher with them. I have got old Bro. Vickers to preach to us. He comes every fourth Sunday.

Yours truly,

R. A. MILLER.

BETH-SALEM.

Health here is good at present, and cotton picking and gathering generally is about over and sowing oats is all the go. We are having a good school here, presided over by Prof. Zeb Mims. We have a flourishing Sunday school every second and fourth Sunday, also preaching on the second Sunday and Saturday before by Rev. M. J. Parrish. Our young people are conducting a fine debating society with the assistance of Prof. Mims, who is a fine young man, as well as a good school teacher. I've been reading so many letters in regard to stock law, that I want to say to those who are living on uplands (high, but ridgy; poor, but rocky), think just before you go to vote on stock laws if this land will make pastures for your stock, except at a great cost, and please think where your water is for that pasture. I've experienced the watering of stock from a well for the past three or four months. I've been keeping about four head of cows on thirty acres of pasture for three months, and it was a fine pasture to begin with, but now the cows have trimmed the bushes up and the ground is as clean as if it had been burned off. Now, I say, if you want good stock, get it, you can do that without stock law; I'm going to do that way. I say to the voters of beat six, "look before you leap" for fear your land may be on the high ridge where there is no water for your stock. Success to the dear Union and its many readers.

UNCLE NED.

JEMISON.

Editor Union:—

At a regular meeting of the Jemison Chapter No. 44, Order Eastern Star, held November 28th, after the general order of business was transacted, the chapter went into an election for officers for the ensuing year. The new officers: Miss Mattie Patton, Worthy Matron; W. R. Jackson, Worthy Patron; Miss Bertha Johnson, Associate Matron; Mrs. D. L. Langston, secretary; Miss Mattie Ware, treasurer; Miss May Honeycutt, conductress; Miss Resa Adams, Associate conductress; Mrs. Langford, chaplain; Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, Ada; Mrs. J. B. Crysel, Ruth; Mrs. Jim Honeycutt, Esther; Mrs. W. R. Jackson, (our past matron) Martha; Mrs. W. D. Mann, Electa; Mrs. W. M. Rosebery, warden; D. L. Langston, (our past patron), sentinel. After the election Miss Mae Honeycutt (past grand electa,) read her report on the grand chapter, which was held in Montgomery on November 1-2. The report was excellent, and she received the thanks of our chapter for her good report. The delegates to the grand chapter were Miss Mae Honeycutt, and Mesdames D. L. Langston and W. R. Jackson. After some remarks for "The Good of the order," the following address was delivered by Mrs. W. R. Jackson. Worthy Matron, sisters and brothers:—The year is now drawing to a close, we have elected new officers—I want to thank you all for the honor conferred upon me, and to each and every one I will say, you have helped me in many ways. As I occupy tonight a position of honor as Worthy Matron as I stand before you, every warm impulse if my heart goes out to you in acknowledgement of the honor you have for the past year conferred upon me. The many acts of love and hospitality shown me by you all as I mingle among you, will never be forgotten, but will bloom as a favorite flower in my memory. In surrendering the gavel, the emblem of my office, it is with an earnest assurance that I never used it in an arbitrary or dictatorial manner, ever remembering my duty was to serve, not to rule. My interest in our beloved order will remain with me as long as life lasts, and I hope many more pleasant hours will find us together. I hope the one elected as Worthy Matron tonight will fill the office much better than I did, but I can say this, I have filled it to the best of my ability, always remembering my obligation to the Order. I have not done what I wanted to acomplish in the year that is passed, but air castles are easily built and just as easily shattered. But the beautiful star that guided the "wise men" and rested over Bethlehem is still guiding and shedding lustre everywhere. Its sweet influences should be felt in our Chapter where the members are living according to the beautiful lesson taught of loving hearts, that we are fairest among ten thousand, altogether lovely After the Worthy Matron's address the Chapter took a short recess. Refreshments were served and enjoyed by all The chapter closed until next Friday night when there will be a special meeting to confer degrees upon the candidates. We are expecting great work to be done in our beloved Chapter next year.

MRS. W. R. JACKSON.

SOUTH BESSIE.

First thing we wish to say is hurrah for "one alone" at Cedar Grove. That correspondent is true grit. Well South Bessie is still alright, and will be when the next campaign comes on. Stock law talk is rife in this locality, with a majority against it. We notice some of the stock law advocates are speaking of certain grasses and clover for pasturage. Of course something in that way would have to be done if this was a stock law district. Because Beat 3 is too high and dry and the soil too thin to produce much pasturage of a lasting character, that is one reason why it should oppose the stock law at this time. Bur clover will grow well on a rich garden spot, but not well on ordinary land. I don't regard it as a very good pasturage. Stock don't relish it as well as would be expected. Miss Hattie Dunlap of Bibb has the school at the Freeman school house The Misses Henry attended church services at Free Springs Sunday. Miss Maud Waldrup is visiting her brother, east of Ocampo. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lumpkin of Oakley's, recently visited the family of Z. J. Jones. We would like to hear from "Bill Dooly" again. S. N. Waldrup and daughter Miss Berta, visited J. C. Edwards of Mulberry Saturday. That editorial in last Union entitled "Diabolical Social Equality" should cause people to think. The sad fact apparent in that editorial has been hurled at the South by adherents of Mormonism as something worse than polygamy. So the onward march of truth cannot be checked. Truth is cutting its way on all questions. The Zionists (a Jewish movement towards thier native land) and other great movements of truth seem to be going forward independent of the aid of organized Christianity. Thus "onward moves the great eternal In the order of his plan."

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

NOTICE OF PREACHING

There will be preaching at the new Tabernacle (three miles east of Clanton near the Dock Mims place) Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. A church will be organized at the morning service. All are invited to attend.

Ginners' Report.

Washington, D. C.—The government cotton ginners' report, issued by the census bureau, shows the amount of cotton ginned to December 1 to be 10,025,000 bales. This compares with 8,648,000 bales ginned to the same period of time last year, and is round about what the operators predicted. The report is construed as bullish and its effect was immediately felt upon the cotton market, carrying all positions of the staple up some twenty points.

Gillette Sentenced.

Herkimer, N. Y.—Chester Gillette has been sentenced to be electrocuted during the week beginning January 28 for the murder of Grace Brown.

For New Mexico.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Teller has introduced a bill providing for the admission of New Mexico as a state.

NOTICE.

Thorsby ,Ala., Nov. 28, 1906.

To the Citizens of Thorsby, Ala., and to Whom It May Concern:

There will be a petition presented to the next session of the Legislature of Alabama to repeal or amend the charter of the city of Thorsby, Alabama, to repeal the latter clause of section twenty-four (24) of said charter, which reads as follows, viz: "Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of the grape or other wine fruits, and the City Council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of said wine, and the license for the use of the State of Alabama shall be the same as required by the State from dealers in wines exclusively in other parts of the state."

To read as follows, viz: Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of grapes, and the City Council shall have power to license and regulate the sale of said wines, but wine shall not be sold in less quantities than one gallon, and shall not be drank on the premises where sold, and shall not be drank in the house where sold, nor in a room adjoining the same.

Any person selling wine in less quantities than one gallon, or permitting it to be drank on the premises, or in the house where sold, or in a room adjoining the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs for every offense. And the license for the use of the State shall not be less than fifteen dollars. And all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed. J. BICE.

DISILLUSION.

Your proud eyes give me their wearied splendor;
Your cold, loose touch and your colder smile
The truth to my jealous heart surrender;
You tire, having loved me a little while.
Ah! well, my sweet, I was sure you would.
For I knew you false when I saw you fair.
I have watched and watched for your altered mood,
And have schooled me so that I shall not care.

The knoll's blue bonnet, the dell's green mantle,
The mid-wood hollow where waters run,
The bare stained shore, with its white surf-sandal,
The sudden smile of the gallant sun—
Will change not, be you sweet or bitter;
A heart after all is hard to break;
But the world at sweetest were surely sweeter,
If only sweet for your own sweet sake.

Yes, I know right well, if our love were sterling,
We had drained the earth and the skies of joy;
But I—God wot—and you, too, my darling,
No rare, fair flower of girl and boy,
How should we rise to such exaltation
As climbs from a cloud a splendid star?
How live, how love with such perfect passion,
We who are only what others are.

THE PLUMBER'S ASSISTANT.

By R. E. VERNEDE.

"Perhaps you wouldn't mind going into the study, sir," said the maid-servant, politely, "which it's being plumbed. But Mr. Dixon says he'll be down directly. My!" she added, as she opened the study door, "he have made a mess!" She tossed her head at the plumber, disgustedly.

I said it was of no consequence, which—as far as I was concerned—it was not. Personally, I rather like to watch plumbers, and the man who was engaged in making havoc of Dixon's study rather interested me. I had never seen a plumber quite so busy before. He was an honest-looking, red-faced fellow, with brawny arms and that gift for whistling out of tune which seems to characterize some Londoners. He had already torn up the boarding of a great part of the floor, which lay about him in splinters; and some ten feet of wainscoting had been beaten in as with a sledge-hammer, laying bare a pipe which had evidently been designed to carry water to the bathroom. It was on this pipe that the man was now engaged; and having nothing else to do while I waited for Dixon, I watched him at his work. That consisted to all appearance of making holes in the pipe with a large nail which he hammered in at intervals of an inch with the utmost regularity. As I have said, it was of no consequence to me, but out of regard for Dixon, I thought that to engage the man in conversation would perhaps be doing no harm, all things considered.

"You're making a good job of it," I said, referring to the pipe.

The man looked at me in a gratified way.

"That's the seventeenth hole in that there' pipe," he said proudly. "I thought as twenty 'uld about do it."

"I should think twenty would," I replied. "Is it Mr. Dixon's idea to have a shower bath arranged in this room?"

"No, sir," said the man. "Mr. Dixon he wanted a hole as there was in that pipe mended, he did. But I ain't working for Mr. Dixon; I'm working for Mr. Prebbles, an' I reckon I've got 'im a three days' job."

"Who is Mr. Prebbles?" I asked.

"He's the plumber, sir. I ain't a plumber myself; I'm what they calls a plumber's assistant. P'raps you ain't heard of me afore?"

I confessed that, though I knew the old proverb which says "a plumber in time brings nine," I had never before known of the assistant referred to. "What is your business?" I asked.

"Well, sir," said the man, he put down his tools and seated himself in Dixon's favorite arm-chair, across the polished wood of which he now drew a match preparatory to lighting a short clay pipe. "Well, sir, I dessay you know as plumbers are a independent lot, as don't care to work for nothing. That's why it wouldn't be worth Mr Prebbles' while to come here an' solder a small hole like what there was in that there pipe afore I come. What 'e comes for is a job, and you won't get a plumber unless 'e sees a good job. What does a plumber do then? 'E sends along a assistant to get 'im a good job, like as I've been sent ere by Mr. Prebbles. Some of 'em comes theirselves to git the job going, but most on 'em keeps assistants. It's hard work making a job like what I've made with that there pipe, an' plumbers, they don't hold with hard work."

"You mean to tell me, then," I said, as he paused, "that plumbers employ men like you simply to create work?"

"That's it," he said. "Mr. Dixon, he come in to Mr. Prebbles, an', says he, 'There's a hole in one o' my pipes as I want mended.' 'Right y' are,' says Prebbles. 'I'll send up, d'reckly.' And as soon as Mr. Dixon's gone, 'e tips me the wink to come up to this here house an' make a job of it. That's what I done, mister."

"You certainly have," I said.

"All excep' the last three holes," said the man, getting up from his chair and tipping the ashes of his pipe on to the carpet. "I'd best finish them off now."

It was at the very moment that he had gone down on his hands and knees to complete the work—leaving me in a state of helpless astonishment over his revelations—that Dixon burst into the room, followed by a short, stout man carrying a bag of tools. Dixon nodded to me, blanched at the sight of the destruction which had been wrought in his absence, and hurriedly turned to the short stout man.

"Is that the fellow, Mr. Prebbles?" he inquired.

"That's 'im," said the plumber. "Wright's his name; an' lor, he hev done it an' no mistake!"

"Right y' are, Mr. Prebbles," said my friend, the plumber's assistant, beaming genially upon each of us in turn. "I been an' got you a nice job. Right y' are."

Mr. Prebbles paid no attention, but continued in a shocked recitative: "Wright's his name, an' I had to sack 'im more nt a month ago. Took to drink, that's what 'e did, an' went off 'is head. 'Magined as how it was his business to go gettin' me jobs. Couldn't be madder'n that. First time I caught him at it up at Major Penworthy's. I sacked 'im, but 'e's bin a hanging round my place since then, an' I s'spose 'e 'eard your instructions, Mr. Dixon, an' started up 'ere straight to play 'is little game."

"That's what I done," said Wright, affably. "'E tipped me the wink, an' up I come."

Mr. Prebbles groaned.

"Madder'n a March hare," he said.

"But, counfound it!" said Dixon, irritably, "you ought to have informed the police that he was a dangerous lunatic. Look at what the fellow's done. How long is that going to take to repair?"

Mr. Prebbles glanced around the room sympathetically.

"Three days' job, sir, I'm afraid. It might be four, but not less than three, sir."

"That's what I told the gentilman," said my friend, triumphantly, "didn't I?"

"Hold your tongue!" said Dixon, furiously; and he turned to me: "D'you mind going and getting a policeman? The fellow's off his head. Not his fault, of course, poor chap! but I wish I hadn't to suffer for it."

"All right," I said. I was not at all sure, then, that the man was mad, and though I believe he was sent to an asylum in the end, I am not sure of it now. I have seen so many plumbers' assistants at work lately; the spring seems to be their great season, poor fellows!—Black and White.

BANANA FLOUR USES.

Good For Indigestion, But Not a Rival of Grain Product.

Banana flour is a cure for acute indigestion, according to officials of the Department of Commerce and Labor. The product is much in demand in England, says a report just received from London. It is so little used in this country that statistics of its manufacture and sale are not collected by the government. Banana flour was spoken of a few years ago as a great discovery that was likely to play an important part in competition with cereal flour. But the conclusion of the experts now is that it stands no chance of competition with cereal flour. The cost of manufacture, which is put in the lowest figure at $120 a ton, exclusive of packing and freight, seems to put it out of competition.

At the same time the department officials say that the flour has its uses and is very beneficial in cases of diseases, and for infants and invalids, and in acute indigestion. What is needed is a cheaper method of manufacture if it is to enter the market as a serious competitor with grain flour.—Washington Post.

Horse Casts Shoe and Goes to Smithy.

Frank Tellman, a milk dealer who lives near Columbus, Ind., has a horse which he believes possesses human intelligence. He drove the horse to Columbus and was distributing milk to his patrons. During his rounds the horse cast a shoe and seemed to be worried about it. The next time Tellman stopped at a customer's house he was inside a little longer than usual and when he came out the horse was gone. He found it at the blacksmith shop of William Brown, where it had gone to be shod. The horse made the trip of its own accord, and went directly to the shop to wait for the smith.—Indianapolis News.

Problems in Arithmetic.

It was at a class in arithmetic that the following household problem was exactly solved: "Suppose that in a family of five there are only four potatoes for dinner, and the mother wants to give each of the children an equal share—how is she going to do it?" For a few minutes there was silence in the room while everybody calculated hard. Finally one of the little boys rose to his feet, and after attracting the attention of the schoolmaster, gave this unexpected answer: "Mash the potatoes, sir."—Kansas City Journal.

Rat Destruction to Prevent Plague.

Consular Clerk Hernando de Soto, of Paris, forwards the translation of a French decree regarding the destruction of rats on vessels entering French ports. It applies to ships arriving from ports infected with plague which shall unload more than fifty tons of merchandise. The fees and expenses arising from the destruction of the rats by the authorities must be paid by the ship.

SHIELD FOR RADIATORS.

Prevents Accumulation of Dust Upon Adjacent Wall.

It is a well known fact that the air current created by heat from radiators causes dust to be drawn from the floor of the room and carried upward, ultimately impinging on the wall. A portion of the dust will be deposited, therefore, upon the wall and in the rear of the radiator, while the remaining portion will be thrown back into the room. The purpose of the radiator shield illustrated here is to prevent the accumulation of dust upon the adjacent wall, prevent discoloration of the wall, and also to filter the air so that it will be thrown back into the room in a purified condition. This is accomplished by the hood attached to the radiator. This hood collects the dust, and when necessary can be cleaned and the dust removed.—Philadelphia Record.

Fashions in Court.

A fashion comes like Ceasar and is seen and conquers. Of this latter kind is the new hat, a hybrid creation, half "Romney," half "mushroom," and with a dash of the Salvation Army bonnet in it, which the Marchioness Townsend wore daily during the progress of her husband's case in teh Law Courts. The courts before Sir Gorells Barnes' crusade against sketching in them, had long superseded the theatre as a mise-en-scene of this case.

Since the conclusion of this case, the "Townsend" hat, as it should perhaps be christened, has dominated half London. The new creation, which is certainly a very becoming one for most faces, is broad and flat, with a cloud of chiffon and lace for trimming, and a broad ribbon of gauze or chiffon hanging down behind. It can "carry" feathers, bows and much other trimming, and probably will do so in the case of the majority of its wearers.—London Daily Mail.

Kaiser Awaits Our Invitation.

Although it is well known that the Kaiser's feeling toward the United States is decidedly friendly, he has too much regard for the dignity of his country and his position as its Emperor to accept an invitation that was not the unanimous desire of the entire Union, or one instigated by a lesser person than the President. Whether the President will ever invite him, though, is quite another matter.—The Dusseldorfer Zeitung.

Cooling Milk by Aeration.

The cooling of milk by forcing air through it (aeration) is an excellent method, as the oxygen of the air assists in purifying it, but the aeration must be done in some place where the air is as pure as possible and free from dust. To force air that is laden with dust and odors into the milk is as injurious as to expose the milk to such influences, hence the greatest care should be exercised in aerating.

Sunflower Seed For Poultry.

A head or two of sunflower that has gone to seed is a good thing to throw into the chicken yard two or three times a week at this season. Too many sunflower seeds are not good for them, but many fanciers feed them quite freely when they are preparing their birds for exhibition. It gives a gloss to the plumage and fattens the birds. It also stimulates the egg production when limited amounts are given, but when fed too liberally the excess of fat produced internally injures the egg producing organs.

Shrinkage of Wheat.

An old farmer recently told the writer of an experiment which disproves the common idea of a loss in wheat by shrinkage between harvest time and winter, which leads many to sell wheat early if prices are good. A flour barrel was filled with wheat threshed in July, dry and in good condition. It weighed 210 pounds (barrel thirteen pounds) and was kept in a dry place, gimlet holes being bored in the barrel to prevent heating. Occasionally barrel and contents were weighed and it was found that it did not vary except in damp seasons, when it increased three-fourths of a pound. At the end of twelve months the weight was just the same to the ounce as it was the year before, or the day when the wheat was stored away.

Dust and Hogs.

A dust bath does very well for fowls, but it is hard on hogs. Perhaps you have kept your hogs in one lot till the grass is all killed off where they feed. The corn is thrown out in one spot, and the hogs root in the dust for the kernels, says an exchange. Every time they run for feed or swill they stir up a cloud of dust in dry weather. Maybe they sleep in a dusty place.

The result is that they breathe more dust than they should, and many die because their lungs get clogged up and inflamed.

They may act as though they had a bad cold or pneumonia or cholera when none of these things are the matter.

Change the feeding ground so as to get the hogs out of the dust. No matter whether they have reached the stage of dying or not, it is best to guard against loss.

Bloat in Cattle.

From whatever cause, the bloat in cattle is very dangerous and unless help is soon obtained the animal will die. The most effectual way of relief is to use an instrument that is designed for this purpose, but if this is not at hand a knife may be used, the small blade of a penknife being the right size, run through a cork to make the blade the right length.

Push the right side of the cow against the wall, place the knife on the left side, about midway between the short rib and the hip bone, give the knife a sharp blow with the hand, withdraw the knife, insert a quill and leave it there until the gas escapes. The quill should be watched so that it may not become clogged with blood.

The next day after the operation give the cow one and one-half pounds of Glauber's salts and if she is not chewing her cud the next day, give her a strip of salt pork, about a quarter of a pound, which will bring her out in good shape. The knife operation, if properly performed is not at all dangerous, but delay in attending to it nearly always results in the death of the animal.—The Epitomist.

Value of Corn Stover.

Many now living will remember when it was almost the universal custom in New England for the farmers in harvesting their corn to cut the tops of the stalks off just above the good ears and bind them up to be used as fodder. The ears were left to ripen in the full blaze of the sun, and were later picked off to be taken to the barn for husking, or in a few cases the stalks were cut and taken with the ears on them, that they might also be added to the winter fodder. Others less careful did not even take the pains to save the tops that had been cut off, and denounced the corn stover as poorer fodder than the hay from the bog meadows. Perhaps when dried in the sun, as it was before cutting, trampled in the dirt, wet with many showers, and often mouldy as it was, this might have been true, though it scarcely seems that the bog hay dried and grown mouldy before cutting would have been better. Now there are few who do not cut their corn stover close to the ground when the grain is still soft and milky, allowing it to ripen as they do their other grain, in the bundle and the bundle in the stock. The fodder is carefully saved and the cows are said to produce as much milk or butter fat when they are feeding on it as when they are having good English hay. ...perer! the Emperor!" and being a very young miss whose home was in a country where they do not have kings, she stopped and gazed inquisitively at the two men.

The old sovereign smiled benignly at the child and extended his hand toward her. "Will you give me your roses, little girl?" said he.

"No, sir," responded the tiny maiden, but she took the flowers in her left hand and held them behind her as she walked forward and placed her right hand in the Emperor's outstretched palm.

"Not this hand," said he, smiling. "The other one."

She changed the bouquet to her right hand and gave him the left.

"No, the other," repeated the Emperor.

She transferred the flowers to the left hand and reached out her right. The request was made a third and a fourth time, and still she manuevered with the bouquet. The nurse, who had observed this pantomime at a respectful distance, now came forward and said chidingly: "Please give his Majecty the roses, Helen."

"No!" replied her young charge, with decision.

"Will you not give me your roses?" inquired the adjutant, in a persuasive voice.

"Yes," answered the little girl, frankly, as she placed the bouquet in his hand.

Both the Emperor and his adjutant laughed heartily. "She evidently prefers you to me," said the former, with a smile. Then the kind-hearted old Emperor drew the child to him and gave her a kiss, and the nurse led her away.—Albert Morris Bagby, in St. Nicholas.

A GOOD TRICK.

First procure a small quantity of sulphur, a bit of red sealing wax and a thin piece of vulcanized India rubber about two inches square. As most all rubber is vulcanized nowadays, you should have no trouble getting it. Powder the wax and mix it with the sulphur until the combination assumes a yellowish pink tinge. Then pour the substance into a small muslin bag or any such receptacle that you may have at hand.

Lay on a board a sheet of tinfoil the same size as the piece of rubber and then nail the rubber over it. You need a bit of tin and iron, oblong in length, each bit having a sharp point that would onable a person to mark with it. For instance, a tintack and an iron nail.

Have some one blindfold you and then hand two of the spectators each a different metal and instruct each to mark his initials on the rubber with the sharp point of his metal piece. You turn your back or leave the room while they are so doing in order to further prove that you are unable to observe them. The rubber surface springs back almost as soon as the points cease pressing upon it, almost entirely obliterating all marks whatsoever.

As soon as they finish marking, remove the cloth from your eyes and announce that you will endow this strange tablet of rubber with a magic property that will enable you not only to tell who were the two people holding the metal pieces, but also the metal used!

Pour out some of the powdered wax and sulphur upon the surface of the rubber. A strange thing will happen. The audience gathered about the table will see the yellow sulphur particles separate from the wax and form clear and distinct the two letters of the initials—"G. N." for example—while at the same time enough particles of red wax are disintegrating themselves from the brimstone to indicate the initial "D. A." for instance, in exactly the spot where it was traced.

You then announce that George Nelson made the yellow initials, and did it with a piece of tin, while Dora Alden marked the red initials, and in doing so used the bit of iron, all of which is absolutely true, much to the surprise of the audience.

Tin will attract sulphur more strongly than it will wax. Iron just the opposite, and your experiment will always be successful if the initials be strongly marked and the sulphur and wax well powdered and perfectly dry.

RIDDLES.

Why does an onion resemble a ringing bell? Because peel follows peel in an onion, and peal follows peal in a bell, when it is ringing.

What word of three syllables tells us at what time we should dance? At—ten—dance.

Why is Ireland likely to become the richest country in the world? Because its capital is always doubling (Dublin).

When you go to bed, why are your slippers like a deferred resolution? Because they are put off till the next day.

When is a nose not a nose? When it is a little reddish (radish).—London News.

Was He a Yankee.

Adam was not an Englishman. When he awoke and found Eve by his side she was an absolutely new thing. The English always run away from the new; he did not—Adam cannot have been an Englishman.—London Truth.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Uninhabited islands to the number of ten thousand lie between Madagascar and the coast of India.

The soil in China is so rich that a square mile is said to be capable of supporting a population of nearly four thousand people.

London has five regularly built open-air pulpits from which there is preaching, and the results have been so good that other churches are considering the question of having such pulpits built upon the outside of their edifices.

Statisticians estimate that twenty-one acres of land are necessary to sustain one man on fresh meat. The same space of land, if devoted to wheat culture, would feed forty-two people; if to oats, eighty-eight; potatoes, Indian corn and rice, 176; and if to the plantain or bananas, over six thousand.

Dr. Kenealy's speech in the English Tichborne trial lasted 110 days, but the longest continuous talk is supposed to have been that of a member of the Legislature of British Columbia, who was in a minority of one, and succeeded in "talking out" a bill by speaking twenty-six hours without intermision.

The ancient poets used to sing of the dense forests of Sicily. To-day the mountains are bare. The question of reforesting is a difficult one. Attempts at starting new growths are frustrated by the peasants, who tear down fences and drive in their goats. Only under military protection could new forest trees be grown.

All the stores and other places of business in Garden Plain, Kan., ceased business for three days recently, and the whole town went into the fields to help the farmers harvest their grain. The merchants say that the trade has been so good since they have reopened that they are sure they have not lost through closing.

Comparatively few persons know that ringing a bell ruins it. That is, a bell has a definite length of life, and after so many blows will break. A 960-pound bell, struck blows of 178 foot pounds of force, broke after eleven thousand blows. A four-thousand pound bell broke after eighteen thousand blows of 350-foot pounds' force.

A tree that is a freak of nature is the Asiatic star tree. It grows from sixty to eighty feet tall, and for a height of about forty feet the trunk is wholly bare. From that point there spring a number of tangled limbs, which shoot out clusters of long pointed leaves, and these, grouped together, emit at night a phosphorescent light.

PLANTS CATCH TADPOLES.

Bladderworth Veritable Trap For Little Swimming Animals.

One of the most interesting of that little group of plants known as "carnivorous," from their curious habit of trapping animals, and apparently feeding on them, is the bladderwort. In July and August its yellow flowers may be seen adorning many of our ponds and ditches. The little narrow-necked bladders which it bears under water, and from which it gets its name, are veritable traps for the smaller inhabitants of the ditch. The animals most frequently caught in them are those minute crustaceans known as water fleas. Occasionally, however, a young fish is found inside. In a recent number of a German scientific periodical W. Bath describes plants of bladderwort which have caught tadpoles. Some he found caught by the head, and some by the tail. In other cases the animal had got entirely inside. It is found that the imprisoned animal may live some days inside the bladder.

Mrs. Roosevelt in Church.

If the example of the President's wife is to be followed, the wearing of gay plumage to church will be relegated to the list of things to be avoided. When Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied the President and her daughter to service the first Sunday after her return to the White House she was garbed in a walking suit of mixed black and white, with a white waistcoat and small, black chip hat, with a rosette or two of black, and white ribbon. Not a vestige of a wing or feather or even artificial flower adorned the headpiece, and not a furbelow was on the gown. Yet the mistress of the White House looked uncommonly well. It has been noted that Mrs. Roosevelt the year through is gowned simply when attending church.—New York Press.

Plenty to Mourn For.

It pays to be a mourner in St. Petersburg, and there are agencies which employe great numbers of vagrants and tramps for the purpose. These agencies supply suitable clothing and pocket handkerchiefs—everything, in fact, except boots, which the tramp must show on his feet or he will not be hired. When there is a more or less important funeral the tramps gather at the Nikolski Market, and are selected by an employe of the agency. The wage for the occasion, with tips, generally equals about 3s.—Tit-Bits.

SCIENTIFIC & INDUSTRIAL

Experiments made at Bordeaux, France, with preparations to render wood and tissues non-inflammable, have been very successful.

The discovery in Ceylon of thoria, the rare earth used in the manufacture of incandescent gas mantles, will deprive Germany of the monopoly of its supply.

Major E. C. Dutton, in an article for the Popular Science Monthly, dissents from the popular theory that volcanoes "are the chimneys of the world," and is convinced that they are situated over lava reservoirs, "rarely over three miles deep."

The electric target of a Canadian officer, Lieutenant-Colonel G. A. Peters, is being tested by English riflemen. The target itself is a bullet proof plate of chrome steel, and the impact of the bullet on this drives back one or more of a set of steel hammers, thus closing an electric circuit, by which the exact spot hit is recorded on an indicator plate at the firing point. The system insures accuracy, saves much time and needs no attendant.

Within a few years the question has been raised whether sun-spots are really depressions or holes in the sun's surface, as they have generally been considered to be by astronomers. Professor Ricco concludes, as the result of a long series of observations, not only that the spots are cavities in the sun, but that their depth can be approximately measured. He states that average depth of twenty-three sun-spots measured by him was about 640 miles!

The fundamental value of tungsten for incandescent lamps lies in its enormously high point of melting, or volatilization, as there is some doubt about its actually melting prior to passing into vapor. In this respect it, perhaps, resembles carbon and non-metallic elements, as should, indeed, be expected from its chemical position. As a metal in the common sense of the word, tungsten is unknown. It has not, for instance, been reduced to an ingot from which anything could be hammered or cut or drawn, and, perhaps, it never can be so treated.

"Washing a hill away" is a process employed by a land improvement company near Baltimore. The summit of a hill was to be lowered by nine feet. The operation covered an area of 1500 feet long and 300 feet wide. From a stream nearby water was forced at eighty pounds pressure through eight-inch pipes to a five-inch reducing nozzle and then against the wall of earth. This fell in cartloads every few minutes, and so thin was it, with the water added, as to be easily conveyed through pipes to an abandoned pond which the company wished to fill as a part of the improvement plans.

Cuban Politics and Cigars.

Cuba has no real importance in the affairs of the world but as a grower of the best tobacco leaf for cigars and it should recognize that fact. No one cares half a crown or a shilling or even sixpence for the Constitution of Cuba, but for the hope that the aroma of the cigar which is now under the nose of this writer may be reiterated for untold generations of crops. One may fall back upon Manila, upon India, upon Mexico, upon Borneo, and even mix a German cigar at ten pfennigs with another pennyworth of beer in a German cafe. But Cuba must not neglect its proper business for the silliness of controversial politics.—London Chronicle.

Risks in Railway Journeys.

The idea that the man who goes on a railway journey takes his life in his hand, and is rather more likely than not to meet with an untimely death at the first curve the train negotiates, is scarcely borne out by the fact that the chances against any one passenger meeting his death on the railway are 36,000,000 to one. This immunity from disaster reflects considerable credit upon the companies, but still more upon engine-drivers and signalmen, whose skill and care are the main factors in the safety of the passengers.—London Court Journal.

The "Shopper's Face."

The "shopper's face" is one of the ills that the strenuouse life has brought upon the long-suffering modern woman. It is described as "a fixed, tense, anxious, puzzled look, that brings wrinkles before their time."—London Penny Magazine.

SALICYLIC ACID HARMFUL.

Dr. Wiley Proves It in Experiments Performed on a "Poison Squad."

As a result of scientific experiments performed upon a "poison squad" of twelve young Government clerks, Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief chemist of the Department of Agriculture, has reached the conclusion that salicylic acid and salicylates exert a harmful and depressing influence upon the digestive organs of the human body. Their use as a preservative for foods, he adds, is reprehensible in every respect and leads to injury to the consumer which may be productive of great harm. He said that there is no necessity for their use as preservatives, as the same result can be accomplished by the use of less objectionable chemicals.

Dr. Wiley's investigation indicated that the use of salicylic acid was followed by a stimulating effect upon the digestive organs, and there was also an increased appetite. This hunger was only temporary and was accompanied by a feeling of heaviness and uneasiness in the upper and front portion of the stomach. A loss in the weight of the members of the squad was also noticed as from the time the use of salicylic acid was begun Dr. Wiley found that the general effect of the chemical was to diminish the weight of the body by interfering with the processes of nutrition. The use of salicylic acid also produces an increase in the number of red blood corpuscles and a slight increase in the white corpuscles.

The investigation proved, however, that the intensity of the color of the blood diminishes. After the effects of the acid wears off there is a marked decrease in the number of both red and white corpuscles.

Dr. Wiley demonstrates that the use of salicylic acid, even in small quantities, is not entirely harmless. However, he found that salicylic acid and its compounds are not as harmful as has generally been supposed by physicians and scientific men generally.

"That salicylic acid should be singled out especially for condemnation," he says, "does not seem to be justified by the data which are presented and discussed in this bulletin. That it is a harmful substance, however, seems to be well established by the data taken as a whole, but it appears to be a harmful substance of less virulence than has been generally supposed."—Washington (D. C.) Correspondence of the New York Sun.

Country Editor's Power.

The power of the weekly press is not to be underestimated. The country editor is close to the people. He knows what every man in the community is talking about and thinking about, knows where he stands. He can reach him directly and almost as personally as through a personal conversation. As a molder of the opinion of the public which it reaches the weekly paper has few equals. The country editor can get his finger on the pulse of his community. The independent editor of a weekly paper is not usually rich in money or in this world's goods. If he were he would not be a country editor. But he is rich in something else if he is truly untrammeled, and that something else is character.—Atlanta Journal.

Wants a Newspaper.

South Hill, Va., October 10.—At a meeting of the Business Men's Association a committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. J. E. Boyd, Charles E. Friend, J. H. Ogburn and E. F. Hall, to secure the services of a newspaper man for the purpose of establishing a paper here. After a canvass of the business men of the town, it was found that $1000 could be secured in advertising matter for the promotion of such an enterprise. —(Special to the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch.)

Coal Burned by Steamships.

There are many ships which burn from 100 to 300 tons of coal per day, the lowest consumption being when the vessel is going at a moderate rate. Our men-of-war do not consume so much in proportion as swift steamers which ply between Europe and America, for, unless in an emergency, they are not driven at the highest attainable speed. The ocean passenger steamers often burn from 2500 to 3000 tons during a passage lasting six to seven days.—London Tit-Bits.

Future For Singers.

"Americans enjoy and appreciate grand opera quite as much as do the people of Europe, and it is my firm belief that within a decade this country will have developed singers and teachers quite as great as those who claim Europe as their birthplace."

This was the declaration of Mme. Marcella Sembrich, the great singer, in a recent interview as to the future of music in America. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Action in Japanese Matter.

Washington, D. C.—No further action will be taken by the department of justice in the test case at San Francisco, brought for the purpose of having the court to decide on the legality of the California law preventing Japanese from attending public schools with American children. The question will be handled by Mr. Bonaparte, who is expected to take up his duties as attorney general on Monday.

Graduated Tax on Credeit Notes.

Washington, D. C.—William B. Ridgeley, comptroller of the currency, advocated before the house committee on banking and currency the proposed credit currency plan. There was, he said, no question regarding the necessity of some measure of relief. He believed a graduated tax should be placed on the credit notes, which would create an ample reserve for their redemption. This, he thought, was a much superior method to the high tax plan with no reserve.

Mr. Ridgeley was strongly in favor of having the government guarantee such credit currency. No risk would be involved in this, as he said the 5 per cent guarantee found would make the government safe against possible loss.

Ten Millions More.

Washington, D. C.—Senator McCumber, chairman of the committee on pensions, is planning to press for early consideration by the senate the house general service pension bill, as amended by the senate committee. The amendments provide that any survivor of the civil war, who has served for ninety days, has been honorably discharged, and who shall have reached the age of 62 years, shall receive a pension of $12 a month, to be increased to $15 a month when he shall have reached the age of 70 years, and to $20 a month after he has reached the age of 75 years. It is estimated that an additional appropriation of $10,714,000 annually would be required to pay the increased rate provided by the bill to the soldiers now on the pension roll.

Ore Deposits in Tennessee.

Florence.—The investigation of experts in the ore fields of Wayne county, Tennessee, have developed wonderful mineral wealth, ore having been found there which is said to be as rich as the world famous Mesaba ore fields of Lake Superior. A solid lump of iron ore has been mined weighing sixty tons, the average analysis of which shows 57 per cent of metallic iron, with less than 1 per cent of phosphorous and only a trace of sulphur. These are deposits described in a pamphlet just issued by Thurston H. Allen, of the Mineral Belt Railway Company, entitled "Iron: Alabama and Tennessee," as being 115 feet thick and covering a vast area. With this magnificent ore field within forty miles of Florence and the great Muscle Shoals power soon to be developed, the prediction is justified that great things are in store for this section.

Bryan's Suggestions to Oklahoma.

Guthrie, Okla.—A communication from W. J. Bryan, in which he made a number of recommendations, was read before the constitutional convention. One suggestion was the creation of a board of corporations. He also urged the convention to adopt the initiative and referendum and the nomination of all officers by the primary system.

The committee on federal relations reported favorably on the proposal of two amendments to the United States constitution, one for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people and one for an income tax.

Lookout Mountain Tunnel Completed.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The tunnel through Lookout Mountain, driven by the Southern railway, is finished, the working parties meeting Saturday. The work has lasted thirteen months and fifteen days—record time for this class of job. The tunnel is 3,600 feet long and in its course penetrates a cave filled with beautiful stalactites.

Favors Ship Subsidy Bill.

Washington, D. C.—That President Roosevelt will send to congress a special message advocating the passage of a ship subsidy measure at the present session was stated by several members of the house. It was said that the president had declared that the recommendation in his annual message was misunderstood. In that message he said if it were found expedient to pass the ship bill a measure should be passed to provide for a new line to South American ports. He did not mean to minimize the importance of any features of the bill, it is said, and now proposes to correct any false impression that may have been gained by the house

Russia and Japan.

St. Petersburg.—The Russo-Japanese negotiations, the status of which last week were highly unsatisfactory, have entered on a favorable stage and a rupture is no longer anticipated. It is believed that a satisfactory arrangement, defining the extent to which the Japanese shall enjoy fishing rights on the Siberian coast and also giving the Japanese the privilege of acquiring stations ashore for drying fish, will be attainable without the suggested appeal to the good offices of other powers. They realize that a failure of the negotiations would open the doors for Japanese fishermen to raid the fishing grounds at will and as the littoral is most sparsely settled and only a few vessels are available for patroling it, this is the strongest argument in favor of Russia granting concessions.

Feagin Will Succeed.

Montgomery, Ala.—W. F. Feagin, secretary of the state board of examiners for teachers, has been appointed by the board of control of the state agricultural schools to succeed Major Harry Gunnels as secretary andd treasurer of the board upon the expiration of the term of the latter, January 1. The appointment of another to succeed him was made necessary by the fact that Major Gunnels will, January 17, take oath as state superintendent of education, and then will become ex-officio an acting member of the board.

Removal of Land Office.

Birmingham, Ala.—The removal of the public land office from Montgomery to Birmingham, which has been agitated time and again, is again up for consideration, and it is believed that the change will be ordered. A petition to that effect has been sent to the general land office in Washington.

While the land office employs only a few clerks, and in that respect the change is not regarded as important, the change is considered, therefore, only as a matter of convenience.

Says Corporations have concerned Coal Lands.

Washington.—Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clark appeared before the house committe on public lands in support of the President's suggestion that the government cease to sell coal lands and lease them hereafter to mining companies. He reiterated his charges that great corporations in league with railroads have "concerned" coal lands and forced the prices up to an unreasonably high point.

Col. Andrew Jackson Dead.

Nashville, Tenn.—A Knoxville dispatch to the Banner says that Col. Andrew Jackson, son of the adopted son of President Andrew Jackson, died in that city. He was born in 1734 at the Hermitage, the home of Old Hickory, near this city. Up to a few months ago Col. Jackson had been in the internal revenue service in this state.

Woman Found in Barrel.

Hazelton, Pa.—Soberta Anaslack, a Slavonian living at Jeddo, Pa, was arrested at that place on the charge of being implicated in the Hazelton barrel mystery. It is alleged that the woman whose charred remains were found here were his wife, who disappeared from home several weeks ago. It is reported that the marriage of the couple, which took place a year ago, was opposed by their relatives and that after their wedding they had frequent quarrels.

Fleet Icebound.

St. Johns, N. F. The American Navy tug Potomac and 46 American, Canadian and Newfoundland fishing vessels with 3,000 nets, were cought fast in the ice floes near Bay of Islands. In responce to a message to this city, a steamer was sent to the imprisoned fleet and with the aid of the crews of all the vessels succeeded in getting out the Potomac. The ice which held the fishing vessels was broken by the cruiser and the whole fleet was liberated.

New Newspaper.

Meridian, Miss.—John T. Land, for the past six and a half years business manager of the Evening Star, severs his connection with that publication on the first of the year. He will remain in Meridian, and it is strongly intimated, launch a new afternoon newspaper on or about March 1 next. Associated with Mr. Land, it is understood, are other practical newspaper men of this and other cities, as well as several prominent capitalists.

Shah at Point of Death.

St. Petersburg.—Dispatches received here from Teheran say that the Shah is at the point of death. The accession of his successor, Prince Ali Mirza, is expected to pass off quietly and without opposition. Great Brittain and Russia are acting in concert in this connection.

Jap Squadron Afraid.

Honolulu.—The Japanese counsel here says that the visiting squadron which will arrive in Honolulu in February, will not proceed to San Francisco as originally intended because a repetition of the Maine disaster is feared owing to the alleged overwrought condition of the American feeling.

Folk Begins Suit.

St. Louis.—Suit was filed in the circuit court by counsel representing Governor Folk against the city of St. Louis to enforce the payment of a balance of his salary as circuit attorney alleged to be long over due.

Governor Folk claims that he is entitled to $5,833.33 back salary.

Cuban Episode Cost $2,000,000.

Washington, D. C.—The Cuban financial situation was explained to the house committee on appropriations by Secretary Taft. Through this explanation it was ascertained that American intervention in the island necessitated the expenditure of something more than $2,000,000.

It is the understanding that this claim is not to be pressed immediately but on ascertainment of the condition of the Cuban finances an order may be issued from President Roosevelt to the provisional government of the island to transfer a monthly sum from the Cuban to the American treasury as payment on this claim.

Pension Bills.

Washington, D. C.—The house considered private pension bills, there being 346 such measures on the calendar.

Arguing Gray Cases.

Montgomery, Ala.—The appeal in the quo warranto proceedings of the Louisville and Nashville vs. Henry B. Gray, which ousted the Louisville and Nashville from operating the South and North road, is being argued before the supreme court.

The contempt appeal against the road for operating the South and North will be argued Thursday.

Japs Have Ambitious Scheme.

San Francisco, Cal.—Dr. J. E. Jones, United States consul at Dalny, who arrived on the liner Nippon Maru, is quoted in an interview published in the Chronicle as saying that the Japanese are carrying out an ambitious plan which, if it succeeds, will close Asia as a market for American wheat and cotton. The Japanese, he says, are colonizing Manchuria on an extensive scale with the idea of raising sufficient wheat there to supply the needs of Asia.

McCabe Very Ill.

New York.—Bishop C. C. McCabe of Philadelphia, suffering from a recent attack of apoplexy, continues in a very precarious condition.

Rome.—The death was announced Tuesday of Monsignor Adami one of the most wealthy Roman prelates. During his lifetime, Monsignor Adami made valuable presents to Pope Leo XIII and Pius X, his gifts to the latter being a gold pectoral cross set with brilliants and by his will he left $1,000,000 to the pope.

Nominations.

Washington.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Collector of customs, district of Sabine, Tex., Russell H. Dunn.

Chaplain, retired with rank of captain, to be chaplain, retired, rank of rear admiral, Frank B. Rose.

End of Insurance Campaign.

New York.—The close of the remarkable campaign which has been waged between the policyholders of the Mutual and New York Life Insurance Companies, control of the affairs of the companies and their stupendous assets aggregating hundreds of millions of dollars, is at hand.

Tennessee Company Gets Contract.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company has been awarded a contract for the Montgomery county convicts for $28.50 The Sloss-Sheffield Company also made a bid.

The State Wins.

Washington.—The case of the Alabama and Mississippi Railroad Company versus the Mississippi Railroad Commission was decided in favor of the state by the supreme court.

Portsmouth, Eng.—Nine sailors belonging to the crew of the battleship Hindusland were drowned owing to the upsetting of a cutter.

Moscow.—Thirty members of the revolution fighting organization have been arrested in the Basemnoff quarter. Large stocks of arms and amunition and bombs were seized.

ASKED TO TAKE HAND.

Report that Belgium Has annexed the Country Arouses Leaders of the Reform.

Chicago.—The Record-Herald says: Fearful that the Congo Free State has been annexed formally by Belgium leaders of the Congo Reform Association rushed to Washington prepared to urge immediate action by the United States.

Herbert S. Johnson, a leader in the propaganda which would free the African interior departed for the capitol and said just prior to leaving that it had been decided to urge that the senate take definite action before the holiday adjournment.

A telegram to Mr. Johnson from Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Barbour, head of the Baptist missions in Africa, and the commissioner general of the Congo Reform Association in America stated that advices by cable from Brussels indicated that Belgium had, through its parliament, formally assumed sovereignty over the Congo Free State, pending the closing up of formalities between King Leopold and the representatives of the Belgian government.

The fact about the transaction is that the deal is to be consumated far ahead of the death of King Leopold and the terms of the will of the king, which were formally ratified by Belgium several days since, are to become effective at once.

Farm Implement Combine.

Chicago, Ill.—Unless plans which are sanctioned by J. Pierpont Morgan and agreed to by the holders of at least $100,000,000 out of $120,000,000 of the stock of the International Harvester Company fall through, February 1, 1907, should see the complete financial reorganization of the great farm implement combination.

Tentative contracts, which have been signed by the chief stockholders, call for the conversion of $120,000,000 of capital stock of one class into a like amount of new stock, divided into $60,000,000 common; the retirement of several interests from active business management of the company and a general change in the staff of officials. The expectation is that the new securities will be listed on the New York exchange, which, if the plans are carried through, will give the stockholders a broad market for their securities and enable them to retire if they desire to do so.

English Unions Make Demands.

London.—The Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, representatives of all the trade unions in this country, has approved the national program and the executive officers propose to present demands simultaneously to all the companies early next year. The chief demands are an eight-hour day, an improvement in wages and recognition of their society.

Thinks Estimate About Right.

Jackson, Miss.—Commenting on the recent decline in the price of cotton, President Clark, of the Mississippi division of the Southern Cotton Association, says the government estimate is "very near the truth." However, conditions warrant higher prices, and it is the duty of every man who can to hold for an advance, which he believes will reach 11 or 12 cents.

Cruiser Montana Given to Ocean.

Newport News, Va.—The United States armored cruiser Montana was successfully launched at the Newport News ship yard in the presence of a large number of people. The vessel was christened by Miss Minnie Conrad, daughter of W. G. Conrad, of Montana. Governor Toole, of that state, was represented by Martin Maginnis, former territorial delegate in congress Senator Carter and Representative Dixon also were present. The navy was not officially represented. After the launching the sponsor's party was entertained at breakfast. The Montana is about 58 per cent completed and is a sister ship to the North Carolina. Her contract calls for a speed of twenty-two knots.

Child Addicted to Tobacco.

New York.—A dispatch to the Times from Lowell, Mass., says officers of the Lowell Humane Society found a 3-year-old child who is a confirmed smoker and has used daily a corn-cob pipe since he was 18 months old. The child is Andre, the son of Albert Beaulin. When the officers took his pipe away he screamed with anger.

To Advance Wages.

New York.—The Standard Oil Company has announced that it will advance the wages of all of its employes now receiving less than $100 a month by 10 per cent, beginning January 1.

Deficiency Bill.

Washington.—The senate has passed the urgent deficiency appropriation bill enacted by the house Saturday.

Says Corporations have concerned Coal Lands.

Washington.—Interstate Commerce Commissioner Clark appeared before the house committe on public lands in support of the President's suggestion that the government cease to sell coal lands and lease them hereafter to mining companies. He reiterated his charges that great corporations in league with railroads have "concerned" coal lands and forced the prices up to an unreasonably high point.

Col. Andrew Jackson Dead.

Nashville, Tenn.—A Knoxville dispatch to the Banner says that Col. Andrew Jackson, son of the adopted son of President Andrew Jackson, died in that city. He was born in 1734 at the Hermitage, the home of Old Hickory, near this city. Up to a few months ago Col. Jackson had been in the internal revenue service in this state.

Woman Found in Barrel.

Hazelton, Pa.—Soberta Anaslack, a Slavonian living at Jeddo, Pa, was arrested at that place on the charge of being implicated in the Hazelton barrel mystery. It is alleged that the woman whose charred remains were found here were his wife, who disappeared from home several weeks ago. It is reported that the marriage of the couple, which took place a year ago, was opposed by their relatives and that after their wedding they had frequent quarrels.

Fleet Icebound.

St. Johns, N. F. The American Navy tug Potomac and 46 American, Canadian and Newfoundland fishing vessels with 3,000 nets, were cought fast in the ice floes near Bay of Islands. In responce to a message to this city, a steamer was sent to the imprisoned fleet and with the aid of the crews of all the vessels succeeded in getting out the Potomac. The ice which held the fishing vessels was broken by the cruiser and the whole fleet was leberated.

New Newspaper.

Meridian, Miss.—John T. Land, for the past six and a half years business manager of the Evening Star, severs his connection with that publication on the first of the year. He will remain in Meridian, and it is strongly intimated, launch a new afternoon newspaper on or about March 1 next. Associated with Mr. Land, it is understood, are other practical newspaper men of this and other cities, as well as several prominent capitalists.

Shah at Point of Death.

St. Petersburg.—Dispatches received here from Teheran say that the Shah is at the point of death. The accession of his successor, Prince Ali Mirza, is expected to pass off quietly and without opposition. Great Brittain and Russia are acting in concert in this connection.

Jap Squadron Afraid.

Honolulu.—The Japanese counsel here says that the visiting squadron which will arrive in Honolulu in February, will not proceed to San Francisco as originally intended because a repetition of the Maine disaster is feared owing to the alleged overwrought condition of the American feeling.

Folk Begins Suit.

St. Louis.—Suit was filed in the circuit court by counsel representing Governor Folk against the city of St. Louis to enforce the payment of a balance of his salary as circuit attorney alleged to be long over due.

Governor Folk claims that he is entitled to $5,833.33 back salary.

Cuban Episode Cost $2,000,000.

Washington, D. C.—The Cuban financial situation was explained to the house committee on appropriations by Secretary Taft. Through this explanation it was ascertained that American intervention in the island necessitated the expenditure of something more than $2,000,000.

It is the understanding that this claim is not to be pressed immediately but on ascertainment of the condition of the Cuban finances an order may be issued from President Roosevelt to the provisional government of the island to transfer a monthly sum from the Cuban to the American treasury as payment on this claim.

Pension Bills.

Washington, D. C.—The house considered private pension bills, there being 346 such measures on the calendar.

Arguing Gray Cases.

Montgomery, Ala.—The appeal in the quo warranto proceedings of the Louisville and Nashville vs. Henry B. Gray, which ousted the Louisville and Nashville from operating the South and North road, is being argued before the supreme court.

The contempt appeal against the road for operating the South and North will be argued Thursday.

Japs Have Ambitious Scheme.

San Francisco, Cal.—Dr. J. E. Jones, United States consul at Dalny, who arrived on the liner Nippon Maru, is quoted in an interview published in the Chronicle as saying that the Japanese are carrying out an ambitious plan which, if it succeeds, will close Asia as a market for American wheat and cotton. The Japanese, he says, are colonizing Manchuria on an extensive scale with the idea of raising sufficient wheat there to supply the needs of Asia.

McCabe Very Ill.

New York.—Bishop C. C. McCabe of Philadelphia, suffering from a recent attack of apoplexy, continues in a very precarious condition.

Rome.—The death was announced Tuesday of Monsignor Adami one of the most wealthy Roman prelates. During his lifetime, Monsignor Adami made valuable presents to Pope Leo XIII and Pius X, his gifts to the latter being a gold pectoral cross set with brilliants and by his will he left $1,000,000 to the pope.

Nominations.

Washington.—The president sent to the senate the following nominations:

Collector of customs, district of Sabine, Tex., Russell H. Dunn.

Chaplain, retired with rank of captain, to be chaplain, retired, rank of rear admiral, Frank B. Rose.

End of Insurance Campaign.

New York.—The close of the remarkable campaign which has been waged between the policyholders of the Mutual and New York Life Insurance Companies, control of the affairs of the companies and their stupendous assets aggregating hundreds of millions of dollars, is at hand.

Tennessee Company Gets Contract.

Montgomery, Ala.—The Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company has been awarded a contract for the Montgomery county convicts for $38.50 The Sloss-Sheffield Company also made a bid.

The State Wins.

Washington.—The case of the Alabama and Mississippi Railroad Company verans the Mississippi Railroad Commission was decided in favor of the state by the supreme court.

Portsmouth, Eng.—Nine sailors belonging to the crew of the battleship Hindusland were drowned owing to the upsetting of a cutter.

Moscow.—Thirty members of the revolution fighting organization have been arrested in the Bassmanoff quarter. Large stocks of arms and ammunition and bombs were seized.

ASKED TO TAKE HAND.

Report that Belgium Has annexed the Country Arouses Leaders of the Reform.

Chicago.—The Record-Herald says: Fearful that the Congo Free State has been annexed formally by Belgium leaders of the Congo Reform Association rushed to Washington prepared to urge immediate action by the United States.

Herbert S. Johnson, a leader in the propaganda which would free the African interior departed for the capitol and said just prior to leaving that it had been decided to urge that the senate take definite action before the holiday adjournment.

A telegram to Mr. Johnson from Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Barbour, head of the Baptist missions in Africa, and the commissioner general of the Congo Reform Association in America stated that advices by cable from Brussels indicated that Belgium had, through its parliament, formally assumed sovereignty over the Congo Free State, pending the closing up of formalities between King Leopold and the representatives of the Belgiam government.

The fact about the transaction is that the deal is to be consumated far ahead of the death of King Leopold and the terms of the will of the king, which were formally ratified by Belgium several days since, are to become effective at once.

Farm Implement Combine.

Chicago, Ill.—Unless plans which are sanctioned by J. Pierpont Morgan and agreed to by the holders of at least $100,000,000 out of $120,000,000 of the stock of the International Harvester Company fall through, February 1, 1907, should see the complete financial reorganization of the great farm implement combination.

Tentative contracts, which have been signed by the chief stockholders, call for the conversion of $120,000,000 of capital stock of one class into a like amount of new stock, divided into $60,000,000 common; the retirement of several interests from active business management of the company and a general change in the staff of officials. The expectation is that the new securities will be listed on the New York exchange, which, if the plans are carried through, will give the stockholders a broad market for their securities and enable them to retire if they desire to do so.

English Unions Make Demands.

London.—The Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants, representatives of all the trade unions in this country, has approved the national program and the executive officers propose to present demands simultaneously to all the companies early next year. The chief demands are an eight-hour day, an improvement in wages and recognition of their society.

Thinks Estimate About Right.

Jackson, Miss.—Commenting on the recent decline in the price of cotton, President Clark, of the Mississippi division of the Southern Cotton Association, says the government estimate is "very near the truth." However, conditions warrant higher prices, and it is the duty of every man who can to hold for an advance, which he believes will reach 11 or 12 cents.

Cruiser Montana Given to Ocean.

Newport News, Va.—The United States armored cruiser Montana was successfully launched at the Newport News ship yard in the presence of a large number of people. The vessel was christened by Miss Minnie Conrad, daughter of W. G. Conrad, of Montana. Governor Toole, of that state, was represented by Martin Maginnis, former territorial delegate in congress. Senator Carter and Representative Dixon also were present. The navy was not officially represented. After the launching the sponsor's party was entertained at breakfast. The Montana is about 58 per cent completed and is a sister ship to the North Carolina. Her contract calls for a speed of twenty-two knots.

Child Addicted to Tobacco.

New York.—A dispatch to the Times from Lowell, Mass., says officers of the Lowell Humane Society found a 2-year-old child who is a confirmed smoker and has used daily a corn-cob pipe since he was 18 months old. The child is Andre, the son of Albert Beaulin. When the officers took his pipe away he screamed with anger.

To Advance Wages.

New York.—The Standard Oil Company has announced that it will advance the wages of all of its employes now receiving less than $100 a month by 10 per cent, beginning January 1.

Deficiency Bill.

Washington.—The senate has passed the urgent deficiency appropriation bill enacted by the house Saturday.

BEFORE WATERLOO.

His face is seamed with lines of care,
Despair and agitation;
His knitted, clouded brow is wet
With beads of perspiration.
What dreadful curse hangs o'er his head,
Like sword to fall and smite him?
Or has his conscience serpent fangs
To sorely sting and bite him?

Oh, no; with friends he cracked some jokes
When all were feeling mellow,
And they convinced him that he was
A bright and sparkling fellow.
They captured in his moments weak,
This rash, vainglorious sinner,
And he consented with a speech
To grace a public dinner.

Where is his inspiration gone?
His mind now gropes and wanders,
And now and then he mutters low
And bites his lip and ponders.
He turns his stock of stories o'er
And finds with memory murky
He's stuffed as full of chestnuts as
A roast Thanksgiving turkey.

So he'll break down—he knows he will—
Supreme of all disgraces!
He shudders as he thinks he sees
The rows of glistening faces,
So, as the fatal hour draws nigh,
He paler grows and thinner,
And gloomier than a funeral feast
Appears that dreaded dinner.

Courage, Weary Diner.

Tingley Has Invented a Quietus for After-Dinner Speakers.

A hundred and fifty gentlemen in evening dress sat in ghastly alignment along the sides of the huge banquet table. The debris of an elaborately indigestible menu had been removed from the cloth, and 150 stomachs were, so to speak, wringing their hands over the problem in their midst.

Before each gentleman was his demitasse and his thimble of liqueur. The air was heavily aromatic with the incense of 100 cigars and the smell of 50 cigarettes. There was a show of luxury everywhere; yet a look of dogged misery sat on every mien, and despair was abroad in the very atmosphere as at the feast of a Belshazzar.

But there was no handwriting on the wall to cause this dejection. The explanation was simple. During the procession of viands the cates and embottled sunshine, conversation had flowed freely from uncorked souls, jokes had popped and laughter had gurgled. But now the after dinner speaker was getting in his deadly work.

It is said that you can always tell at a banquet who the speakers are to be by observing those who eat least, drink most desperately and wear the sorriest faces. But once the food has vanished, it is the audience, not the speakers, that wear the sorry faces.

This was not the first banquet Mr. Oliver Tingley had attended, but it was the first since his last solemn oath that he would never go to another. He always made such a vow after hours of that abject despondency, that living death, that state of tormented coma, one endures while flannel-trained cads squeak and gibber through their after dinner speeches.

On this occasion Mr. Tingley had been unable to decline the invitation. He knew the dinner would be harmoniously composed and melodiously served. He promised himself that along about tobacco-lighting time he would fade away with the first smoke. But it had been his ill-luck to be placed next to one of the speakers. He gave up hope of escape.

He was in for martyrdom. He little knew, as he sat there, that this ordeal was to inspire him with an epoch-making idea. It is not necessity but sorrow that is the mother of invention. How little we know when we suffer what will be the outcome of our grief! What is the pearl but the tear-drop of a despondent clam?

The toastmaster had been chosen for his political eminence in congress—an eminence that seems to unfit one hopelessly for after-dinner speaking.

With an eloquence that was appallingly out of place the toastmaster began to dilate on the grandeurs of American liberty, the westward progress of the star of empire, the lowly prairie schooner with is freight of glory, and the magnificence of our free school system.

It was all very important and more or less true, but it did not contribute to digestion. The toastmaster let the eagle scream himself hoarse, then made him scream some more. He pulled out the tail feathers one by one, and it was only when he had extracted the last pin-feather that he consented to introduce the first speaker.

The Hon. Justice Sudbury had for his subject the promising little trifle, "International law in its relation to the origin and scope of the Monroe Doctrine."

The Justice gazed down on the guests as if they were so many defendants in a civil action. And he read to them a speech full of legal verbiage and pomposity that had neither a scintilla of interest nor a prophecy of conclusion. He might have been talking yet had not one of the guests, who had managed to become coxily drunk, leaned across the table and asked him in a loud and bibulous tone:

"Is the old horse thief going to talk all night?"

The Justice overheard, and came to a halt. He realized that the offence was beyond his jurisdiction and he could not sentence the man to death. He clutched at a few straws and ignominiously sank into his seat. Every one applauded—ostensibly the speaker, actually the beneficent drunkard. This apparently unimportant episode started in Tingley's mind the first workings of the idea that resulted in his era-establishing invention.

The toastmaster rose again, studied his notes, and told a few stories, of whose hoary antiquity he alone seemed to be ignorant. He dragged them from their graves with the glee of a grinning ghoul. But as even the effort and inclination to be humorous are rare at banquets, the audience acclaimed him with gratitude. But he introduced Senator Peavey, whose subject was "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war.—Milton."

He spent five minutes saying that he was no speaker and twenty-five minutes proving it beyond a shadow of doubt.

He began logically with the first war, that of Cain and Abel, and came down the valleys of history with the deliberation of a glacier, neglecting few details and freezing everything he touched.

People coughed, shuffled their feet, talked and groaned. One man gave vent to a cavernous and reverberant yawn. Everybody laughed. But the speaker ignored him.

At the end of thirty minutes Senator Peavey had reached the paintings of Verestchagin, which he described with detail that was harrowing without being interesting.

A man from Texas delighted a group by declaring, "If he doesn't shut up I'll shoot him," but he disappointed them by inaction, though they promised him a verdict of justifiable homicide in self-defence. But nobody ever does the things that everybody wants to do.

In the balcony a few women sat yawning behind their fans and wondered what men saw in these affairs. But, like all things mundane, even Peavey came to an end.

Again a long interlude by the incorrigible toastmaster, then he introduced Congressman Quinby. Now, Quinby was chiefly famous for the occasion when he prevented the House from voting on a bill by talking against it for thirty-six hours, at which time the exhausted majority promised him anything if he would quit.

He began as if he were going to do it again but Mr. Tingley grew desperate. He rose from his place and sneaked from the room under pretence that he was overcome with a nose-bleed. Less courageous diners gazed at him with envy and longed for a hemorrhage or a paralytic stroke to rescue them.

Once out of the room, Tingley decided to walk home. The silence of the sky and the beautiful repose of the glittering stars led the thoughts to that heaven where there is no after-dinner speaking. It soothed him and uplifted his soul to a height where he longed to do something to help his suffering fellow men and to leave a name that posterity should call blessed.

Plainly the crying need of the twentieth century was a means of choking off long speeches after dinners. Warnings, prayers, hints, did no good. Tingley had once heard a desperate toastmaster introduce a speaker thus:

"The hour is exceedingly late. Every one wants to go home. I call upon Mr. Thaddeus Budd, because I know he has the good taste to close the occasion with about half a dozen words."

After such a preface, Tingley had seen this man Budd rise and talk for one hour by the clock. And one hour of after-dinner speaking equals a cycle of Cathay.

He had seen speakers who had talked on and on while the banqueters, one by one, in common despair, folded their napkins like the Arabs and as silently stole away.

He had seen speakers provoke a riot of protest and talk it down.

He had seen speakers resist the tugging of the toastmaster at their coat-tails.

It was evident that the relief was not to be found in admonition or prayer or in any human intervention. The simplest means of ending the evils of after-dinner speeches would be, of course, to give up the dinners. But Tingley knew that men liked to get together in regalia over the board. It was a survival of primitive and cannibal times.

"But in those days," he mused, "if a man talked too long the rest probably grabbed him, threw him in the pot and made an entree or a hors-d'oeuvre out of him. Ah! An Idea!"

Tingely started with joy. Of course, it would be impossible in these effete days to eat a garrulous speaker. But why not boil him?

Tingley hurried home and late as it was, went to his desk, turned on the light and worked like mad drawing plans. His wife found him there at 4 p. m. He heard a gasp and saw her standing somewhat like the Goddess of Liberty in curl papers, etc.

"What in heavens' name are you doing at this hour?" she gasped.

"Saving the great American people from the greatest danger that now threatens them—the danger of being talked to death," said Tingley, with a strange gleam in his eye. "Conversation has always been the greatest sin of republics, and dyspepsia admittedly the greatest blotch on American health ergo, dyspepsia is caused by conversation. Remove the cause and nature will do the rest. I have at last discovered the remedy."

Mrs. Tingley was not interested but she edged toward a cold steam radiator and listened while Tingley ran on.

"Like all the great inventions, my dear, the simplicity and obviousness of this chiefly excite one to marvel that the ages have had to wait so long for its discovery. My device is based on the same idea as that of common or garden gallows.

"The speaker, when introduced, is escorted to a platform or dais, slightly raised above the level of the floor, so that all may see him better. He is in reality standing on a trapdoor, operated by clockwork. As soon as he begins to speak the toastmaster presses a button, which sets the clock mechanism in motion. The speaker is warned that his remarks must be limited to ten minutes. It is possible to prolong the time by a simple adjustment of the clockwork, but under no circumstances can this be extended beyond eighteen minutes, as nobody on earth can conceivably have anything to say that a crowd of men full of dinner can properly listen to for longer than a quarter of an hour.

"One minute before the allotted time the speaker hears a low but ominous buzzing beneath his feet. This gives him ample time for his peroration or reminds him of his final story. He then finishes and retires.

"Otherwise—otherwise, my dear, at the exact end of the allotted time the trap beneath him opens automatically and he disappears into a yawning chasm."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Tingley with pardonable excitement. "What becomes of him then?"

"That depends," said Mr. Tingley. "I have several schemes in mind. In pattern A he is dropped into a large caldron of boiling oil. This is surely no more than is due to a man so merciless of his fellow citizens. An eye for an eye, torture for torture.

"As there is, however, a mawkish sentiment against making the punishment fit the crime, I shall expect to install more of my pattern B. In this the speaker is deposited on a polished chute or runaway, something like the 'down and out' at Coney Island. Through this he glides swiftly and safely to a porthole, whence he is carried by his own momentum into a waiting patrol wagon, which takes him to the police court. After a night in a prison cell he is arraigned the next morning for disorderly conduct, disturbing the peace and maintaining a nuisance. I call the device Tingley's Post-Prandial Trap, or Banqueting Made Easy. I shall incorporate a company tomorrow under the laws of New Jersey and begin the manufacture of those pain-killers at once. And now, what do you think of your husband?"

"I think," said Mrs. Tingley grimly, "that if you were on one of those post-prandial traps now I'd press the button. As it is you'd better go to bed."

No hero is a hero to his valet and no inventor a genius to his wife; but the world is soon to see the Tingley mechanism placed on the market. No hotel or banquet hall can afford to be without one.—Harper's Weekly.

A MODEL ENGLISH VILLAGE.

Bournville, Where the Workers Live in a Wooded Park.

During the past eleven years Bournville village has arisen, and today it shelters a community of about 3000. It covers an area of more than 500 acres, nearly the whole of which was a free gift by Mr. George Cadbury. The village, which stands amid gardens and park lands, comprises dwellings which are not beyond the resources of the artisan, and also a fair proportion of houses of the villa type. No two houses are alike. The average garden space allowed to each house is 600 square yards; and that most of the occupiers take a pride in their gardens is abundantly evident. The roads are 42 feet wide, and are planted with trees. The houses are set back at least 20 feet from the roads. About 1200 out of the 4000 employes in Messrs. Cadbury's factory reside in Bournville. Of the remaining residents about 40 percent work in Birmingham. Mr. George Cadbury explained that out of their 4000 workpeople only seven had died for the last four years, a death rate of less than two per 1000. Six hundred or 700 girls had learned to swim in a large bath provided for them at the works. Practically all the boys and men could swim.

No cottage is allowed to occupy more than one-fourth or one-fifth of the area of land on which it stands. Mr. Cadbury urged that if we were to maintain our position as an imperial race the problem of overcrowding in unsanitary surroundings in our great cities must be faced. At Bournville village the death rate was 7.5, whereas in the working class quarters of Birmingham the rate was three times as high. One of the principles which had been put into practice at Bournville was that every child should be within five minutes walk of a playground. He hoped England would soon adopt the German scheme of not allowing any district to be developed for building without the whole of the plans being fist submitted to a central authority.—London Times.

Some Hints for Parents.

We would like to wager that when the Topeka girl who left a home of wealth to marry a ball player and jointkeeper thirty years her senior was a child she kicked and screamed if she didn't have her own way and kept kicking and screaming till she got it. We make this wager for the benefit of parents who in to the children every time the children kick and scream to have their own way.—Atchison Globe.

"Now I could have sworn to the genuineness of the diamonds, but I let the subject drop. I am, however, quite curious in regard to this old woman. Nobody in the village knows anything of her antecedents.

"My feeling for Marguerite—that is the girl's name—is not curiosity. I am afraid I fell in love with her before I painted her portrait. That process is, however, begun.

"She scarcely glanced at the picture the first two or three days, but one day she peeped over my shoulder. Her surprise was charming.

"'Am I like that?' she said, her soft, large eyes full of wondering delight.

"'Like it, but more beautiful.'

"'Monsieur is very good,' she replied, with downcast eyes. 'But the picture is like one that Pauline has locked up in her drawer. I do not know who it is, but sometimes I think it is my mother.'

"Presently I said:

"'Don't you remember your mother?'

"'Ah, no! when I look back it is only Pauline, nothing but Pauline.'

"'Only Pauline! and what is the matter with Pauline, pray?' said a wiry, sinuous voice, and looking, we both saw the wrinkled, yellow visage of the old woman.

"A look of vivid dislike crossed the girl's face, and she hastened away.

"'Who is Marguerite?' I said, abruptly.

"'Do you not guess? What should she be but a poor foundling whom for sweet charity's sake I adopted?'

"Something in the subtle evil look in old Pauline's face as she said this made me certain that it was a lie. Then Marguerite returned.

"'Letters, monsieur!' she said.

"The superscription of yours caught my eye in an instant. In my surprise and pleasure I pronounced your name aloud. There was an instantaneous crash at the other end of the room. I turned astonished and beheld that hideous old Pauline—her face a deathly, yellowish white, and her eyes wide open and glaring fixedly upon me.

"'Monsieur!' she said, in a strange, harsh voice. Marguerite ran forward.

"'Pauline, Pauline!' she said, in terror.

"'Are you ill?' I asked, going up to her.

"'Thanks, monsieur! I am not ill. 'Twas an accursed wasp stung me. Mon Dieu! 'twas like a stab,' she replied, angrily.

"The sting was a pretense. Could the mention of your name have affected her so powerfully? Am I right in my impression that your family is from Southern France?"

For answer to this voluminous epistle, Basil received a half sheet from his friend:

"I am coming; expect me on Thursday."

Basil came in at dinner time, his eyes shining with pleasure at this prospect.

"Monsieur has good news," said Pauline, with a scrutinizing look at his face.

Basil glanced at her and perceived that the glittering brooch was missing.

"You are right, Mlle. Pauline. My friend, Louis Duval, is coming to make me a visit. Would it be convenient for you to accommodate my friend also?"

"Monsieur and his friend are most welcome to the whole house," returned Pauline, in a peculiar tone.

It seemed to Basil Deane that night as if his life had but just begun. Hitherto he had failed, and his life had had too many burdens, and too few hopes, for him to think of asking another to share it; but now all was changed; nothing seemed impossible. He loved Marguerite.

While he thought of her, he saw the flutter of her light dress in one of the shaded alleys.

"Marguerite!" he said, coming upon her suddenly.

"Ah, it is you, monsieur?" and her face was illumined.

"I want you, Marguerite, to have and to keep forever."

Her hands trembled—she faltered out:

"I thought Pauline sent you for me!"

"Nobody sent me. I saw you and came because I love you and wanted to be with you. Will you be my wife, Marguerite?"

"Your wife, monsieur! I am a poor ribbon weaver!" her innocent eyes lifted to his in frank surprise.

"And I am a poor artist. There is no disparity between us. The only question is of your loving me."

"There is no question of that, monsieur."

The moon had dropped below the dark belt of forest that shut in the little valley where Basil fell asleep.

When he awoke the sun was far up the sky. The remembrance of the past night came to him like a dream of ineffable happiness.

When he came downstairs he opened the door of the little kitchen. It was still and empty; no fire on the hearth; no signs of life anywhere. He crossed the room, and after tapping at the door of the bedroom where Pauline slept, opened it and looked in. The bed had been undisturbed since the day before. The women had disappeared. A thorough examination of the house showed that, while no bulky articles had been taken, nothing of value was left.

The next day Basil Deane presented himself in the city and told Louis of the mysterious flitting.

Louis' mobile face had grown sober. He half-opened his lips to speak, but the distress in Basil's countenance checked the words. He was thinking.

"You do not speak. You think I am deceived!"

"I am afraid you are," gently.

"Upon my life I am not," said Basil, eagerly. "I am a fool in worldly matters if you say so, but I know a pure, true woman when I see her. And I'll find Marguerite!"

He began his search at once, Louis Duval sometimes aiding him, and oftener, as time went by, trying to dissuade him.

It was two years after Marguerite's disappearance, and during that time Basil Deane had become a popular artist. His pictures were no longer hung in obscure corners at the exhibitions, but were the centre of admiring crowds. One evening, while waiting with Louis, he stepped into a goldsmith's shop upon some trifling errand. A shabby, foreign-looking man stood by the counter. "But if monsieur would be good enough to look at this," said the man, with French accent, and directly a lucid point shone out.

Basil's hand tightened over his friend's arm.

"That is the jewel I told you of. I know its setting," he said, in an excited whisper.

"Where did you get this?" demanded the goldsmith, looking at him with suspicion.

"It is a family jewel," returned the man, hurriedly, but, as if alarmed, the man began to put the trinket up. "If monsieur does not want it I will offer it elsewhere," he said, and went out. Our two friends silently followed, and at last came to a narrow alley. Before a tall, shabby house the man stopped. A hand was laid upon his shoulder.

"You are to explain how that jewel came into your possession," said Basil, with resolution. "Monsieur, the brooch is my wife's," said the man.

"Indeed! We will go in then and inquire of her." And Basil put his hand upon the bell-pull.

"For heaven's sake, gentlemen, don't do that," said the man, in fear, "Pauline will be angry."

Basil's heart leaped. For a moment he was incapable of speech. The shabby man opened the door and ran up a long flight. In a moment Basil Deane and Louis Duval followed. A shriek burst from Pauline's lips, and then she sank down in a corner. Somebody came forward.

"Monsieur!"

"Marguerite!"

The name was a glad cry, and his arms were open to receive her.

Marguerite's cheeks flushed. She looked in wonder from one to the other, her color visibly rising under Louis' eager gaze. And he seemed unable to remove his eyes from her.

"Who are you?" What do you want?" said Pauline, her eyes gleaming maliciously.

"Gently, madame! you know that but for one or two things you would be in the galleys at Toulon," said Duval.

"'Tis a lie! You don't know anything about it!" she cried.

"Then I must recall a few passages in your life to your remembrance; and I do it as much for the sake of that girl as for yours," said Louis. "You know that when you were my mother's bonne, in the confusion of her illness you stole her diamonds and had paste substituted for them. It was the brooch which was my father's wedding present to her that betrayed you at last."

Pauline dropped her face in her hands.

"And then, when my father married again, he retained you because of your supposed kindness to my mother. And when my grandfather, angry at this second match, and despising Marguerite's mother—peasant-born, but noble-hearted—let you see his hate, you fanned it with lies, and when at last the poor young creature died in my father's absence, you were ready, for money, to steal Marguerite. Now go and get my diamonds!"

She obeyed humbly, bringing them from a dingy closet, where they lay in a rough box beneath a pile of rubbish. Louis took the lucid gems out of their rough casket. Their splendor illumined the room.

"Here, Marguerite, little sister!"

He hung them upon her soft, brown curls, dropped them in shining links around her white throat and fastened them to the dainty wrists. She stood there between her brother and her lover, adorned like a queen, and happier in her simple womanhood than any queen of them all.—Amanda M. Hale.

To Get Rid of Stumps.

A method of getting rid of stumps which has been highly recommended and which, to be effective, should be done as follows:

Bore a hole one or two inches in diameter and about eighteen inches deep into the centre of the stump. Then put into this hole one or two ounces of saltpeter. Fill the hole with water and plug it up. In the spring take out the plug, pour in about one-half gallon of kerosene oil and light it. The stump will smolder away to the very extremities of the roots, leaving nothing but the ashes.

Fighting Weeds.

A writer in the Agricultural Epitomist suggests the following on fighting weeds:

1. Practice rotation. Certain weeds follow certain crops; when the weeds get too strong change crops.
2. Change the method of cultivating. Plow deeper or shallower, or use a different harrow or cultivator.
3. Cultivate frequently with light surface tools.
4. Sow clean seed.
5. Don't let weeds run to seed on the manure pile or anywhere else on the farm.
6. Hogs and sheep will clean up the weeds on foul fallow land. It is said that a weed will not germinate after a sheep has cropped it.

Cattle and Pigs.

Give the stables a good coat of whitewash. Put a cupful of strong coffee in the calf's skim milk; it will cure scours.

Always put a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in the milk for the calf or pigs. It is good for them, even though the milk be fresh from the separator.

Watch the fences between the pasture and the orchard. The perfume of early apples is very tempting to the cattle.

Sow rye for fall and winter pasture. Sow early so as to get as large a growth as possible before winter. In the spring you will have pasture a month before grass is ready. Four bushels to the acre, drilled in, is about right.

Flies are bad on milch cows. They will help reduce the flow of milk. Feed heavier, or give fresh cornstalks at night.

Keep the pig pen clean. Give the pigs pusley weed, as they are very fond of it, and it will do them good. Also sweet apples, but not sour ones. You will find plenty to keep the pigs without any feed.

Above all, keep the outbuildings nice and clean, with plenty of air, and you will not be troubled with all kinds of diseases. — Indianapolis News.

Try This Next Season.

A New London County writer in the Cultivator has a word to say about fertilizing potatoes that may well be preserved for next spring's use. He writes: "The finest looking piece of potatoes I have seen this summer was treated as follows: A piece of sward ground was selected of a fair quality of loam, but from which the grass had completely run out, so that it did not cut a quarter of a ton of hay per acre. It was plowed deep and thoroughly pulverized, and the potatoes planted about six inches deep. No barnyard manure was used, only artificial fertilizer at the rate of about 1500 pounds per acre, half of it applied when the piece was planted, and the remainder at the first hoeing. The piece was comparatively free from weeds, the absence of barnyard manure contributing to that result. The vines were very strong and vigorous, of a dark green but did not cover the ground. The yield was good, though not exceptionally so; about 200 bushels per acre. But they were a fine lot, perfectly smooth and handsome, of good size, and almost no small potatoes.

"Another piece, separated from the first by a few rods, and of precisely the same kind of soil, was treated like it in all respects, except that barnyard manure was used instead of artificial fertilizer. The vines were a light green, of rank growth, completely covering the ground more than two feet deep. The yield was not much more than half as great, the potatoes were not so large and smooth, and there were many more small ones."

Thinning an Orchard.

A Maine man wrote the Rural New Yorker for advice as to caring for an orchard whose trees had originally been planted too near each other and that had come to "lock horns" or branches, preventing the sun from finding its way among them. It is interesting to note the various suggestions advanced by the Rural's correspondents who undertook to help the man out. One suggested cutting out every other tree; another every other row each way; still another suggests selecting the rows to be removed and cutting back the overreaching branches, so the trees are bearing fair crops, continuing the work gradually for several years, when the trees may be entirely removed. Edwin Hoyt's plan appeals to the writer as both convenient and full of good sense. His advice to the querist instead of removing the trees to 'top them off the last of March. Cut every limb off and thin out many others. Let one or two sprouts grow on each limb cut off. In three years a new young top will be formed, and be in bearing condition, with a lower smaller top to be more easily sprayed and otherwise handled. Fruit will be finer and more easily gathered. After these trees get into good bearing, say four or five years, cut the remainder of these trees left in the same way. In this way renew the tops and keep them down where more easily sprayed and fruit gathered. This plan will be more like topping the trees for grafting, which, as experience has shown, will bring a new top on a regrafted tree in four years into full bearing. Try it on one or two trees if you doubt the expediency of this plan."

VAST STORE OF WEALTH.

Mother Earth Has Supplied the World's Greatest Fortunes.

Beit's vast wealth came from mines—diamonds, gold and copper—like the immense fortune of Senator William A. Clark, of Montana; like the $25,000,000 or more accumulated by Cecil Rhodes.

The earth was also the source of the wealth of both John D. Rockefeller and his brother William. The same thing is true of Carnegie's great store of wealth. It was really dug from iron mines—iron and coal.

Krupp piled up the largest estate in Germany in like manner. He made his money by manufacturing the product of iron mines.

The earth is a magnificent storehouse of wealth. It has proved more fruitful of immense fortunes than the vast transportation business which made the fortunes of the Vanderbilts and the Goulds, Hill, Harriman and the rest of the railroad kings. It has beaten the mere ownership and the use of the surface of the ground, Astor fashion, says the Cleveland Leader. Whereupon the Manufacturer's Record adds:

Yes, and the great centre of the earth's storehouse is the South. Think of its coal area, nearly three times as great as the combined coal fields of Great Britain, Germany and Pennsylvania; of its iron ore, far surpassing in quantity that which made the fortunes of Carnegie and Krupp; of its oil, promising to exceed in yield all that went to make the fortunes of the Rockefellers; of its sulphur, which dominates the world's sulphur trade; of its phosphate, which holds the same unique position in the world's fertilizer industry; of its vast stores of cement making materials, the industry which promises to rival iron and steel; of its copper and other higher forms of minerals, and then let your imagination attempt to forecast the vastness of the wealth which this mineral storehouse of the world is to turn loose in the South.

A Big Paper-Making Machine.

There has just been completed by a firm of Edinburgh, Scotland, the largest paper-making machine ever constructed. Some idea of its dimensions may be afforded by the statement that a shed 185 long is not sufficient to house it. The striking feature of the machine is its great width. This is called for by the fact that the paper mill company is Sweden to whose order it has been built, intends to use it for the making of two sheets of newspaper, each seventy-five inches wide, or 150 inches of finished paper. To run a sheet of this width at the high speed of 500 feet per minute requires a machine with exceptional driving gear and rolls of extraordinary diameter and weight. The paper to be made is to have a better finish than is customary for newspaper use, and to that end an enormous stack of calender rolls is provided. These rolls weigh about seventy tons, the bottom one alone weighing fourteen and a half tons. The steam engine by which the machine is to be driven is capable of developing 200 horse-power. With all the accessories the complete machine weighs 550 tons, and a special steamer has been chartered to carry it to Sweden. The price paid for the big machine by the Swedish company was $72,997.—Scientific American.

Brother Jackson.

A colored brother, in a Southern town, had joined every church in the hamlet, and had been baptized by immersion each time he was received into the fold of a different denomination. When he at last cast his lot with the Baptists, the announcement was made that the baptising would take place at 4 o'clock the next afternoon.

One old sister in Zion leaned over and whispered to another: "Brudder Jackson done been baptised so often dot de fish in de creek most sholy be right well acquainted wid him!"—Woman's Home Companion.

It has been established that ordinary cooking does not kill bacilli, or deprive them of their infective character, if they are situate in the deeper portions of the meat, or in the inner layers of a butcher's "roll."

Antimony has a hardening effect when added to lead; a small quantity of bismuth gives the alloy the property of expanding at the instant at which it solidifies, the result being a perfect cast from the mould.

Successful experiments have been made at Toulon, France, with a dirigible floating mine, which can be made to travel on the surface in any direction, and to sink and rise again at will. By a mechanical arrangement the charge can be neutralized and the mine made unexplosive.

In order to cause paint to adhere firmly to galvanized iron, the United States Government has adopted specifications compelling the use of vinegar for washing the surface preparatory to painting. This is said to roughen the surface, thus giving the paint better opportunity to adhere.

The New York World used for the first time during the last election the new scientific method of displaying election returns at night. It was the telautograph - stereopticon, which transmitted to screen in Park Row the shadowing picture of a huge pen which dashed off the election figures the moment they were received by telegraph.

An analysis of the ashes of the recent Vesuvian eruption shows, we are told by a Parisian journal, that they appear to contain substances that might make them useful to farmers as a fertilizer. This explains why, after the eruptions of Pelee and Vesuvius, the slopes of these volcanoes, after a few rains, became covered, it would appear, with luxuriant vegetation, so that their destructive activity is scarcely recalled. They cause crops to grow that they may destroy them at the next eruption and fertilizer the soil afresh.

In his Bakerian lecture in London recently, Professor John Milne said that in addition to the many tremors due to seismic, or earthquake, influences which delicate modern instruments detect, there are certain pulsations which seem to have some other origin. Some of these are diurnal, and are probably due to the influence of the sun and the weather on the ground. In wet weather the sides and bottom of a valley carry a greater load than the bounding ridges; in dry weather the case is reversed. Even the transpiration of moisture by plants may produce perceptible effects upon the tilt of the ground. Thus the face of mother earth is almost as sensitive to external influences as the skin of a living creature.

Diplomatic Scandal Hushed.

The information contained in these dispatches of the discovery here of an extensive system of espionage, in which an important person in diplomatic circles was involved, has been reproduced widely in the Paris newspapers. Although the ministry of foreign affairs has refused to confirm the story, it does not deny it.

Mark Twain was talking of war and of the hardships and privations of sieges.

"A Frenchman," he said, "called one day on a woman who had two dogs. They were ugly little brutes, and, when they came near him, the man pushed them out of the way with his foot.

"'I perceive, sir, you are not very fond of dogs.'

"The man started in surprise.

"'I'm not fond of dogs!' he exclaimed. 'Why, madam, I ate more than twenty of them during the siege of Paris!'"—Harper's Weekly.

"Now I could have sworn to the genuineness of the diamonds, but I let the subject drop. I am, however, quite curious in regard to this old woman. Nobody in the village knows anything of her antecedents.

"My feeling for Marguerite—that is the girl's name—is not curiosity. I am afraid I fell in love with her before I painted her portrait. That process is, however, begun.

"She scarcely glanced at the picture the first two or three days, but one day she peeped over my shoulder. Her surprise was charming.

"'Am I like that?' she said, her soft, large eyes full of wondering delight.

"'Like it, but more beautiful.'

"'Monsieur is very good,' she replied, with downcast eyes. 'But the picture is like one that Pauline has locked up in her drawer. I do not know who it is, but sometimes I think it is my mother.'

"Presently I said:

"'Don't you remember your mother?'

"'Ah, no! when I look back it is only Pauline, nothing but Pauline.'

"'Only Pauline! and what is the matter with Pauline, pray?' said a wiry, sinuous voice, and looking, we both saw the wrinkled, yellow visage of the old woman.

"A look of vivid dislike crossed the girl's face, and she hastened away.

"'Who is Marguerite?' I said, abruptly.

"'Do you not guess? What should she be but a poor foundling whom for sweet charity's sake I adopted?'

"Something in the subtle evil look in old Pauline's face as she said this made me certain that it was a lie. Then Marguerite returned.

"'Letters, monsieur!' she said.

"The superscription of yours caught my eye in an instant. In my surprise and pleasure I pronounced your name aloud. There was an instantaneous crash at the other end of the room. I turned astonished and beheld that hideous old Pauline—her face a deathly, yellowish white, and her eyes wide open and glaring fixedly upon me.

"'Monsieur!' she said, in a strange, harsh voice. Marguerite ran forward.

"'Pauline, Pauline!' she said, in terror.

"'Are you ill?' I asked, going up to her.

"'Thanks, monsieur! I am not ill. 'Twas an accursed wasp stung me. Mon Dieu! 'twas like a stab,' she replied, angrily.

"The sting was a pretense. Could the mention of your name have affected her so powerfully? Am I right in my impression that your family is from Southern France?"

For answer to this voluminous epistle, Basil received a half sheet from his friend:

"I am coming; expect me on Thursday."

Basil came in at dinner time, his eyes shining with pleasure at this prospect.

"Monsieur has good news," said Pauline, with a scrutinizing look at his face.

Basil glanced at her and perceived that the glittering brooch was missing.

"You are right, Mlle. Pauline. My friend, Louis Duval, is coming to make me a visit. Would it be convenient for you to accommodate my friend also?"

"Monsieur and his friend are most welcome to the whole house," returned Pauline, in a peculiar tone.

It seemed to Basil Deane that night as if his life had but just begun. Hitherto he had failed, and his life had had too many burdens, and too few hopes, for him to think of asking another to share it; but now all was changed: nothing seemed impossible. He loved Marguerite.

While he thought of her, he saw the flutter of her light dress in one of the shaded alleys.

"Marguerite!" he said, coming upon her suddenly.

"Ah, it is you, monsieur?" and her face was illumined.

"I want you, Marguerite, to have and to keep forever."

Her hands trembled—she faltered out:

"I thought Pauline sent you for me!"

"Nobody sent me. I saw you and came because I love you and wanted to be with you. Will you be my wife, Marguerite?"

"Your wife, monsieur! I am a poor ribbon weaver!" her innocent eyes lifted to his in frank surprise.

"And I am a poor artist. There is no disparity between us. The only question is of your loving me."

"There is no question of that, monsieur."

The moon had dropped below the dark belt of forest that shut in the little valley where Basil fell asleep. When he awoke the sun was far up the sky. The remembrance of the past night came to him like a dream of ineffable happiness.

When he came downstairs he opened the door of the little kitchen. It was still and empty; no fire on the hearth; no signs of life anywhere. He crossed the room, and after tapping at the door of the bedroom where Pauline slept, opened it and looked in. The bed had been undisturbed since the day before. The women had disappeared. A thorough examination of the house showed that, while no bulky articles had been taken, nothing of value was left.

The next day Basil Deane presented himself in the city and told Louis of the mysterious flitting.

Louis' mobile face had grown sober. He half-opened his lips to speak, but the distress in Basil's countenance checked the words. He was thinking.

"You do not speak. You think I am deceived!"

"I am afraid you are," gently.

"Upon my life I am not," said Basil, eagerly. "I am a fool in worldly matters if you say so, but I know a pure, true woman when I see her. And I'll find Marguerite!"

He began his search at once, Louis Duval sometimes aiding him, and oftener, as time went by, trying to dissuade him.

It was two years after Marguerite's disappearance, and during that time Basil Deane had become a popular artist. His pictures were no longer hung in obscure corners at the exhibitions, but were the centre of admiring crowds. One evening, while waiting with Louis, he stepped into a goldsmith's shop upon some trifling errand. A shabby, foreign-looking man stood by the counter. "But if monsieur would be good enough to look at this," said the man, with French accent, and directly a lucid point shone out.

Basil's hand tightened over his friend's arm.

"That is the jewel I told you of. I know its setting," he said, in an excited whisper.

"Where did you get this?" demanded the goldsmith, looking at him with suspicion.

"It is a family jewel," returned the man, hurriedly, but, as if alarmed, the man began to put the trinket up. "If monsieur does not want it I will offer it elsewhere," he said, and went out. Our two friends silently followed, and at last came to a narrow alley. Before a tall, shabby house the man stopped. A hand was laid upon his shoulder.

"You are to explain how that jewel came into your possession," said Basil, with resolution. "Monsieur, the brooch is my wife's," said the man.

"Indeed! We will go in then and inquire of her." And Basil put his hand upon the bell-pull.

"For heaven's sake, gentlemen, don't do that," said the man, in fear, "Pauline will be angry."

Basil's heart leaped. For a moment he was incapable of speech. The shabby man opened the door and ran up a long flight. In a moment Basil Deane and Louis Duval followed. A shriek burst from Pauline's lips, and then she sank down in a corner. Somebody came forward.

"Monsieur!"

"Marguerite!"

The name was a glad cry, and his arms were open to receive her.

Marguerite's cheeks flushed. She looked in wonder from one to the other, her color visibly rising under Louis' eager gaze. And he seemed unable to remove his eyes from her.

"Who are you? What do you want?" said Pauline, her eyes gleaming maliciously.

"Gently, madame! you know that but for one or two things you would be in the galleys at Toulon," said Duval.

"'Tis a lie! You don't know anything about it!" she cried.

"Then I must recall a few passages in your life to your remembrance; and I do it as much for the sake of that girl as for yours," said Louis. "You know that when you were my mother's bonne, in the confusion of her illness you stole her diamonds and had paste substituted for them. It was the brooch which was my father's wedding present to her that betrayed you at last."

Pauline dropped her face in her hands.

"And then, when my father married again, he retained you because of your supposed kindness to my mother. And when my grandfather, angry at this second match, and despising Marguerite's mother—peasant-born, but noble-hearted—let you see his hate, you fanned it with lies, and when at last the poor young creature died in my father's absence, you were ready, for money, to steal Marguerite. Now go and get my diamonds!"

She obeyed humbly, bringing them from a dingy closet, where they lay in a rough box beneath a pile of rubbish. Louis took the lucid gems out of their rough casket. Their splendor illumined the room.

"Here, Marguerite, little sister!"

He hung them upon her soft, brown curls, dropped them in shining links around her white throat and fastened them to the dainty wrists. She stood there between her brother and her lover, adorned like a queen, and happier in her simple womanhood than any queen of them all.—Amanda M. Hale.

To Get Rid of Stumps.

A method of getting rid of stumps which has been highly recommended and which, to be effective, should be done as follows:

Bore a hole one or two inches in diameter and about eighteen inches deep into the centre of the stump. Then put into this hole one or two ounces of saltpeter. Fill the hole with water and plug it up. In the spring take out the plug, pour in about one-half gallon of kerosene oil and light it. The stump will smolder away to the very extremities of the roots, leaving nothing but the ashes.

Fighting Weeds.

A writer in the Agricultural Epitomist suggests the following on fighting weeds:

1. Practice rotation. Certain weeds follow certain crops; when the weeds get too strong change crops.
2. Change the method of cultivating. Plow deeper or shallower, or use a different harrow or cultivator.
3. Cultivate frequently with light surface tools.
4. Sow clean seed.
5. Don't let weeds run to seed on the manure pile or anywhere else on the farm.
6. Hogs and sheep will clean up the weeds on foul fallow land. It is said that a weed will not germinate after a sheep has cropped it.

Cattle and Pigs.

Give the stables a good coat of whitewash. Put a cupful of strong coffee in the calf's skim milk; it will cure scours.

Always put a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda in the milk for the calf or pigs. It is good for them, even though the milk be fresh from the separator.

Watch the fences between the pasture and the orchard. The perfume of early apples is very tempting to the cattle.

Sow rye for fall and winter pasture. Sow early so as to get as large a growth as possible before winter. In the spring you will have pasture a month before grass is ready. Four bushels to the acre, drilled in, is about right.

Flies are bad on milch cows. They will help reduce the flow of milk. Feed heavier, or give fresh cornstalks at night.

Keep the pig pen clean. Give the pigs pusley weed, as they are very fond of it, and it will do them good. Also sweet apples, but not sour ones. You will find plenty to keep the pigs without any feed.

Above all, keep the outbuildings nice and clean, with plenty of air, and you will not be troubled with all kinds of diseases. — Indianapolis News.

Try This Next Season.

A New London County writer in the Cultivator has a word to say about fertilizing potatoes that may well be preserved for next spring's use. He writes: "The finest looking piece of potatoes I have seen this summer was treated as follows: A piece of sward ground was selected of a fair quality of loam, but from which the grass had completely run out, so that it did not cut a quarter of a ton of hay per acre. It was plowed deep and thoroughly pulverized, and the potatoes planted about six inches deep. No barnyard manure was used, only artificial fertilizer at the rate of about 1500 pounds per acre, half of it applied when the piece was planted, and the remainder at the first hoeing. The piece was comparatively free from weeds, the absence of barnyard manure contributing to that result. The vines were very strong and vigorous, of a dark green but did not cover the ground. The yield was good, though not exceptionally so; about 200 bushels per acre. But they were a fine lot, perfectly smooth and handsome, of good size, and almost no small potatoes.

"Another piece, separated from the first by a few rods, and of precisely the same kind of soil, was treated like it in all respects, except that barnyard manure was used instead of artificial fertilizer. The vines were a light green, of rank growth, completely covering the ground more than two feet deep. The yield was not much more than half as great, the potatoes were not so large and smooth, and there were many more small ones."

Thinning an Orchard.

A Maine man wrote the Rural New Yorker for advice as to caring for an orchard whose trees had originally been planted too near each other and that had come to "lock horns" or branches, preventing the sun from finding its way among them. It is interesting to note the various suggestions advanced by the Rural's correspondents who undertook to help the man out. One suggested cutting out every other tree; another every other row each way; still another suggests selecting the rows to be removed and cutting back the overreaching branches, so the trees are bearing fair crops, continuing the work gradually for several years, when the trees may be entirely removed. Edwin Hoyt's plan appeals to the writer as both convenient and full of good sense. His advice to the querist instead of removing the trees to 'top them off the last of March. Cut every limb off and thin out many others. Let one or two sprouts grow on each limb cut off. In three years a new young top will be formed, and be in bearing condition, with a lower smaller top to be more easily sprayed and otherwise handled. Fruit will be finer and more easily gathered. After these trees get into good bearing, say four or five years, cut the remainder of these trees left in the same way. In this way renew the tops and keep them down where more easily sprayed and fruit gathered. This plan will be more like topping the trees for grafting, which, as experience has shown, will bring a new top on a regrafted tree in four years into full bearing. Try it on one or two trees if you doubt the expediency of this plan."

VAST STORE OF WEALTH.

Mother Earth Has Supplied the World's Greatest Fortunes.

Beit's vast wealth came from mines—diamonds, gold and copper—like the immense fortune of Senator William A. Clark, of Montana; like the $25,000,000 or more accumulated by Cecil Rhodes.

The earth was also the source of the wealth of both John D. Rockefeller and his brother William. The same thing is true of Carnegie's great store of wealth. It was really dug from iron mines—iron and coal.

Krupp piled up the largest estate in Germany in like manner. He made his money by manufacturing the product of iron mines.

The earth is a magnificent storehouse of wealth. It has proved more fruitful of immense fortunes than the vast transportation business which made the fortunes of the Vanderbilts and the Goulds, Hill, Harriman and the rest of the railroad kings. It has beaten the mere ownership and the use of the surface of the ground, Astor fashion, says the Cleveland Leader. Whereupon the Manufacturer's Record adds:

Yes, and the great centre of the earth's storehouse is the South. Think of its coal area, nearly three times as great as the combined coal fields of Great Britain, Germany and Pennsylvania; of its iron ore, far surpassing in quantity that which made the fortunes of Carnegie and Krupp; of its oil, promising to exceed in yield all that went to make the fortunes of the Rockefellers; of its sulphur, which dominates the world's sulphur trade; of its phosphate, which holds the same unique position in the world's fertilizer industry; of its vast stores of cement making materials, the industry which promises to rival iron and steel; of its copper and other higher forms of minerals, and then let your imagination attempt to forecast the vastness of the wealth which this mineral storehouse of the world is to turn loose in the South.

A Big Paper-Making Machine.

There has just been completed by a firm of Edinburgh, Scotland, the largest paper-making machine ever constructed. Some idea of its dimensions may be afforded by the statement that a shed 185 long is not sufficient to house it. The striking feature of the machine is its great width. This is called for by the fact that the paper mill company is Sweden to whose order it has been built, intends to use it for the making of two sheets of newspaper, each seventy-five inches wide, or 150 inches of finished paper. To run a sheet of this width at the high speed of 500 feet per minute requires a machine with exceptional driving gear and rolls of extraordinary diameter and weight. The paper to be made is to have a better finish than is customary for newspaper use, and to that end an enormous stack of calender rolls is provided. These rolls weigh about seventy tons, the bottom one alone weighing fourteen and a half tons. The steam engine by which the machine is to be driven is capable of developing 200 horse-power. With all the accessories the complete machine weighs 550 tons, and a special steamer has been chartered to carry it to Sweden. The price paid for the big machine by the Swedish company was $72,997.—Scientific American.

Brother Jackson.

A colored brother, in a Southern town, had joined every church in the hamlet, and had been baptized by immersion each time he was received into the fold of a different denomination. When he at last cast his lot with the Baptists, the announcement was made that the baptising would take place at 4 o'clock the next afternoon.

One old sister in Zion leaned over and whispered to another: "Brudder Jackson done been baptised so often dot de fish in de creek most sholy be right well acquainted wid him!"—Woman's Home Companion.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY

It has been established that ordinary cooking does not kill bacilli, or deprive them of their infective character, if they are situate in the deeper portions of the meat, or in the inner layers of a butcher's "roll."

Antimony has a hardening effect when added to lead; a small quantity of bismuth gives the alloy the property of expanding at the instant at which it solidifies, the result being a perfect cast from the mould.

Successful experiments have been made at Toulon, France, with a dirigible floating mine, which can be made to travel on the surface in any direction, and to sink and rise again at will. By a mechanical arrangement the charge can be neutralized and the mine made unexplosive.

In order to cause paint to adhere firmly to galvanized iron, the United States Government has adopted specifications compelling the use of vinegar for washing the surface preparatory to painting. This is said to roughen the surface, thus giving the paint better opportunity to adhere.

The New York World used for the first time during the last election the new scientific method of displaying election returns at night. It was the telautograph - stereopticon, which transmitted to screen in Park Row the shadowing picture of a huge pen which dashed off the election figures the moment they were received by telegraph.

An analysis of the ashes of the recent Vesuvian eruption shows, we are told by a Parisian journal, that they appear to contain substances that might make them useful to farmers as a fertilizer. This explains why, after the eruptions of Pelee and Vesuvius, the slopes of these volcanoes, after a few rains, became covered, it would appear, with luxuriant vegetation, so that their destructive activity is scarcely recalled. They cause crops to grow that they may destroy them at the next eruption and fertilizer the soil afresh.

In his Bakerian lecture in London recently, Professor John Milne said that in addition to the many tremors due to seismic, or earthquake, influences which delicate modern instruments detect, there are certain pulsations which seem to have some other origin. Some of these are diurnal, and are probably due to the influence of the sun and the weather on the ground. In wet weather the sides and bottom of a valley carry a greater load than the bounding ridges; in dry weather the case is reversed. Even the transpiration of moisture by plants may produce perceptible effects upon the tilt of the ground. Thus the face of mother earth is almost as sensitive to external influences as the skin of a living creature.

It has been decided to hush up the matter as far as possible, and to take no public action against the prominent foreign diplomatic agent to whom the secrets were betrayed.—Paris Dispatch to Philadelphia Ledger.

COUNTY EXAMINATIONS.

Lee county has had an examination of its county officers as to how they stand to the county, and the examiner reports that the several officers owe the county over $20,000 for money illegally paid them in the last few years. Why can't we have an examination in Chilton?

A WAR RELIC.

Mr. J. J. Grant has in his possession a relic of the battle of Fredericksburg, that occurred on December 13, 1862. It is a pocket lexicon. Lyman Cobb is the compiler, and it was published by Harper Bros. in 1859. On the fly leaf is written "Geo. V. Leech, 1859." Mr. Grant picked up the book in the Union camp after the Federal troops had retreated to the east bank of the Rappahannock river, and has kept it ever since. As one looks at the book one can't help but wonder what became of the owner, whether he was killed or not. Mr. Grant was a member of Company I, Thirteenth Alabama Infantry, and now resides in Clanton, Ala., and says he would like to hear from the former owner of the book or his heirs, and return it to them, though he values it very highly.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENT.

The patrons and friends of the Thorsby public school are more cordially invited to be present at a Christmas entertainment Friday evening, December 21. Exercises will begin at 7:30 p. m.

STEVONIA E. NASH, Principal.

TO OUR FRIENDS AND CUSTOMERS.

The year 1906 will soon be in the past, and many events be forgotten by all, but we shall not allow the kindness and patronage we have enjoyed from you this year go from our memory.

We have much to feel proud for. You have given us a liberal share of your trade, we have tried to give you value received for your money, and the result is satisfactory to us, and we hope it is with you, and that you will not forget us in 1907 when you are in the market for hardware.

Please accept our thanks for all this and our sincere wish that you may have a delightful Christmas, a pleasant and successful New Year.

Yours very truly,
tf SPIGENER & JONES.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The Chilton County Teachers' Institute was held at Rocky Mount school house December 14 and 15, 1906. Superintendent J. W. Moore, of Clanton, presided.

Mr. Northcut, of the local school board, gave the teachers a very cordial welcome to the hospitality of the people's homes. Mr. Marion J. Mims responded to the welcome address in behalf of the institute.

The following were among the teachers present: Misses Janie Roebuck, Ada Rasco, Stevonia Nash, Alma Lefstad, Mattie Fite, Ola Jones, Julia Parrish, Latona Burns, Nella Johnson Lottie Johnson, Bessie Ellis, Bessie Bentley, Senie Jones, Rosalie Moore and Messrs. J. A. Raines, L. J. Thompson, J. J. Mims, C. M. Baker, Ed W. Miller, J. O. Williams, H. N. F. Mims, J. M. Parrish, R. A. Rasco, J. Z. Mims, W. Z. Dennis, J. L. Strock, J. H. Bently, L. R. Sawyer, J. W. Moore, Wm. J. Lamkie, Mirce Fuller, A. E. Jones, H. P. Self.

The program, which has been published in this paper, was carried out, with only a few slight exceptions.

One or two specially important features of the program which have not been published, were the big dinners served by the ladies on both Friday and Saturday, the music furnished by a string band and the address of Miss Latona Burns, of Montgomery, secretary of the State School Improvement Association.

The following resolution of thanks was read and unanimously adopted:

"Whereas, the people of Rocky Mount school community have opened their doors for the reception and entertainment of the teachers of Chilton county during the institute, and have shown us a very beautiful and free-handed hospitality, thereby making it possible for us to have a pleasant and helpful meeting;

"Therefore, be it resolved, That our thanks are due and are hereby expressed.

"Be it further resolved, That we are under special obligations to Prof. F. B. Williams for his many courtesies and attentions; to the ladies of the community for the good part they have contributed toward the success and pleasure of the meeting; to the citizens for furnishing conveyance for the teachers to and from the railroad station, and to the general public for the kind and fraternal attitude it has manifested toward us."

The next institute will be held at Thorsby. H. P. SELF, Secretary.

THORSBY ITEMS.

At the caucus Saturday night the following candidates were nominated for city offices: For Mayor, I. S. Gerald; for Aldermen, Andrew Franzeen, S. Howard, P. W. Peterson, L. V. Stabler and P. K. Villadsen. It is not expected that any other ticket will be put in the field. The "Dormitory," the title to which has been in dispute for some time, has now been secured for the Thorsby Institute. It is expected that the building will soon be used by the school. This is quite an addition to the school equipment, and will be of great value to the school, especially for rooming pupils from out of town. Scott Caverno spent Friday and Saturday here attending to various business matters. E. C. Hanson was called to Kewanee, Ill., Tuesday by the sudden death of his son, Vanner G. Hanson, on Monday. Ernie Hanson has a position with the Birmingham Water Works Company. The teachers at the public school and Prof. Lamkie and Rev. Groves, from the Thorsby Institute, attended the Teachers' Institute at Rocky Mount last week. They were successful in securing the next institute, to be held in February, for Thorsby. H. C. Junkerman is now installed in his position as mail carrier on route No. 1. Charles Howard is substitute carrier. A number of parcels of real estate were sold at tax sale on the 15th for taxes due the city of Thorsby. Rev. J. H. Thomas held services here Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Graves, of Walpole, N. H., uncle and aunt of Prof. Lamkie, arrived Tuesday morning and expect to spend the winter here.

REHOBOTH.

Dear Editor:

As I've been silent some time, I thought I'd come again, just to let the readers of your good paper know that I am still in the ring for truth and justice. Health here is good at present and everybody seems to be enjoying life. Well, it's about time for old Santa Claus to make his appearance and make the little folks happy. Our Sunday school is doing nicely. Rev. J. H. Thomas filled his regular appointment here on the second Sunday. The F. E. & C. U. of A. is progressing nicely. The singing at S. J. Moore's las Saturday night was a success. J. C. Ratonberry, of Active, paid his folks at Jemison a visit last Saturday. Joe Collins and wife paid a visit to their daughter at Tuscaloosa Sunday. Bud Langston has been promoted to be master mechanic at the E. E. Jackson Lumber Company, and has charge of the machinery at the camps. Your scribe is working there also, but will take in a normal singing school at Oakman, fifty miles west of Birmingham, on the Southern railroad, taught by Prof. J. H. Hall, of Dayton. All you that love to sing or to hear good singing do all you can to push the good work. I notice a good deal of talk about stock law in some beats of Chilton county. There is nothing that worries me worse than to hear people talk for stock law. If those same people would sell out and go to where stock law is, about one year would give them a plenty. They would be like the "prodigal son!" they would want to go back home. Now, boys let's have a good Christmas, but not drinking or going to parties, etc., but in the name of the Lord.

A MUSIC LOVER.

HAPPY HOME.

Dear Editor:

Please allow me a small space in your good paper to say a few words. Health of this community is very good at present. H. Kelley and Stanley Jones, of Coosa county, are visiting relatives and friends here. Miss Eula Sears, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Bussie, of Wadsworth, has returned home and reports a nice time. Mr. and Mrs. Will Rasberry visited J. M. Sears Sunday. H. K. seems to be all smiles nowadays. Curtis Kelley, of Falakto, visited John Parker's family Sunday. T. M. was a pleasant visitor to M. H. Bussie's the past week. Success to The Union and its many readers.

SOMEBODY'S SWEETHEART.

MAPLESVILLE MELANGE.

As the last leaf of the 1906 calendar is almost ready to be torn off and Santa's visit is drawing near, young folks (and old ones, too,) are cudgeling their brains to know what to do for the "best." Dear old Santa has already received many "letters of wants" from the "suffering children." A Christmas tree is in agitation, which we most sincerely hope may be a success. We feel much indebted to Germany for permitting the good old man to come among us. Our progressive citizen, T. M. Crumpton, is having the unsightly turn cleared off and will sod it with beautiful grass. Mrs. A. S. Foshee, her sister, Miss Alpha Smitherman, and Tom Perry paid a visit to relatives in Centerville. R. Garner has recovered from a serious illness. Munro Hayes has been with his brother here, Jesse Hayes. Miss Milling, of Valley Creek, has been with her aunt here, Mrs. C. Merchant. T. M. Crumpton and Colonel Foshee have opened up a splendid new stock of Christmas goods in the latter's new brick store, which building is quite an ornament to our town. We are pleased that our genial young friend, Tom Perry, is head clerk. So, ladies, you many expect extra attention in the "new brick." We hope Architect Crawford, of Bessemer, may put up some more houses here like the "Foshee brick," which would so much improve the looks of our thriving town. Miss Ida Smitherman and Mr. Hood were married here last week. Calhoun Woodley has visited his daughter here, Mrs. Williams. B. O. Glover lately took a trip to Stanton. Sheriff Fitts, with his stylish team of high steppers, has been with friends here. Success to your much improved paper. "O."

PROVIDENCE (BEAT 10).

Whereas, the Great and Supreme Ruler of the universe has in His infinite wisdom removed from among us one of our most worthy and esteemed fellow laborers, Mrs. Argent Robinson; and,

Whereas, the eight long years and the intimate relations held with her in the faithful discharge of her duties in this Sabbath school, make it eminently befitting that we re cord our appreciation of her. Dear friends we know how impossible it is to silence your grief with words; the heart pleads for utterance in tears, and let it speak thus. We bow in sorrow at the taking of the wife and mother and our beloved sister, feeling that while the ripened fruit may be gathered, it seems cruel that she should be taken. But in nature fruit falls, and so do blossoms and buds. In the ways of kind nature this is perhaps best, and in the taking from our midst and your home of this beloved one we will try to accept the cross and bear it, believing that she will blossom and bear fruit in the angel land around the throne of God.

CEDAR GROVE.

Editor Union:

Reading so many pieces in the last Union, entices me to come again and give a few items from "these diggins." That letter from W. Y. Nix was "out of sight." The majority of the people in Beat 9 are opposed to stock law. We had all better "look before we leap." Remember, "Do nothing in haste and repent at leisure." It will be too late for us to grumble after we have voted for stock law. It may be all right for some people around these little towns, but will never do for us country people. Mrs. Mary Price visited her daughter, Mrs. Dora Foshee, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones have moved into the house formerly occupied by Lonza Roberson. We welcome them in our midst. Mrs. J. G. Hayes visited friends in Clanton last week. G. G. Riggins and wife spent Sunday with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Eiland. John Collins, Sr., is having some extra work done on his house. Lee Vickers and Willie Mims went over about Liberty again Sunday. Mr. Vickers has moved his boarding place from J. R. Collins' to Harvey Collins'. Marion Hayes, of Birmingham, visited home folks last week. It seems like Jim Price's visits back home have become more frequent lately. Sabbath school here is doing nicely. We are a little crowd, but a loud one. Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Riggins visited the former's sister, Mrs. Mattie Jones, Sunday. I'm anxious to see The Union every week, as there is so much interesting news in it. Say, what has become of "Little J.," "Union Member," "One Alone," "Cotton Picker," "One Forsaken" and others? Come again: we enjoy reading your news. I am still a

CEDAR GROVEITE.

LIBERTY HILL.

Dear Editor:

Please allow me space for a few words, as this is my first attempt. Rev. A. L. Foshee preached a good sermon here Sunday. All present seemed to enjoy it. J. H. Littlejohn, Sr., has bought him an organ, and the singing there Sunday evening was a success. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under that able teacher, Prof. B. J. Sessions. We are sorry to say that Newt Childress and family are going to move to Birmingham. R. W. L. has his house nearly completed. What comes next. If this misses the waste basket I may come again.

AN S. S. SCHOLAR.

SOUTH BESSIE.

Dear Union:

After many pleasant seasons with your many readers we again come to the close of another year. As we review the dying year we find abundant cause for gratitude. While this has been a year of noted calamities, it has also been one of prosperity. Even those great calamities are regarded by deep-thoughted people as premonitions of coming world-wide grandeur and glory, being a part of the plan of an Allwise Providence. So 1906 will soon be in the grave of the past. Thus the ages come and go. And how sad we would feel in parting with each period were it not for the prominent fact that each age marks an advancement in the Creator's great plan for the uplifting of humanity. In a few more days we will celebrate the birth of the sweet Babe of Bethlehem, earth's coming king. "Star in the east, the horizon adorning, guide where our infant Redeemer was laid." Let it be a time of gladness, but not of hilarity. Avoid the intoxicating cup as you would the viper's haunt. Remember many lives may be snuffed out during next week under the influence of the fatal cup. Don't let it be yours. The birth of this King was a source of joy in the supernal regions. Hear the angel's declaration, "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." Yes, to all of earth's billions, far as the curse is found. The power of the grave and the long continued dark pall of heathenism cannot check those glad tidings. We wish The Union and all its readers a merry Christmas and a happy New Year, the best of your life.

"Watchman, tell us of the night,
What its signs of promise are.
Traveler over yon mountain's height,
See that glory-beaming star?
Watchman, doth its beauteous ray
Aught of hope or joy foretell?
Traveler, yes it brings the day,
Promised day of Israle.
Watchman doth its beams alone
Guild the spot that gave them birth?
Traveler, ages are its own;
See it bursts o'er all the earth."

Adieu for 1906.

"ONE OF THE BOYS."

LIBERTY HILL.

Editor Union:

Will you please allow us a small space in your valuable paper? Health of this community is good at present. Our school at the new school house is prospering nicely under the able management of Prof. R. L. Duffey. The "pound supper" at W. R. Baker's on Thursday night was all "O. K." There was a large attendance, with fine music by the Ward band. We all hope for another one soon, and that the music will be with us again. Hutt Baker has returned from a visit to Shelby, and reports a nice time. The Misses Sallie Baker and Maggie Dunlap spent Friday night at J. W. Baker's and report a pleasant time. We think that "wedding bells" will soon be ringing over on the other road.

TWO COUNTRY COUSINS.

BEAT SIX.

Editor Union:

Just a little space to reply to "Beat 4 Voter of Lomax." Now, Mr. Voter, if you had liked stock law so well, why didn't you stay where it was and where they were fixed for it. If you will go with me to stock law districts and we find one that it has not hurt I'll pay all the expenses. I admit that stock law will benefit some people in every county, but who are these people? They are the merchants and big land owners, and it won't benefit them but a few years. I know what I'm talking about, and I can and will take you or any one else if you'll go with me three weeks from now to a stock law county, where the land will make three to five times as much to the acre as land will here with the same chance, and you can't find a school house or church every ten miles square, if you find one at all, and you won't find a white family every ten miles, where it was once thickly settled by white people, who have had to sell their land to the "big man" and get out because they could not live in stock law. "Beat 4 Voter," is there no one hurt in anything like that? Now, I can prove this by citing you to it:; there is no think so or believe so about it. I tell you, boys, stock law will not do in this nor hardly any other country. Why is it that so many people are leaving stock law and coming here or to other counties where there is no stock law? Because they can't live in stock law without being slaves for others, and I don't believe in the slave system. I know that stock law will hurt me, who have only sixty acres of land, and them that have no land at all will have to get out, and the big land owners will soon be where they can't get a man to cultivate their land. Boys, PAY your POLL TAX and vote against stock law in this county. Let those who want stock law go to a richer country, where it is and where everything is fixed for it. There are men in Chilton county that are against Democratic administration and claim to be good Republicans believing in "equal rights to all and special privileges to none." I for my part don't see how these men can want stock law. I'd rather have "Cleveland's administration" than to have stock law, for we can vote that out, but we never can vote stock law out after it once gets in. Men, if you want peace and prosperity turn out on January 15 and vote against stock law. I'll say to "Beat 4 Voter" that we don't teach our children or stock either. I know that I don't teach mine in the right way, and I find very few that do. Our stock need very little teaching, but our children need a great deal if I can see half way straight. Please sign your name to your letters after this and you'll be thought more of. With best wishes to The Union and its readers, D. J. ROLLAN.

TO THE PUBLIC.

Notice is hereby given that a bill will be introduced in the coming session of the Legislature of Alabama entitled "An act to prohibit the taking of fish from any of the ponds or streams of Chilton county otherwise than by hook and line or finger traps or baskets, and to prescribe the penalty for violations of same."

This 20th day of December, 1906.

NEED MORE.

Health is good at present, but oh, my, saw-milling is all the go, though what sets our town on fine is Jim Collins' string band. We sure have come to the front for the last few weeks at Need More. We have but one fault to find, and that is a married man that likes to play with the tram-car too well to hold his job with the captain. Jim Parker and Jim Collins called on their best girls Sunday. Come again, boys. We have with us one of Happy Hollow's most charming girls. We hear "Boy" Collins calling on Tom and Jack. If you want to live happy come to Need More. LUCKY KID.

NOTICE.

Thorsby, Ala., Nov. 28, 1906.

To the Citizens of Thorsby, Ala., and to Whom It May Concern:

There will be a petition presented to the next session of the Legislature of Alabama to repeal or amend the charter of the city of Thorsby, Alabama, to repeal the latter clause of section twenty-four (24) of said charter, which reads as follows, viz: "Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of the grape or other wine fruits, and the City Council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of said wine, and the license for the use of the State of Alabama shall be the same as required by the State from dealers in wines exclusively in other parts of the state."

To read as follows, viz: Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of grapes, and the City Council shall have power to license and regulate the sale of said wines, but wine shall not be sold in less quantities than one gallon, and shall not be drank on the premises where sold, and shall not be drank in the house where sold, nor in a room adjoining the same.

Any person selling wine in less quantities than one gallon, or permitting it to be drank on the premises, or in the house where sold, or in a room adjoining the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs for every offense. And the license for the use of the State shall not be less than fifteen dollars. And all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed. J. BICE.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

There will NOT be any Christmas tree at Mount Pleasant school house, as our teacher can't be with us on account of her mother's illness.

The Methodist church at Clanton will have a Christmas tree celebration on Monday, December 24, at 7 p. m. sharp.

Look at the last column on the last page of this issue, and read what you are offered in the way of your county paper and a ladies' magazine. Only $1.15 for the two. You get fifty-two papers and twelve magazines for less than 2 cents each. Subscribe now.

Rev. W. J. Lawley and Mrs. Isabella Easterling were married at the court house Thursday by Judge Reynolds. The happy couple will live on Mrs. Lawley's farm, east of Clanton, where Mr. Lawley will be in easy reaching distance of the churches he serves in this county. He is a good UNION man as well as a good church man, and is a welcome addition to our residents. May they have all health and prosperity.

Miss Susie Grant, daughter of our old friend, J. J. Grant, is at W. I. Mullins' big store in the dry goods department, where she will be pleased to see all her friends.

Mrs. Boswell went to Birmingham Thursday on a visit to Oliver Moore's family.

T. L. Robinson and daughter, Miss Fannie Belle, were Clanton visitors Friday.

J. Lewis Johnson, of Wadsworth was in Clanton Friday.

Judge L. H. Reynolds spent Friday in Montgomery.

C. W. Reynolds, of Jemison, was in Clanton Monday.

J. W. Huff, of Stanton, and M. E. Thompson, of Bazzate, were in town Monday.

J. F. Lowery was in Clanton Monday. He has moved back to Coosa county. We hate to see such men go away, but we wish him the best of fortune.

T. C. Sharbutt and son, E. R., were in Clanton Monday.

G. H. Gerald, the real estate man of Thorsby, was in town Monday, looking up the data of some of his land purchases.

Prof. Smith, of Shiloh school, was in Clanton Monday.

John Mims No. 1 and Jodie Landsford were in town Tuesday.

Hon. J. Osmond Middleton went to Anniston Tuesday, where he will argue an injunction case before Chancellor Whiteside. Mr. Middleton's law practice is increasing so rapidly that it will work him pretty hard to attend to his legislative duties.

J. W. Littlejohn, Jr., was in Clanton Tuesday.

J. Wiley Littlejohn's baby is quite sick, but no danger is apprehended.

J. D. Collins, of Collins' Chapel, has a very sick boy. The child has been ill for some weeks now, but all hope for the best.

Scarcity of labor in the copper mines has cut down the production of this metal to such an extent that a copper famine seems imminent, announces Engineering News. In every mining district of the West skilled miners are at a premium, and the lack of ordinary laborers, coupled with the urgent demands from manufacturers of electrical machinery and appliances, have created an unprecedented state of affairs. Throughout the country there is a general complaint of inability to obtain electrical machinery, although it is reported that the United Metal Selling Company sold within the last month over 100,000,000 pounds of copper, breaking all records in the history of the company. That the consumption of copper is much above the production is apparent, and there appears to be no indication of a change in the situation, owing to the scarcity of labor.

TAX NOTICE

I will be at Clanton the last 10 days in the year, commencing December 20th, 1906. All taxes not paid by January 1st, 1907, will become delinquent. Take notice of above and save extra expense. T. J. HUBBARD,

AFTER OIL WAS STRUCK

WHICH NEWLY RICH PUT THEIR MONEY.

$4,500 Bull the Purchase of One West Virginia Farmer—Patent Leather Shoes the Desire of Another Doubtful Father and Sons Bought an Axe for "Mother."

In West Virginia many persons have suddenly become well to do through the finding of oil on their barren farm land, says the New York Sun. The effects of wealth on these newly rich owners have been curious.

One old section hand living near Mannington owned a little house and a very small plot of ground. A firm of drillers made the customary bargain with him, and planted their derrick right alongside his house.

They struck oil, and they struck it rich. The well developed an output of almost 200 barrels a day. The old section hand's share ammounted to something like $37.50 a day. This is said to be bad for a man who had never earned more than $1.25 a day in his life.

He threw up his job on the railroad and now he just sits on his porch day in and day out and watches the slow movements of the great wooden walking beam of the pump that is drawing for him from nature's wealth a sum each day totally beyond his capacity to spend. At this time of life there is little likelihood of his acquiring new tastes that would make his money of use.

An old farmer living near Volcano, on the Parkersburg branch of the Baltimore and Ohio, had a few acres of barren land, and he willingly allowed some prospectors to put down a well on his property. A gusher was struck, and the farmer's share of the oil soon amounted to $2,000, which sum all in cash was turned over to him.

A dollar in cash had been an unusual sum for him to have at one time, and the sudden possession of so much money filled him with a desire to spend some of it. He donned his best suit of jeans and took the next morning's accommodation train for Parkersburg.

After wandering about that city all day looking for a suitable investment he finally paid $1,500 for a finely bred bull. There was just about as much room on his farm for a bull as there would be in the proverbial china shop. The sterile soil of his farm did not produce enough blades of grass to furnish the bull with one good feed, and the farmer had no other food for his purchase.

When asked by his neighbors why in the world he had made such a use of his money he simply replied:

"Well, I had to spend the money somehow!"

At the bottom of a piece of farm land on the side of a mountain lived a snake hunter, as the West Virginia mountain farmer is nicknamed, in a little log hut. The daily fare of this man and his family has never been anything other than the far-famed "cornbread and sow belly." In summer he went barefooted, while heavy cowhide boots covered his feet when cold weather came.

Oil was struck on his farm in such quantities that the farmer's share promised soon to make him the wealthiest man for miles around. As soon as the first installment of cash was paid over to him he was seized with the desire to spend. He made arrangements to pay the town a visit.

Using Shank's mare, his sole means of conveyance, by the way, he took a short cut across the mountains until he reached the small railroad town that meant metropolis to him, and the very first thing he bought was a pair of patent leather shoes.

Perhaps the best example of all the embarrassment caused these folk by the sudden acquisition of wealth was the case of a family of mountaineers back in Calhoun county. This family consisted of father, mother and four grown sons. Every member of the household burdens, but the work of chopping all the wood as well. This latter duty is not a light task by any means.

The father and his sons were good examples of the West Virginia sang-digger—that is, diggers of ginseng roots. Between times they would hunt with rifles sixty years old, with barrels six feet in length and weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds, with which all of them were dead shots; any one of the men could easily knock out the eye of a squirrel at the top of the highest tree.

But very little work of any kind did they condescend to do, and year after year they spent their time thus, living in their old log house of one room, without seeing $10 in cash from one year's end to the other.

Then wealth came.

Prospectors traced oil until it led to the neighborhood of the old log house, and a well was driven on the farm, upon the usual terms. A gusher resulted, and when the money for the first month's output was placed in the hands of the father the very first thing he and the boys thought of was that something must be bought for "Mother."

So, after a long consultation, they finally decided to buy her a new axe.

But there are a few cases of hard luck amid this good fortune. One of these fell to the lot of some railroad engineers the other day.

Fifty of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad engineers on the fifth division, which runs through the oil country from Grafton to Parkersburg, formed a pool, into which each paid a certain sum, and then sent out a crew to prospect for oil.

Several wells were sunk but no oil came to the surface. It is true that one of the wells developed into a "gasser"—that is, natural gas poured forth with a roar that could be heard a mile away, wasting daily enough gas to illuminate a small village and at the same time furnish heat sufficient to do the cooking for all its inhabitants—a well which, if placed within the limits of a town, would be worth a fortune to its owner, but down in that country of little value.

Discouraged, thirty of the fifty engineers dropped out of the pool. They thought it would be too much like sending good money after bad to continue. The other twenty men resolved to give it one more trial and the very next well, finished two or three weeks ago, proved to be a bonanza yielding three hundred barrels a day.

X-RAYS DYED THE HAIR.

Odd Results of Light Used to Cure Disease.

Dr. Imbert, professor in the medical faculty at Montpelier, and Dr. Marques, his head laboratory assistant, according, to L'Illustration, have been busying themselves daily with medical applications of X-rays. They were tolerably surprised to find that the beard and hair (which were almost white) of one of them were progressively becoming colored, to the point even of shortly assuming a hue deeper than the original one. On the other hand, in the case of a man of 55 whom the two professors treated with X-rays for a lupus affecting the left cheek, the hair turned strongly gray. During the first months of treatment they had refrained from limiting by a screen the surface to be irradiated. The hair for several centimeters around the left ear fell; of the hairs of the moustache, further withdrawn from the blister, no appreciable irradiation was noticed. The hair grew almost black again near the ear, its color plainly weakening in proportion to the distance from it. Likewise the left half of the mustache had assumed a hue less white than the right half. The hair has not been subjected to the X-rays for several months, and it is frequently cut, but it remains black. Other observations authorize Messrs. Imbert and Marques to declare that under the influence of X-rays light hair assumes a deeper shade.

QUAINT AND CURIOUS.

In Italy you can tell where the peasant women come from by the size of their earrings. The southerners wear the longest.

A singular birth custom prevailing in Yorkshire is mentioned by a contributor. In parts of the West Riding, he says, it is quite common for visitors to a house in which a new baby has appeared to carry with them as an offering to the infant a new laid egg, some salt, a piece of bread and in some cases a penny.

Potatoes are dug by machinery. They are sorted and sacked by a new appliance. Spreading manure by improved machinery is no new thing in the great west. Only a few years, and the western farmer will have all the modern conveniences of the city home, and can operate his farm and care for his stock with as much preciseness and system as is required in the best regulated business house.

The tortoise is a great sleeper. One was a domestic pet in an English house, and when his time for hibernating came he selected a corner of the dim coal cellar for his winter quarters. A new cook was engaged soon after who knew nothing of tortoises. In a few months the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. On entering that department the lady of the house found the cook gazing in awestruck wonder and exclaiming, as with unsteady hand she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone which I've broken the coal wi' a' winter!"

At the close of a banquet given by the Maharajah of Gwallor to the Prince of Wales a centrepiece in the form of a temple and decorated with electric lamps and flowers was hoisted in the ceiling by pulleys, and revealed a perfect model railway on the table underneath. The locomotive and train was eight feet long, and carried decanters, cigars, cigarettes and matches. The train was started by closing an electrical circuit. As long as this was closed by a spring the train moved, but the lifting of a decanter or box of cigars resting on the spring allowed it to act, thus breaking the circuit and stopping the train.

Capt. John Smith, the founder of Virginia, at different times, made expeditions along the coast as far as Maine. He visited the Isles of Shoals in New Hampshire, which were formerly called "Smith's Isles," and on which a monument is now erected to his memory. It was he who first gave the name of "New England" to that part of the country; and the names of "Plymouth" and "Cape Ann" and "Charles River" appear first on a map made by him. He also made expeditions into the interior of the country. On one of these he was made prisoner by the Indians, and his few companions were killed. He, however, amused his captors by showing them his compass, and by explaining to them the movements of the earth and sun, so that they spared him.

On the day of the production of his new play, "The Bondman," Hall Caine said to an interviewer: "Think of me worn with anxiety, rambling about the streets and praying for the fall of the curtain!"

A Fighting Auto.

Armored trains are no novelty, or at least they are a new thing of yesterday, not to-day. But the armored motor car, just furnished by Bronirtz to the Russian War Department, is still in its early stages. From wheels to roof this offensive and defensive monster of the highway is designed to be invulnerable. The whole car is covered with steel thick enough to resist rifle bullets, and when in action shutters slide up to close all the openings now seen in the picture. The car carries a large supply of gasolene and ammunition, giving it a wide radius of action and a deadly advantage over any mob of revolting peasants against which it may be sent. The rapid fire gun, mounted on the roof, can be turned in any direction. Rough country, as well as smooth, can be traversed by this new engine of death, which is likely to bring terror to many a hapless dweller in rural Russia in the next few months.

The wheels themselves are protected by thin nickel steel bullet proof plating, while the tires have nonpuncture proof bands.

The car can seat fire persons comfortably, and has an average speed of about thirty miles an hour.

Hitherto the difficulty in the use of motors on service has been that they are liable to get out of order when worked over rough ground. Here, however, they have solved the difficulty by fixing motor engines to both the front and back axles, and by this means the car can more easily extricate itself by its own motive power out of a ditch or any small depression.—The Sphere.

Load Freight by Gravity.

The ordinary box freight car does not appear to be very large from the outside. A close examination will show that from the door to either end is fully twenty feet, which means that men employed in loading a car travel quite a distance. The time thus consumed in loading a box car is considerable, and to reduce the time and labor more than half two Minnesota men have designed the freight carrier shown here. A glance at the illustration will convince the reader that by such a method a great deal of time and labor could be saved. This freight carrier is operated by gravity. It is composed of two parallel rails, the ends of which are curved to reach the back of the car. On each track are small wheels, spaced equal distances apart. In loading the car the end of the track on the platform is raised by supports above the remainder of the carrier. It is necessary only to start the bundle on its journey, the wheels carry-

An Incomplete Prescription.

A prominent Southern physician, upon reaching his office one morning, found an old negro who had been a servant in his family standing in the waiting room. The old negro, after mentioning several painful symptoms, related his usual hard-luck story, and begged the doctor to prescribe.

The physician filled a small bottle and said, "Take a teaspoonful of this, Mose, after each meal, and come back in a day or two if you do not feel better."

"Mars' John, I can't take dat med'cine," answered Mose.

"You will have to take it if you want to get well."

A HUMAN SALAMANDER.

It was a warm corner. Day after day the French soldiers had pushed their batteries nearer and nearer toward the besieged town, and now one could look out from behind the breastworks and plainly see the faces of the Austrian artillerymen, as they stuck to their guns with grim determination and sent their shots flying into the French forts.

In one of these little mud constructed forts a small party of French soldiers, under the command of a corporal, were busily engaged in returning the fire of the enemy.

The corporal, a tall, gaunt young fellow of twenty, was directing the work of his men. Often he leaped to the ramparts to note what effect the fire of his guns was producing.

"Truly," said one of the soldiers, as the corporal jumped back among them, "thou are a veritable salamander, for thou canst stand fire."

"Who is a salamander?" inquired a gruff voice from the rear of the smoke filled battery.

The soldiers turned and saw standing there a small, pale faced man in a general's uniform.

One of the men pointed toward the corporal.

"It is he, general," he replied.

"A salamander! We will see!" reiterated the officer, as he ran his eye over the corporal. "Can you write?" he inquired.

"Yes, my general."

"Follow me, then." Out into the shot swept open the two passed, walking side by side.

"You seem," remarked the general, pleasantly, "to be at least a foot taller than I. Kindly walk on this side," and he indicated the side nearest to the enemy. "It will be a great protection to me."

Without a word the corporal took the place.

Just at that moment a shell burst directly over their heads, but did them no harm.

The officer cast a quick glance at his companion. He was not in the least flurried. He did not even quicken his pace.

Presently they reached and entered a battery which was nearest of all to the Austrian lines. It was filled with dead and wounded soldiers. Only one gun remained standing.

Calmly seating himself on a broken gun carriage, the general gave the corporal paper and quill and ink, and commanded him to write as he began to dictate a letter.

The corporal's hand did not shake. He wrote almost as rapidly as the general spoke.

Suddenly, just as the letter was finished, there was a deafening report, and a huge cannon ball passed close above them and buried itself with a dull thud in the earth beyond. The wind caused by its passage overturned the two, and dust and dirt completely covered them.

The general picked himself up in an instant. Calmly leaping upon the ramparts the corporal waved the finished letter defiantly towards the Austrian lines.

"Thanks, my friends," he shouted, "you have saved me the trouble of blotting it."

A look of genuine admiration crept into the eyes of the general.

"What is your name?" he asked, harshly.

"Corporal Junot of the Ninth Foot, general."

"Say rather 'Captain Junot,' for I cannot afford to let such fellows as you remain corporals;" and General Bonaparte—for it was he—clapped the young man on the shoulder.

Eight years later Marshal Junot was decorated with the grand cross of the Legion of Honor by the Emperor Napoleon.—Frank P. Channon, in St. Nicholas.

"BOONE TREES."

In the good old days our brave pioneer ancestors wore buckskin clothes trimmed with long fringe of fur, and for weapons they carried long rifles with barrels made of imported horseshoe nails, the wooden stock trimmed with brass and ornamented with eagles, raccoons, deer and other objects cut from shells and set into the wood. They also carried long hunting knives, and buskskin or leather bullet pouches, often beautifully decorated with patterns of colored porcupine quills and glass beads, or made of some expensive fur. Their powder was carried in cowhorn powder flasks scraped smooth with pieces of bone and with the surface engraved with rude designs of suns, moons and figures of big game.

In the leather belt which encircled the waist and belted in the hunting shirt they carried trusty tomahawks, like their neighbors the Indians, and many of the picturesque old hunters were expert in the use of the tomahawk as well as the long hunting knife or camp axes as weapons of offense and defense.

The great Daniel Boone himself carried an axe of this kind, and the trees he blazed with his tomahawk to mark the boundaries of his claims are so well known as "Boone trees" that in after years lawsuits were frequently settled by the identification of these ancient boundaries as the ones marked by the stroke of Boone's tomahawk.—Daniel Carter Beard, in Woman's Home Companion.

THE HAPPIEST LITTLE BOY.

"I am going to tell you about the happiest child I saw to-day," said papa, taking his own two little boys on his knees.

"There was a flock of sheep passing the city to-day, and they must have come a long way, so they were tired and thirsty were they! The driver took them up, and they kept lolling out their tongues, to get a drink. pump in Hamilton court was near them. But one poor old ewe was so tired to go to the trough. She lay down on the hot, dusty street. Then I saw my little boy, ragged Jim, spring out from the crowd, take off his hat and carry it—one, two, three, four, eh, as many as six times, to the poor suffering animal, until the sheep was able to get up and go on to rest."

"Did the sheep say Thank you, papa?" asked Jim, gravely.

"I didn't hear it," answered papa. "But the little boy's face was shining like the sun, and I am sure God knows what a blessed thing it is to help what needs helping."

The pumpkato, or the [illegible] whichever it may be called, is the latest addition to the flora of [illegible].

Edward Womeldorff, of [illegible], a young farmer, late in the spring set out some climbing tomato plants close to a telephone pole. There were pumpkin vines. One of the tomato plants and one of the pumpkin vines intertwined and climbed the telegraph pole. The joint growth longed itself over the wires, and the current of electricity passing [illegible].

Vegetables developed in the course of time, but while each retained its outward form, each bore the characteristics of the other. The tomato tasted like pumpkin and the pumpkin had the tomato flavor.

The introduction of the electric current from the telephone wires produced a curious result. It caused the pumpkins glow with a phosphorescence, while the tomatoes took on a color of a passionate red shade. The illumination is soft, but powerful. Womeldorff says this is a great picture, because the vine has given light to work all night, and grows twice as fast.

Muskmelons.

Since May 15 I have ordered of dealers in all parts of New Jersey City the old-fashioned muskmelon and succeeded in getting two. And the merchants of those thought they were crazy. Nobody in the melon belt seems to know what the muskmelon is like or tastes like, and the boys in the market has been taken by the Rockyfords and their cousins. One fine muskmelon is worth a dozen mealy watermelons. It may be nine inches in diameter, nine inches thick, resembling a football. The meat is a rich salmon, the flavor indescribably delicious. thirty-five to fifty cents is worth it. Sliced in wedges, thick at the back, narrowing to the shape of an Indian's knife, and eaten with black pepper and salt (green-corn style (biting off a piece with the teeth and using a scrubbing brush of the rind)—the watermelon style, too, is good.—New York Press.

AFTER OIL WAS STRUCK

WHICH NEWLY RICH PUT THEIR MONEY.

A $2,500 Bull the Purchase of One West Virginia Farmer—Patent Leather Shoes the Desire of Another Grateful Father and Sons Bought an Axe for "Mother."

In West Virginia many persons have suddenly become well to do through the finding of oil on their barren farm land, says the New York Sun. The effects of wealth on these newly rich ones have been curious.

One old section hand living near Mannington owned a little house and a very small plot of ground. A firm of drillers made the customary bargain with him, and planted their derrick right alongside his house.

They struck oil, and they struck it rich. The well developed an output of about 250 barrels a day. The old section hand's share ammounted to something like $37.50 a day. This is not so bad for a man who had never earned more than $1.25 a day in his life.

He threw up his job on the railroad and now he just sits on his porch day in and day out and watches the slow movements of the great wooden walking beam of the pump that is drawing for him from nature's wealth a sum each day totally beyond his capacity to spend. At this time of life there is little likelihood of his acquiring new tastes that would make this money of use.

An old farmer living near Volcano, on the Parkersburg branch of the Baltimore and Ohio, had a few acres of thereon land, and he willingly allowed some prospectors to put down a well on his property. A gusher was struck, and the farmer's share of the oil soon ammounted to $2,000, which sum all in cash was turned over to him.

A dollar in cash had been an unusual sum for him to have at one time, and the sudden possession of so much money filled him with a desire to spend some of it. He donned his best suit of jeans and took the next morning accommodation train for Parkersburg.

After wandering about that city all day looking for a suitable investment he finally paid $1,500 for a finely bred bull. There was just about as much room on his farm for a bull as there could be in the proverbial china shop. The sterile soil of his farm did not produce enough blades of grass to furnish the bull with one good feed, and the farmer had no other food for his purchase.

When asked by his neighbors why in the world he had made such a use of his money he simply replied:

"Well, I had to spend the money somehow!"

At the bottom of a piece of farm land on the side of a mountain lived a snake hunter, as the West Virginia mountain farmer is nicknamed, in a little log hut. The daily fare of this man and his family has never been anything other than the far-famed "cornbread and sow belly." In summer he went barefooted, while heavy rawhide boots covered his feet when cold weather came.

Oil was struck on his farm in such quantities that the farmer's share promised soon to make him the wealthiest man for miles around. As soon as the first installment of cash was paid over to him he was seized with the desire to spend. He made arrangements to pay the town a visit.

Using shank's mare, his sole means of conveyance, by the way, he took a short cut across the mountains until he reached the small railroad town that meant metropolis to him, and the very first thing he bought was a pair of patent leather shoes.

Perhaps the best example of all the embarrassment caused these folk by the sudden acquisition of wealth was the case of a family of mountaineers back in Calhoun county. This family consisted of father, mother and four grown sons. Every member of the household burdens, but the work of chopping all the wood as well. This latter duty is not a light task by any means.

The father and his sons were good examples of the West Virginia sang-digger—that is, diggers of ginseng roots. Between times they would hunt with rifles sixty years old, with barrels six feet in length and weighing from fifteen to twenty pounds, with which all of them were dead shots; any one of the men could easily knock out the eye of a squirrel at the top of the highest tree.

But very little work of any kind did they condescend to do, and year after year they spent their time thus, living in their old log house of one room, without seeing $10 in cash from one year's end to the other.

Then wealth came.

Prospectors traced oil until it led to the neighborhood of the old log house, and a well was driven on the place, upon the usual terms. A gusher resulted, and when the money for the first month's output was placed in the hands of the father the very first thing he and the boys thought of was that something must be bought for "Mother."

So, after a long consultation, they finally decided to buy her a new axe.

But there are a few cases of hard luck amid this good fortune. One of these fell to the lot of some railroad engineers the other day.

Fifty of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad engineers on the fifth division, which runs through the oil country from Grafton to Parkersburg, formed a pool, into which each paid a certain sum, and then sent out a crew to prospect for oil.

Several wells were sunk but no oil came to the surface. It is true that one of the wells developed into a "gasser"—that is, natural gas poured forth with a roar that could be heard a mile away, wasting daily enough gas to illuminate a small village and at the same time furnish heat sufficient to do the cooking for all its inhabitants—a well which, if placed within the limits of a town, would be worth a fortune to its owner, but down in that country of little value.

Discouraged, thirty of the fifty engineers dropped out of the pool. They thought it would be too much like sending good money after bad to continue. The other twenty men resolved to give it one more trial and the very next well, finished two or three weeks ago, proved to be a bonanza yielding three hundred barrels a day.

X-RAYS DYED THE HAIR.

Odd Results of Light Used to Cure Disease.

Dr. Imbert, professor in the medical faculty at Montpelier, and Dr. Marques, his head laboratory assistant, according, to L'Illustration, have been busying themselves daily with medical applications of X-rays. They were tolerably surprised to find that the beard and hair (which were almost white) of one of them were progressively becoming colored, to the point even of shortly assuming a hue deeper than the original one. On the other hand, in the case of a man of 55 whom the two professors treated with X-rays for a lupus affecting the left cheek, the hair turned strongly gray. During the first months of treatment they had refrained from limiting by a screen the surface to be irradiated. The hair for several centimeters around the left ear fell; of the hairs of the moustache, further withdrawn from the blister, no appreciable irradiation was noticed. The hair grew almost black again near the ear, its color plainly weakening in proportion to the distance from it. Likewise the left half of the mustache had assumed a hue less white than the right half. The hair has not been subjected to the X-rays for several months, and it is frequently cut, but it remains black. Other observations authorize Messrs. Imbert and Marques to declare that under the influence of X-rays light hair assumes a deeper shade.

A singular birth custom prevailing in Yorkshire is mentioned by a contributor. Potatoes are dug by machinery. They are sorted and sacked by a new appliance. Spreading manure by improved machinery is no new thing in the great west. The tortoise is a great sleeper. One was a domestic pet in an English house, and when his time for hibernating came he selected a corner of the dim coal cellar for his winter quarters. A new cook was engaged soon after who knew nothing of tortoises. In a few months the tortoise woke up and sallied forth. Screams soon broke the kitchen's calm. On entering that department the lady of the house found the cook gazing in awestruck wonder and exclaiming, as with unsteady hand she pointed to the tortoise: "My conscience! Look at the stone which I've broken the coal wi' a' winter!"

At the close of a banquet given by the Maharajah of Gwallor to the Prince of Wales a centrepiece in the form of a temple and decorated with electric lamps and flowers was hoisted in the ceiling by pulleys, and revealed a perfect model railway on the table underneath. The locomotive and train was eight feet long, and carried decanters, cigars, cigarettes and matches. The train was started by closing an electrical circuit. As long as this was closed by a spring the train moved, but the lifting of a decanter or box of cigars resting on the spring allowed it to act, thus breaking the circuit and stopping the train.

Capt. John Smith, the founder of Virginia, at different times, made expeditions along the coast as far as Maine. He visited the Isles of Shoals in New Hampshire, which were formerly called "Smith's Isles," and on which a monument is now erected to his memory. It was he who first gave the name of "New England" to that part of the country; and the names of "Plymouth" and "Cape Ann" and "Charles River" appear first on a map made by him. He also made expeditions into the interior of the country. On one of these he was made prisoner by the Indians, and his few companions were killed. He, however, amused his captors by showing them his compass, and by explaining to them the movements of the earth and sun, so that they spared him.

A Fighting Auto.

Armored trains are no novelty, or at least they are a new thing of yesterday, not to-day. But the armored motor car, just furnished by Bronirtz to the Russian War Department, is still in its early stages. From wheels to roof this offensive and defensive monster of the highway is designed to be invulnerable. The whole car is covered with steel thick enough to resist rifle bullets, and when in action shutters slide up to close all the openings now seen in the picture. The car carries a large supply of gasolene and ammunition, giving it a wide radius of action and a deadly advantage over any mob of revolting peasants against which it may be sent. The rapid fire gun, mounted on the roof, can be turned in any direction. Rough country, as well as smooth, can be traversed by this new engine of death, which is likely to bring terror to many a hapless dweller in rural Russia in the next few months.

plating, while the tires have non-puncture proof bands.

The car can seat fire persons comfortably, and has an average speed of about thirty miles an hour.

Hitherto the difficulty in the use of motors on service has been that they are liable to get out of order when worked over rough ground. Here, however, they have solved the difficulty by fixing motor engines to both the front and back axles, and by this means the car can more easily extricate itself by its own motive power out of a ditch or any small depression.—The Sphere.

Load Freight by Gravity.

The ordinary box freight car does not appear to be very large from the outside. A close examination will show that from the door to either end is fully twenty feet, which means that men employed in loading a car travel quite a distance. The time thus consumed in loading a box car is considerable, and to reduce the time and labor more than half two Minnesota men have designed the freight carrier shown here. A glance at the illustration will convince the reader that by such a method a great deal of time and labor could be saved. This freight carrier is operated by gravity. It is composed of two parallel rails, the ends of which are curved to reach the back of the car. On each track are small wheels, spaced equal distances apart. In loading the car the end of the track on the platform is raised by supports above the remainder of the carrier. It is necessary only to start the bundle on its journey, the wheels carrying it to the other end of the track and into the car.—Philadelphia Record.

That our American forests abound in plants which possess the most valuable medicinal virtues is abundantly attested by scores of the most eminent medical writers and teachers. Even the untutored Indians had discovered the usefulness of many native plants before the advent of the white race. This information, imparted freely to the whites, led the latter to continue investigations until to-day we have a rich assortment of most valuable American medicinal roots.

Dr. Pierce believes that our American forests abound in most valuable medicinal roots for the cure of most obstinate and fatal diseases. If we would properly investigate them; and in confirmation of this conviction, he points with pride to the almost marvelous cures effected by his "Golden Medical Discovery," which has proven itself to be the most efficient stomach tonic, liver invigorator, heart tonic and regulator, and blood cleanser known to medical science. Dyspepsia, or indigestion, torpid liver, functional and even valvular and other affections of the heart yield to its curative action. The reason why it cures these and many other affections, is clearly shown in a little book of extracts from the standard medical works which is mailed free to any address by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., to all sending request for the same.

Not less marvelous, in the unparalleled cures it is constantly making of woman's many peculiar affections, weaknesses and distressing derangements, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as is amply attested by thousands of unsolicited testimonials contributed by grateful patients who have been cured by it of catarrhal pelvic drains, painful periods, irregularities, prolapsus and other displacements, caused by weakness, ulceration of uterus and kindred affections, often after many other advertised medicines and physicians had failed.

Both the above mentioned medicines are wholly made up from the glyceric extracts of native, medicinal roots. The processes employed in their manufacture were original with Dr. Pierce, and they are carried on by skilled chemists and pharmacists with the aid of apparatus and appliances specially designed and built for this purpose. Both medicines are entirely free from alcohol and all other harmful, habit-forming drugs. A full list of their ingredients is printed on each bottle-wrapper.

Railways of the United Kingdom carry over 450,000,000 tons of goods yearly. Of this amount Ireland's share is only 6,000,000 tons.

France's Prosperous Dairies.

France alone among European countries is agriculturally properous. The New York Tribune gives this interesting summary of its dairy work:

There are 109 creameries which yearly produce 20,000,000 pounds of butter, worth $5,000,000. The total butter product of France is now worth more than $58,000,000 a year, and the cheese is worth $25,000,000. And all this is over and above the vast quantity of milk consumed by the people. There can be no doubt that the co-operation system of organization and conduct of business is also to be credited with a large share of French prosperity. There are now more than 3,300 co-operative dairies in the republic, and the number is steadily increasing. These combinations enable the peasant with only two or three cows to purchase supplies and to dispose of his products as advantageously as though he had a herd of hundreds.

The Evils of Constipation are many; in fact, almost every serious illness has its origin in constipation, and some medicines, instead of preventing constipation, add to it. This is true of most cathartics, which, when first used, have a beneficial effect, but the dose has to be continually increased, and before long the remedy ceases to have the slightest effect. There is one preparation, however, that can be relied upon to produce the same results with the same dose, even after fifty years' daily use, and this is Brandreth's Pills, which has a record of over 100 years as the standard remedy for constipation and all troubles arising from an impure state of the blood.

Brandreth's Pills are the same fine laxative tonic pill your grandparents used and can be found in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar-coated.

Send Him There.

A senator from a central Western State sought an interview with the President, asking him to appoint to a foreign consulate an applicant to whom the senator was in some way bound, but who was heartily disliked by reason of his offensive persistence in seeking favors.

"Where do you want him sent?" the senator was asked.

At this the senator took a step or two to the center of the room, where stood a large globe. Putting one arm around it as far as he could reach, the senator said:

"I don't know what locality my finger touches, but please send him there!"

If either Peary or Wellman should find the North Pole it would prostrate the Arctic exploration industry, and they must be very careful or they will do themselves out of their job. There is no immediate reason for fearing that they may not make their dashes at the Pole every year.

A BRILLIANT SUBJECT.

America Imports More Diamonds Than Ever Before.

Thirty-five million dollars' worth of diamonds were imported into the United States in the fiscal year 1906, against $27,000,000 in 1905, $19,000,000 in 1904 and $26,000,000 in 1903. These figures, just announced by the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor, show that the importation of diamonds in 1906 was of greater value than in any earlier year in the history of our import trade.

No article shows greater fluctuation in the imports than diamonds. In 1906 the total, as indicated, was $35,000,000; in 1904, two years earlier, only 19,000,000; in 1903, $26,000,000; in 1900 but $12,000,000; in 1897 less than $2,000,000, and in 1893 about $15,000,000.

This total of $35,000,000 worth of diamonds imported in 1906 exceeds materially the figures of any earlier period. The largest total prior to 1906 was that of 1905, about $27,000,000, while the total for 1903 fell but slightly below that of 1905.

About $10,500,000 worth of diamonds imported in 1906 were uncut, to be prepared for use by the diamond cutting establishments of the United States, while over $24,000,000 worth were cut but not set. There has been a slow but steady growth in the importation of uncut diamonds, while cut diamonds have shown a greater fluctuation than those not cut. The total value of uncut diamonds imported in 1900 was a little less than $4,000,000, in 1902 a little more than $6,000,000, in 1903 nearly $11,000,000, and since that period has continued at about this figure, while cut diamonds, which in 1900 were a little less than $8,000,000 were over $15,000,000 in 1903 and $24,000,000 in 1906.

Practically all the diamonds imported into the United States, while the product of the African mines, are imported direct from European countries. Of the $10,500,000 worth of uncut diamonds imported in 1906 nearly $7,000,000 came from the United Kingdom and about $2,000,000 from Belgium, while of the $24,250,000 worth of cut diamonds imported in that year $10,000,000 worth were from the Netherlands, the great diamond-cutting country of the world; $5,000,000 worth from France, $4,500,000 worth from Belgium and $4,500,000 worth from the United Kingdom.

In addition to the $35,000,000 worth of diamonds imported in 1906 there were brought into the United States over $5,000,000, worth of other precious stones, cut but not set, including natural pearls, thus making the total value of precious stones brought into the United States in the year just ended over $40,000,000, against about $33,000,000 worth in 1905 and $31,000,000 in 1903.—Harper's Weekly.

Daft, but Canny.

Frederick Ireland, a stenographer of the House of Representatives, at the convention at Atlantic City, of the National Association of Stenographers, said, apropos of a rash course:

"I can't approve of this action, because I am a foe to rashness. In handling the affairs of a great body of men I believe in prudence and carefulness. I am almost as prudent and careful as the weak-minded Scot of Peebles.

"This Scot, a silly look on his face, was skating near the famous iron bridge of Peebles on a winter day.

"Some young ladies wished to skate under the bridge, but they did not know whether the ice was safe or not. So, approaching the Scot, the youngest and prettiest of them said:

" 'Sanders, would you mind just gliding under the bridge and back, so as to test the ice?'

"The half-witted Sanders took off his cap and with a bow and a smile he replied:

" 'Na, na! If I am daft I ken mannae Leddies first.' "—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Certain butterflies have marked odors, some good, some bad. Dr. F. A. Dixey, a British entomologist, mentions a white butterfly of England that has the fragant scent of lemon verbena, and has noted many species in Africa with such odors as those of chocolate, vanilla and various flowers. The agreeable odors belong to males, being a charm to attract females. The offensive odors, shared by both sexes, are protective, repelling enemies.

THE WINNING STROKE

If more than ordinary skill in playing brings the honors of the game to the winning player, so exceptional merit in a remedy ensures the commendation of the well informed, and as a reasonable amount of outdoor life and recreation is conducive to the health and strength, so does a perfect laxative tend to one's improvement in cases of constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc. It is all important, however, in selecting a laxative, to choose one of known quality and excellence, like the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., a laxative which sweetens and cleanses the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after effects, as it acts naturally and gently on the internal organs, simply assisting nature when nature needs assistance, without griping, irritating or debilitating the internal organs in any way, as it contains nothing of an objectionable or injurious nature. As the plants which are combined with the figs in the manufacture of Syrup of Figs are known to physicians to act most beneficially upon the system, the remedy has met with their general approval as a family laxative, a fact well worth considering in making purchases.

It is because of the fact that SYRUP OF FIGS is a remedy of known quality and excellence, and approved by physicians that has led to its use by so many millions of well informed people, who would not use any remedy of uncertain quality or inferior reputation. Every family should have a bottle of the genuine on hand at all times, to use when a laxative remedy is required. Please to remember that the genuine Syrup of Figs is for sale in bottles of one size only, by all reputable druggists, and that full name of the company—California Fig Syrup Co., is plainly printed on the front of every package. Bismark's Lucky Number.

Bismark, writes a correspondent, in reference to our paragraph on superstition, held, with Pythagoras, that not thirteen but three was the great and perfect number. Bismark's associations with three were remarkable. He served three masters. He had three names, Bismark, Schoenhausen and Lauenburg. The arms of his family are a clover leaf and three oak leaves. He was concerned in three wars, and signed three treaties of peace. In the Franco-Prussian war he had three horses killed under him. He brought about the meeting of three emperors, and was responsible for the triple alliance. He had three children; his family motto was In Trinitate Robur (Strength in Trinity); and contemporary caricature pictured him with three hairs on his head. Three was the beginning, the middle and the end of Bismark.—London Chronicle.

DISFIGURING SKIN HUMOR

Impossible to Get Employment, as Face and Body Were Covered With Sores —Cured by Cuticura.

"Since the year 1894 I have been troubled with a very bad case of eczema which I have spent hundreds of dollars trying to cure, and I went to the hospital, but they failed to cure me, and it was getting worse all the time. Five weeks ago my wife bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and one cake of Cuticura Soap, and I am pleased to say that I am now completely cured and well. It was impossible for me to get employment, as my face, head and body were covered with it. The eczema first appeared on the top of my head, and it had worked all the way around down the back of my neck and around to my throat, down my body and around the hips. It itched so I would be obliged to scratch it, and the flesh was raw. I am now all well, and I will be pleased to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to all persons who wish a speedy and permanent cure of skin diseases. Thomas M. Rossiter, 290 Prospect Street, East Orange, N. J. Mar. 30, 1905."

Sir Andrew Noble has reached the highest point of temperature in terrestrial thermometry. He has accomplished this by exploding cordite in closed vessels with a resulting pressure of fifty tons to the square inch, and a temperature of no less than 5200 degrees C. Sir William Crookes saw that one incidental result of this experiment should have been the formation of diamond—that is, if his calculations were correct. On working over the residues of the explosion-chamber he has recently extracted from them small crystals that seem to be veritable diamonds.

In the matter of the petition of Julia E. Cook et al., to sell lands for division and partition among joint owners or tenants in common thereof.

Under and by virtue of a decree rendered by the honorable Probate Court of Chilton county, Alabama, on the 29th day of September, 1906, in said cause, ordering a sale of the hereinafter described lands for division and partition among the joint owners or tenants thereof, to-wit: Julia E. Cook, Carrie W. Martin, John T. Dugan, William R. Dugan, David B. Dugan, Josepr A. Dugan, Lillie B. Williams, John A. McLeod, Carl Mc Leod, Clara Sales, Bessie McLeod, Lillian McLeod, William Martin, Edward Martin, Annie Bell O'Neal, Willie B. Gandy and Jacob C. Vaughan, I. William O. Perry, as the commissioner appointed by said decree, will proceed to sell, in front of the postoffice in Stanton, Chilton county, Alabama, during the legal hours of sale, at public outcry, to the highest bidder for cash, on the following described lands, to-wit: Northwest quarter of section sixteen (16), in township twenty (20), range eleven (11), containing one hundred and sixty (160) acres; also forty (40) acres of the southeast end of the west half of northeast quarter of section sixteen (16), in township twenty (20), range eleven (11), and situated, lying and being in Chilton county, Alabama and known as "The Paul Estate Lands."

This, the 17th day of December, 1906.

WILLIAM O. PERRY,
12-20-06 Commissioner.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased the Supreme Master of the universe to remove from our midst our esteemed friend and brother, John M. Brantley, to the grand assembly above; and whereas, we reluctantly give him up, yet we must humbly submit to the mandates of the Supreme Being and Just Ruler, who doeth all things well; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. John M. Brantley his wife lost a kind and dutiful husband, his children a loving father, the community a good citizen and Jemison Lodge No. 411, A. F. & A. M., a good member.

Resolved, That Jemison Lodge No. 411, A. F. & A. M., tender their heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family in their sorrow and ask the blessing of the Great Ruler upon them.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, one be published in each of our county papers and also be placed on the minutes of this lodge.

MESSAGE ON PANAMA.

Roosevelt Sends Special One to Congress on Canal.

NOTHING BUT ENCOURAGEMENT

Describes His Visit and Speaks of Conditions as He Saw Them.

Washington, D. C.—The president has sent a special message to congress on the Panama canal, describing his his visit to the isthmus and telling of the conditions as he saw them. He said that there was nothing but encouragement in every feature of the work. The canal zone has been made noteworthy because of the expert treatment of the sanitary question The president also has some caustic comment on the muck-rakers, who are criticising the work, and recommends a one-man supervision.

The following is a synopsis of the message:

The Panama canal will be built.

The work is being done as rapidly as conditions admit.

These conditions are much better than they have been reported. Management of the work should be in the hands of one man, instead of a commission of seven.

This is the burden of the message sent by President Roosevelt to congress. The president reviews his visit to the isthmus and tells of conditions as he saw them. He reports the work progressing well in every department The digging of the canal is well under way, although much preliminary work has been done.

So expert has been the sanitary supervision of the canal zone that the health of the isthmus compares with the most favorable section of the United States.

Most of the men are satisfied and enthusiastic. Their quarters are in good shape, the food supply wholesome, and the wages high enough to make employment attractive.

The president makes caustic comment on the men who are criticising the work on the canal. He gives it as his firm conviction that the work will be concluded effectively and rapidly possibly in eight years.

Appended are a number of reports from Chief Sanitary Officer Gorgas and Chief Surgeon Rixey on health conditions. There is also published a speech delivered by President Roosevelt to the canal employes.

Demand Isle of Pines Be Annexed.

Washington.—H. S. Pearcy of the Isle of Pines is in Washington to confer with the state department officials and members of Congress over the status of that island. He has been elected by the American residents of the island as their representative, and will urge that when the Cuban government is resorted to its people that the Isle of Pines be made a part of the United States, which he contends it is. The Americans have half the population and own three-fourths of the property. He says they are becoming restless over the supervision of their affairs by the Cuban government and in case the present Congress does not officially annex them, they will take matters into their own hands. Mr. Pearcy does not believe the new Cuban government can be made stable

Spain Refuses Papers.

Rome.—The Spanish government has notified the vatican that it objects to taking charge at present of the archives of the papal munciature at Paris owing to the rupture of diplomatic relations between France and the vatican. Spain certainly would have accepted the ask if requested by the vatican to do so when the papal nunciate at Paris, Monsignor Lorenzell was recalled as France then could not have made any objection. But after the expulsion of Monsignor Montagnini, the secretary of the nunciature and the search of archives, to take charge of the papal interests in France, might be regarded as hostile to the French government, which would be contrary to the policy of the Spanish government.

Burnham Sentenced to Two Years.

New York.—George Burnham, general counsel for the Mutual Reserve Life Insurance Company, recently convicted of larceny, was sentenced to serve two years in the state prison. Sentence was passed by Justice Greenbaum in the supreme court.

With Coach Burning.

Camilla, Ga.—The southbound Atlantic Coast Line passenger train pulled into this place with the negro coach burning. This car was set on fire by the explosion of a lamp several miles from town. The coach for white people was left up the railroad until after the local fire department had extinguished the flames. No one was injured.

The Woman's Trade Union League of Great Britain is now upon a solid foundation and is steadily growing in numbers and influence. The increase in membership during the year just closed was more than 11,000.

Mme. Benezech will make her first appearance in Paris as an advocate under conditions which seem scarcely choice. She has been designated by a Judge to defend a boy of sixteen who is accused of being a red light cadet.

The harvests come in the harvest season, and the consequent piled-up offers of freight overwhelm and overtask the railways. There is a shortage of cars. There is also a preference given for high-class freight, remarks the Philadelphia Record. As a consequence there is always congestion. Congestion brings loss. We must dig more canals. The canals will relieve the pressure upon the rails and the consequent stagnation of business. The canals will also steady and equalize the rates of transportation.

MUCH INTEREST IN LIVINGSTON BILL.

Representatives of Alabama Will Support Georgia's Measure.

MR. LIVINGSTON'S BILL.

It Asks for Appropriation of $10,000 for Each District Agricultural Schools of Various States.

Montgomery, Ala.—There has been the greatest interest on the part of the public men who have come to the capital during this week in the proposed bill introduced by Congressman Livingston, of Georgia, appropriating $10,000 to each of the district agricultural schools of the various states. Several letters have been written in support of this measure to Congressman Livingston and the Alabama delegation in Washington will be urged to do whatever they can to bring about the passage of the bill. State Superintendent of Education-elect H. C. Gunnells said this week that it was his purpose to write Congressman Livingston and tell him something of the success that has been attained by the Alabama schools and encourage him as much as possible in the movement which he has enterprised.

These agricultural schools are regarded by the state officials, as well as by most of the well-posted citizens as stepping stones to great educational facilities and possibilities in the future. The ideas of the legislators have run largely of late to the industrial and mechanical features of education, and they are constantly seeking some way by which the young men, especially of the rural districts may be able to acquire along with literary education adequate technical training to fit them for the duties of life.

Modest as the charges are, it is not possible for many a boy who seeks an education to go to Auburn, but often he is able to go to the agricultural school of his congressional district. It is regarded as a sensible proposition to make the school adequate to the situation so that the young boy of the country districts may be able to acquire facilities and equipment that will help them to success in life even if they are not able to go any further. Certain it is that this kind of a proposition will develop and inspire the ambition of the young man so that he will make greater effort to finish at such an institution as the state proudly boasts in the Alabama Polytechnic Institute.

There has already been agitated a movement to return to the farmers in some way the $14,000 which is collected annually from the tag tax in excess of the amount appropriated to the agricultural schools. It now seems that there will be a movement, and a successful one, looking to the giving the entire amount to these district schools. As already noted in this correspondence, if the Livingston bill should pass and all the tag tax be given to the district schools each one would have about $14,000 annually.

Few State Convicts.

One of the interesting features of the report for four years by Attorney-General Wilson Massey is the large number of sentences to hard labor for the counties and fines. For the various judicial subdivisions of the 6, 854 convictions for the two years ending September 30, 1904, only 1,314 went to the penitentiary or to service for the state. Of the total 1,623 were sentenced to labor for the counties, 158 to jail and 3,727 dismissed upon payment of fines. It will thus be seen that there was an evident disposition on the part of county officers to send prisoners for short terms whenever possible, in order that the counties might get the results of their labor rather than the state. This same thing is evidenced by the large number of convictions which are settled by the payment of fines and serving of jail sentences.

This condition of affairs has been referred to frequently of late by the officers of the state convict department and the governor. It is pretty well understood that a bill will be presented to the next session of the legislature eliminating entirely the county convict system and placing the work of convicts altogether under the supervision of the state. Provision will be made for the payment of fees and costs which now accrue to the county officers, so that there will be no difficulty in their securing all that is coming to them.

WOMAN PASSED AS MAN

Identity of Deraylan Revealed by Death in Arizona.

Married Once Before and Divorced by Woman Who Refuses to Talk.

Chicago.—One of the most remarkable cases of double identity in the history of Chicago was revealed when it was announced in a dispatch from Phoenix, Ariz., that Nicolai Deraylan, known in Chicago as a man for more than a dozen years, was in reality a woman. There ensued evidences of some mystery in the offices of the Russian Consulate in Chicago, with Baron Schlippenbach, the Czar's representative, telegraphing to Phoenix for full information on the death of Deraylan and the details of the discovery of the deception successfully maintained in Chicago during years of work as a clerk in the consulate.

With word of the discovery by an undertaker that Deraylan had concealed his true sex from his acquaintances in Chicago came denial from Deraylan's wife, who lives in No. 592 California avenue, of the report from Arizona. Miss Lillian Sweeney, for five years Deraylan's stenographer, refused to believe the report that her employer was a woman.

Deraylan was always well dressed, careful in the selection of his companions and friends, neat in appearance and particular in the care of his hands and hair. He never shaved, and he spoke in a high pitched, treble voice, peculiarities which often caused good natured comment by his friends.

He smoked constantly, seldom being seen in business hours without a cigar or cigarette, and his friends say he was possessed of a discriminating taste in liquors, with ability to withstand the effects of drink better than most other men. Deraylan was last in Chicago about six months ago. Dr. W. C. Rowe, of Canyon City, Col., accompanied him to Phoenix. Mrs. Deraylan said she was married to Deraylan twelve years ago. She has a son thirteen years old by a former husband, whose name she declined to give.

Mrs. Theodore Shangenberg, of No. 700 California avenue, where Deraylan lived for four years, confirmed the statement that he was married once before and divorced, marrying the present Mrs. Deraylan only about three years ago. Neighbors of the Deraylans assert that after his second marriage his first wife created scenes at his home several times by quarrels with the second Mrs. Deraylan.

Deraylan was the husband of Mrs. Francis P. Bradchulis, No. 3112 Halsted street. She divorced him in Chicago three years ago, but was noncommittal on the subject of the divorce.

RIVER PACKET BLOWS UP.

Ten or More White and Negro Victims of Steamboat Disaster.

Vicksburg, Miss.—One of the most disastrous accidents in the history of the Mississippi occurred when the steamer W. T. Scovil, plying in the Vicksburg and Davis Bend trade, was destroyed by an explosion. Owing to the large number of negroes on board it is impossible to ascertain the exact number of dead and injured, but officers of the boat who arrived here state that no less than ten nor more than sixteen were killed. The probabilities are that a like number were injured.

The white dead are as follows: Captain John Quackenboss, master of the steamer, Vicksburg, Miss.; Wade Quackenboss, clerk, Vicksburg, Miss.; Lavell Yerger, commercial salesman, Jackson, Miss.; Joseph Smith, clerk, Yazoo City, Miss.

FOUR DIE IN BUFFALO FIRE.

Husband and Wife and Child Are Among the Victims.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Four lives were ended and one person fatally burned in a small fire in the Zenobia apartment house on Prospect avenue. Other occupants had narrow escapes, half a dozen being rescued by the firemen.

The dead are: F. M. Lambrecht, of No. 40 Elmwood avenue; Mrs. Lambrecht, his wife; Ruth Crumlish, three years old, daughter of Mrs. C. Crumlish; Mrs. J. J. Fischer, of New York, whose husband is said to be a theatrical man. Injured: A. Charles Beam, salesman for Weed & Co., of Buffalo.

The blaze was small and brought under control quickly.

HOLD UP BANK IN DAYLIGHT.

Two Men With Pistols Cow Cashier and Ride Away.

Texarkana, Ark.—The Bank of Horatio, at Horatio, was looted by two robbers. They entered the town on horseback, and after hitching their horses near the bank walked in, held up the cashier with pistols and took all the cash in sight, about $4000. Then they mounted their horses and rode away.

The alarm spread while the robbers were in the bank, and by the time they had remounted a number of citizens were running toward the bank armed with rifles and revolvers. They fired several shots at the fleeing robbers, and it is thought wounded one of them, as he was seen to reel in his saddle and almost fall.

MARYLAND NEGRO LYNCHED

Henry Davis Confessed to Assaulting Mrs. Reid.

Doors of Jail at Annapolis Battered Down—Body Riddled With Shot—Governor Denounces Crime.

Annapolis, Md.—Within sight of the United States Naval Academy a masked mob of sixty men, with faces blackened, battered in the door of the jail here, held up the warden and his deputies with pistols, then dragged Henry Davis, alias Chambers, a negro prisoner, to the street and lynched him.

As the negro's body dangled from a pole the lynchers, with shotguns and pistols, fired a shower of bullets into it. Then cutting down the corpse they ripped part of the clothing off and divided that and the rope used as souvenirs among them.

Before being put to death Davis confessed that he had attacked Mrs. John Reid, in Brownsville, last Friday, the crime for which the mob sought vengeance. He added defiantly that he would have committed the assault either dead or alive. This infuriated the crowd, and he was beaten and kicked as he was rushed along to the gibbet.

Denounced by Gov. Warfield.

Baltimore, Md. — Gov. Warfield, who came here from Annapolis, said he knew nothing about the lynching until he read it in the newspaper extras, and added:

"I hope the Grand Jury of Anne Arundel County will immediately take steps to discover and punish the men who participated in the lawless act. I greatly regret the occurrence and deprecate and denounce such lawless acts."

FIFTY GIRLS SEE MURDER.

Young Women Break Out Windows to Escape From Death Battle.

New York City.—In the presence of fifty frightened girls, Abraham Lass, foreman of a book bindery at No. 82 Centre street, was stabbed to death by Louis Segal, as the result of a quarrel over Henry Lapidus, fifteen years old, and a brother-in-law of the murdered man.

The fifty girls in the bindery broke out the windows in their hysterical fright at the tragedy. Many of them were bundled into patrol wagons and taken to the Elizabeth street station, where they were questioned by Captain Dooley. Lass was married and twenty-four years old.

CONSTITUTION IN TRANSVAAL.

Letters Patent Granted by King—Chinese Labor Excluded.

London.—Letters patent were issued granting a constitution to the Transvaal. The terms were fully outlined by Churchill, Under Secretary for the Colonies, in the House of Commons July 31.

There is no change in the provisions as finally approved by King Edward. Members of the Legislature will receive a salary of $1500 yearly. The recruiting of Chinese for work in the Transvaal will cease immediately and the entire system of Chinese labor must be stopped a year after the first meeting of the Legislature. The latter has a right to put an end to the system earlier.

BOASTED RIGHT TO KILL WIFE.

"She Was My Woman," Declared Brutal Slayer.

Butler, Pa.—Roused to frenzy during a quarrel with his wife, Max Castle struck the woman with a bottle and killed her instantly. When arrested he did not deny he had killed the woman, and in extenuation of the crime said: "She was my woman and I could do as I pleased with her." The woman leaves three children, one a baby of five months.

DISCREDITS NEGRO TROOPS

In Message Roosevelt Says Texas Rioters Deserved Death.

Conspiracy of Silence After Blackest Crime—Act of Horrible Atrocity and Unparalleled For Infamy.

Washington, D. C. — President Roosevelt sent to the Senate a reply to a recent Senate resolution asking for information on the discharge of the three companies of negro soldiers because of the Brownsville (Tex.) episode. In concluding his brief for justification in discharging the soldiers "without honor," he says:

"It is of the utmost importance to all our people that we shall deal with each man on his merits as a man, and not deal with him merely as a member of a given race; that we shall judge each man by his conduct and not his color. This is important for the white man, and it is far more important for the colored man.

"More evil and sinister counsel never was given to any people than that given to colored men by those advisers, whether black or white, who, by apology and condonation, encourage conduct such as that of the three companies in question. If the colored men elect to stand by criminals of their own race because they are of their race they assuredly lay up for themselves the most dreadful day of reckoning."

The President also says: "I challenge as a right, the support of every citizen of this country, whatever his color, provided only he has in him the spirit of genuine and far-sighted patriotism."

The President, whose tone throughout is absolutely uncompromising, says he acted in the exercise of his constitutional power and in pursuance of his constitutional duty.

Denying that their discharge was ordered as a punishment, the President asserts that the only adequate punishment for the Brownsville assault is death. He declares his keen regret at not being able to inflict that penalty.

That the shooting up of Brownsville was done by a party of from nine to fifteen negro soldiers, the President says there can be no doubt whatever, and he brands their act as one "unparalleled for infamy in the annals of the United States Army."

They were the agressors from start to finish, and nothing that had occured offered in any shape or way an excuse or justification for their atrocious conduct.

After breaking from their barracks, the President says, they shot at whomever they saw moving, and into houses where they saw lights. They fired into houses where they must have known there were women and children. They killed a barkeeper and wounded the lieutenant of police, who lost his arm.

These raiders, says the President, were not schoolboys on a frolic. Notwithstanding their full warning of the consequences, their comrades entered into a conspiracy of silence to prevent the ends of justice. So it became necessary to discharge them all.

NEGROES SUPPRESS CRIME.

Secret Organization Runs Colored Offenders Over to Law.

Galveston, Texas.—The delivery of a negro assaulter to the officers in San Saba County by members of his own race has brought to light a powerful secret society for the suppression of crime. It is called the U. B.'s, is referred to as the United Brothers, and is said to have a membership of 3000 of the better element of negroes in Texas.

The negro surrendered was anxious to confess. The U. B.'s had evidently had him on the rack. While prominent colored pastors are preaching reform this organization is quietly assisting the authorities.

A number of mysterious confessions of crime and reforms are traced to the society.

BRINGS GRAFT CASE TO HEAD.

Pennsylvania State Treasurer Refuses to Pay State Capitol Bills.

Harrisburg, Pa.—At a meeting of the Board of Public Grounds and Buildings State Treasurer Berry refused to approve bills of J. H. Sanderson, of Philadelphia, for $108,000 for part of the furnishing and equipment of the new $13,000,000 State Capitol, and of Architect Joseph M. Huston for $50,000 on account of professional services.

Governor Pennypacker and Auditor-General Snyder, constituting a majority of the board, voted to approve the bills, but the State Treasurer says he will not pay them unless compelled to do so by the courts.

This will force the whole question of graft in the Capitol into the courts.

SUSIE'S MISTAKE.

By PAULINE MONTAGUE.

"Come, Susie, be a good girl, now, and tell me you'll go with me to the picnic to-morrow! The trap has all been painted up, and I've got the prettiest new apron, all bright pink and grey stripes. Say yes, Susie, do!"

Jack Horton looked pleadingly at the blue-eyed, golden-haired, crimson-lipped little lady leaning against the honeysuckle trellis.

"I don't think I care to go, Jack," she said, reflectively.

"What! You'd rather stay at home? And all the young folks going?"

"Yes, I would. I'd rather stay at home and read," she answered, briefly.

And then Jack's big brown eyes suddenly dilated.

"To read? O-oh, I see! To suit Mr. Fairfax Hamilton?"

And then Susie flashed a defiant look from those lovely blue eyes that Jack Horton thought, and thought truly, were the very loveliest in the world.

"Mr. Hamilton is a very educated, cultivated gentleman," she retorted.

"Whom you have known exactly three weeks. Isn't it three weeks, Susie?"

"Yes, it is."

"And you've known me seventeen years—all your life."

"You are so ridiculous, Jack. What if I have?"

"Oh, nothing," he answered, stiffly. "And I don't doubt that Mr. Fairfax Hamilton considers our rustic amusements so much beneath his refined taste that he has persuaded——"

"Jack!" Susie interrupted, coloring with vexation. "I did not say so, nor——"

She did not finish her indignant protest, for at that very minute Topsey opened the sitting room door and ushered in, with a giggle, the identical gentleman under consideration.

"Well," Jack remarked, after a cold exchange of bows, "I'll not detain you any longer, Miss Lane. Good-night."

"Good evening!" Susie said, demurely, and she never gave honest Jack Horton another thought during that delightful evening, when she and Mr. Hamilton sat in the August moonlight, on the honeysuckle-trellised balcony, a cool westerly wind playing refreshingly around them.

When Mr. Hamilton took his leave, at 10 o'clock that evening, promising to call for Susie and take her for a ride at 4 the next afternoon, Mr. Lane called Susie into the kitchen, where he sat sweetening a huge bowl of buttermilk for his special delectation.

"So you a'int a-goin' to the picnic with Jack, eh?" he observed.

"No, father. I—I've changed my mind."

And Susie made unusual haste in lighting her bedroom candle.

"You needn't be in sich a hurry, Susan. I've got a word to say, and I be a-goin' to say it."

Poor Susie winced at the contrast between the rough, honest speech and the musical accents to which she had lately listened.

"I don't like this here way you've been a-doin', Susan—a-playin' fast and loose with Jack Horton, the likeliest fellow to be found in these parts. You hadn't ort to fool with him—he's wuth a dozen o' them London chaps, and you'll find it out some day. Don't you kerry it to far, Susan, mind."

And Susie, with scarlet cheeks, on which her mother had sympathetic compassion, had to stand and listen to it all.

Susie was not down to breakfast until nearly 7 o'clock the next morning, and the very first sound she heard was the inconsolable wailing of Topsey, sitting on the kitchen stairs, her apron thrown over her head, her figure rocking back and forth.

"I didn't took it, Miss Susan, deed and deed and double 'deed I never seed it, nor knowed nothin' 'bout it! And Mrs. Lane don't b'leeve me, and I jest wish I'd get drowned or deaded, or somethin'!"

By degrees Susie learned the story—that Mrs. Lane's two articles of personal adornment, a heavy, old-fashioned, solid gold watch chain, and the equally massive brooch, had disappeared from the box in the wardrobe drawer, where they had lain in their nest of cotton—except when worn on grand occasions—ever since Susie could remember.

"I don't believe she did take them, mother!" Susan said, eagerly; "because there is a burglar in the village. Don't you remember, the night of Janey Morris' birthday party, how the silver spoons and some money were stolen?"

And when the picnic party rode by—an almost interminable stream of carriages and traps—two hours later, Susie, watching them from the front room windows, made the discovery that Jack Horton's conveyance and Jack Horton himself were not of the party.

For, disappointed, and too jealous to be capable of enjoying the outing, Jack had concluded to run up to London on a little matter of business that needed attending to, never imagining his presiding destiny ruled and overruled his going.

But the very first person he saw, as he reached the station, was Mr. Fairfax Hamilton! And, strange to relate, that elegant gentleman went straight into a pawnbroker's shop.

"Upon my word! What business would such a fine gentleman have in such a place? By Jupiter, if Susie knew it! And I'll find out and enlighten her—yes, I will!"

So Jack quietly entered the shop of the sign of the three balls, and, with a friendly Venetian screen completely concealing him, he deliberately, and with malice aforethought, listened.

"Only a sovereign!" he heard Mr. Hamilton exclaim. "Why, man, they are worth fifty pounds, if a penny! Examine yourself—they're such gold as you don't come across nowadays!"

"Ya'as, good—pooty good. I gif you twenty-two shilling. Oh, who is dish?"

It was no wonder the pawnbroker's whining voice suddenly changed to intense alarm and amazement, for two strong, relentless hands fell on Mr. Fairfax Hamilton's shoulder, and a savage voice thundered in his ear:

"So it was you, was it, who stole Mrs. Lane's jewelry, and Mrs. Morris' silver spoons? Thief, villain, impostor! You are caught in your own trap at last, though. Officer, arrest him."

And the owner of the other cruelly heavy hand, the police officer, whom Jack had silently signalled as he passed the shop, the same minute Jack had caught a glimpse of the chain and pin he had known all his life, snapped the bracelets on elegant Mr. Hamilton's wrists, and led him away to the police station.

Jack made a bee line back to Farmingdale.

"You must not cry and grieve so, Susie," he coaxed, tenderly. "The rascal isn't worth one of those tears from your sweet blue eyes. Don't waste 'em on him, Susie, don't."

"It isn't for him," Susie sobbed, piteously. "He may go to prison for all I care for him; but—but I have been awful cross and cruel to you, Jack, and I don't dare say I will be engaged to you! I am not half good—good e-e-enough!"

And her sobs were so pitiful, and humble and repentant, that somehow just the very thing to do seemed for Jack to gather her up in his strong, loving arms.

"I am the best judge of that, girlie! You will make me the proudest, happiest man in the world if you will only say yes, darling. Say it, won't you, Susie?"

He lifted the sweet, flushed, tear-stained face to his, and waited—just a second; and then a faint little sound came to his ears that thrilled him from head to foot.

And then he kissed her until she laughed and begged for mercy.—New York News.

Humor of a Paris Sunday.

The Compulsory Closing act is developing the humorous sense of Parisians. The other Sunday a well-known haberdasher's shop had its windows beautifully dressed with cravats of every conceivable color and description. "Exceptional opportunity! All these ties only 15c. each. For to-day only." But the door of the shop was closed and bolted. The next morning would-be customers flocked in to buy some of the wonderful ties, only to learn that the notice no longer held good. This reminds one of the barber who advertised: "Customers will be shaved free of charge to-morrow."—Paris Intransigeant.

The Kaiser and the Cats.

The Kaiser has his antipathies, and one of his strongest is said to be for cats. He is alleged to have been the means of inducing the Berlin municipality to put a tax on them. Every pussy must now wear her medal as a sign that the tax has been paid on her behalf. The absence of the medal is to be taken as proof conclusive that the tax has not been paid and pussy will be hurried to the lethal chamber. The massacre has already set in.—Chicago Journal.

The Real Man.

The most agreeable of all companions is a simple, frank man, without any high pretensions to an oppressive greatness; one who loves life and understands the use of it; obliging alike at all hours; above all, of a golden temper, and steadfast, as an anchor. For such a one we gladly exchange the greatest genius, the most brilliant wit, the profoundest thinker.—Lessing.

Tommy's Ingenious Excuse.

Teddy was in a hurry for his dinner and did not wash his face thoroughly. When asked if he called that washing his face, he said: "Of course I do. I did vash my face, but I didn't think it necesary to go into details."

London Punch suggests as one way of raising revenue that every "authoress and author shall be subject to adjective tax."

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

New York City.—Elaboration appears to be the one all pressing demand for the season and almost everything except the tailored suit of the severest, most useful sort is braid trimmed. Here is a most charming little Eton that gives all the dressy effect demanded by fashion, while in reality it is absolutely simple in construction and can very easily be made. Braid of varying widths is combined with velvet to give a really handsome and altogether elaborate effect, but the foundation is just the plain little Eton shown in the small view. In this instance the material is hunter's green broadcloth and the collar and the wider bands are made of velvet, the collar being overlaid with lace while the trimming consists of flat braid in two widths and of soutache braid applied over a stamped design. All suitings are appropriate, however, and the model will be found especially well adapted to velvet and velveteen as well as to broadcloth, while it can be made far simpler by being trimmed on different lines. For example, if the horizontal strappings were omitted altogether the garment would still be an attractive one or the narrow braids in fronts and back could be dispensed with, still leaving a dressy garment.

The Eton is made with the back, the side-backs, fronts and side-fronts. Both the side-fronts and side-backs are cut to form extensions at the lower edges and these extensions are lapped over onto the fronts and backs, so providing a foundation for the braiding, which gives the effect of a band. The back is slightly longer than the side-backs and is attached to the belt, over which it blouses. The flat collar finishes the neck and the closing is made with buttons and loops of braid. The sleeves are in the fashionable three-quarter length with bands at the lower edges.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is three and one-quarter yards twenty-seven, one and three-quarter yards forty-four or one and one-half yards fifty-two inches wide with five-eighth yard of velvet for the collar and wide bands, six yards of medium width, ten yards of narrow braid with soutache, according to design used, with one yard of lace.

Feather Breast For Turbans.

The soft feather breasts so much used for natty turbans are beautifully matched in wings.

Fancy Pleated Skirt.

There seems literally to be no limit to the possibilities of the pleated skirt. It is constantly appearing in some new guise or other and is seemingly always most atractive in the latest. This one is perfectly smooth over the hips, giving something of a yoke effect at the same time that the lines are long, graceful and becoming. In the illustration it is made of nut brown broadcloth trimmed with bias bands of velvet and is stitched with belding silk, but trimming can be braid or anything that may be liked or the skirt can be finished with a stitched hem only. Again it gives a choice of round or walking length, so that it becomes adapted both to the street and to indoor wear while it is suitable for the thinner materials, such as silk and veiling quite as well as cloth and other suitings.

The skirt is made in nine gores that are cut with extensions below the plain yoke portion, which provides fulness and flare, while at the back are the inverted pleats that are so universally becoming.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is eleven and one-half yards twenty-seven, six and one-quarter yards forty-four or fifty-two inches wide, with two yards of bias velvet to trim as illustrated.

A PLEASANT OCCASION.

On Saturday, the 22d inst., there was quite a notable gathering at the residence of Capt. W. A. Middleton in Clanton, the occasion being a dinner given by our Representative-elect, J. Osmond Middleton, and Sheriff-elect Felix J. Pitts, these two gentlemen being aided and abetted by Mrs. Gamma Anderson, Mr. Middleton's sister. The guests were Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds, County Commissioners W. H. Conway, Alex Glasscock and S. E. Whatley, Tax Assessor L. B. Pounds, Tax Collector T. J. Hubbard, Col. A. C. Smith, C. D. Foshee and Walter C. Edler. The repast, from a gastronomic point of view especially, left nothing to be desired, and Mrs. Anderson made a most charming hostess. Mutual congratulations were in order on our splendid victory in Chilton last November, and the new officers were assured of the hearty support of all, especially to Mr. Middleton in his efforts in the Legislature to pass good laws and to head off what might be termed "spite acts." All were outspoken in favor of the local home rule under which Chilton county now occupies her proud position among the sixty-seven counties in Alabama as to finances, etc. There was much regret expressed at the absence of County Commissioners R. P. Kendrick and Moses Robinson. Mr. Kendrick is now in the infirmary at Selma under treatment there, and many sincere wishes were expressed that he would soon be amongst us again entirely recovered.

CARD OF THANKS.

Editor Union:

Through the columns of you paper I wish to express my sincere thanks for all the assistance in various ways rendered by our friends while preparing for our Christmas entertainment. Prominently mentioned are Mrs. L. V. Stabler and Miss Alma Hovey (one of the pupils of the High School department of the public school), who each made the program more interesting by contributing vocal and instrumental music. I wish to commend the pupils for their sweet spirit of helpfulness, so noticeable in every particular. Miss Hovey and Miss Addie Hovey also rendered valuable assistance, which was highly appreciated.

(MISS) STEVONIA E. NASH,
Principal Thorsby Public School.

LOMAX.

Editor Union:

Please give me a small space in your valuable paper to reply to D. J. Rollan on the stock law question. Mr. Rollan, the reason way I did not stay in the stock law district was not because I didn't like the law, for I voted for it and lived under it ten years, and liked it all the time. I will give you my reasons for favoring stock law: First—when I was a renter my landlord could furnish the pasture much cheaper than he could fence my entire crop against my neighbor's stock and the law gave my crop better protection than my landlord's old rotten fence did. Second—When I became a land owner I could furnish my renters pasture a great deal cheaper than I could fence their crops, so by experience I have found that stock law is better for both renter and landlord. Now Mr Rollan, I think you are mistaken as to why so many people are leaving stock-law districts. You say they can't live in it without being slaves. I will say that I know fifteen farmers that live in Lomax community, who came from stock law districts and are now in favor of stock law. I know of but one in this community that comes from stock law who oppose it. Does it look reasonable that if stock law made slaves of the people that these would be in favor of it? I think I can tell you why so many people come here from stock law. First—After a district gets stock law property of all kinds increases very rapidly in value, more especially land, so as a rule these people are after cheap property, knowing that stock law will soon follow. Are you in favor of cheap property? Now, Mr. R., I am opposed to democratic rule and believe in "equal rights to all." Do you believe it is right for me, after I have fenced a place for my stock to stay in, to have to fence my entire crop to keep your stock or my neighbor's stock from trespassing on my crop—does this give me the right to do with my own as I would like? Mr. Rollan, you remind me of some people I know who have their land "posted" and yet these same people are in favor of forcing their neighbors to fence against their stock. I don't blame these people for "posting" their land, but I don't see how they can do it and then consistently oppose stock law. I want to tell you that I am a republican that believes in protection and freedom, not of stock, but of men. I believe it is right for every man to save for his own stock and not let them run their neighbors to so much expense. Give us stock law and our renters will have better stock, better milk and butter and more of it, and their crops will be protected—our widows will only have to fence against their own stock and will not have to go to the expense of having rails split to fence against everybody's stock. Our land owners can give their renters a much better chance, as they will not have so much expensive fencing to do, and they can and will furnish their renters pastures which will be much better than having their stock running up and down the lanes. Now, Mr. Rollan, don't you know that if you don't teach your children in the right way, that you are liable to mislead others? You should be very careful in your teaching, and if you can't teach in the right way better not to teach at all. Now, in conclusion, I want to say to each and every voter in Beat 4 to investigate this question from an unprejudiced and economical standpoint and on the 15th of January, 1907, cast your votes accordingly. With best wishes to the Union, its editor and readers.

BEAT 4 VOTER.

MOUNTAIN CREEK.

Editor Union:

Please allow me a little space in your interesting paper on the subject of stock law, about which there is so much to say. I think that such a law would be alright if everybody lived in town or along the railroads and could live without meat and bread; but as this is impossible, I think stock law would be as bad as a famine. Some folks say it would make us have better stock, that is a mistake, for here in Beat 14, Elmore county, which joins Beat 5 in Chilton and where there is 100 acres of woodland to one acre in cultivation, we have as good cows and hogs as any stock law section. For instance, I killed a pig in October, 1903 that was 5 months old and weighed 121 pounds net. I sold two yearling cattle (2 1-2 years old) which weighed 1600 pounds, all raised without stock law, and have now ten head of good cattle fat enough for good beef, some of them just out of the range today, have not fed them anything. So I think that stock law is unjust to Beat 5 in Chilton and Beats 9 and 14 in Elmore and the adjacent beat in Autauga. Now let your readers think of the thousands of acres of forest and old field lands, of the very best grazing of which the people and owners would be deprived of using. I've been in stock law districts and seen for myself that none of the well-to-do people have cattle and hogs and it is often the case that they suffer, and besides that, people become careless and stock break out and cause trouble between neighbors, and many of those who have no land have no stock and suffer thereby. Some say, no timber—that is no excuse at all, wire is cheap and will not burn up. With best wishes for your success.

J. L. LONG, Sr.

THORSY DOTS.

The public school gave a very interesting and well-attended entertainment at the school house Friday night. The program was very well rendered and reflected great credit on the pupils, as well as on the teachers—Misses Nash, Johnson and Lefstad. Dr. Geo. C. Nix, of Sanford, Ala., was a visitor last week. In addition to his practice he now has a drug store, and he reports business good in both lines. Nels. Peterson is visiting here after an absence of three and a half years. He has been working at his trade in Iowa and North Dakota since leaving Thorsby. Mrs. Martin Olson, of Chicago, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. G. C. Michelson. A. M. Mims went to Mobile county, last week. P. E. Heller, of Randolph, with his family, sister and father, have moved into the Skov house, recently purchased by Mr Heller. Mrs. Anna Phalin and husband, G. W. Phalin, are spending the holidays in Chicago and McHenry, Ill. Mrs. Albertson has moved into Anton Thorson's house. The United Protestant Sunday school gave a very good Christmas entertainment on Christmas night. Among those visiting in Thorsby or at home for the holidays we notice: Mr. and Mrs. Lon Reagan, C. P. Turnquist, S. R. Billingsley, Mrs. S. M. Kile, John Kile, Bert Bosworth, Sarah Yaeger, Mrs. Hattie Warner, Charlie Barrett, Ernie Hanson, Hilda and Ellen Furstman, T. W. Robinson, M. J. Soberg, L. O. Larsen, Magne Anderson, O. A. T. Lofstad, Chas. A. Peterson, G. Berlin, Blaine Burnett and Will Sorrell. H. W. Pond of Rockford, Ala., spent a couple of days last week with his daughter, Mrs. Wheelock. The Glee Club of the young men of Thorsby is progressing very nicely, and this is the program for their next meeting, next Saturday night: Music, Geo. and Karl Peterson, Grover and Clarence Bice; collateral events, Ives Amundson; reading (T. Dooley), Geo. Peterson; debate, "Resolved, that it would be more beneficial for Thorsby to license a saloon than to allow the winery to operate"—affirmative, Thurston Riggins, Carl Soberg and H. C. Junkerman; negative, Ives Amundson, Chas. Howard and Clarence Bice; music, Geo. Peterson, Karl Peterson Clarence Bice and Grover Bice. Wm J. Lamkie, president.

PROMINENT PEOPLE.

Archbishop Ireland is sixty-eight years of age.

John D. Rockefeller has taken to playing golf with his Italian workmen.

Nicholas Longworth, the President's son-in-law, wears chiefly English clothes.

Ferdinand Brunetiere, the writer and member of the French Academy, died recently in Paris.

Baron Desborough, a famous all-round athlete, is talked of for British Ambassador at Washington.

A Senate seat, and not a renomination in 1908, was declared to be the ambition of President Roosevelt.

Jeffries Davis, the new Senator from Arkansas, has never worn a swallowtail coat and vows he never will.

The newly elected Senator Beckham, of Kentucky, will be the youngest member of the Senate, being only thirty-seven years old. But he has been Governor of his State.

William Wilson Finley, who succeeds the late Samuel Spencer as president of the Southern Railway, is closely related to the Levering and Wilson families, of Baltimore.

Thomas T. Crittenden, ex-Governor of Missouri, celebrated his golden wedding anniversary recently. He was twenty-four years old and his wife seventeen when they were wedded at Frankfort, Ky.

Like Wagner before him, Richard Strauss, composer of "Salome," has been rejected as a member of the Senate of the Berlin Academy of Arts, an institution corresponding to the French Academy.

Jeremiah Curtin, the author, linguist and philologist, who is well known for his translations of the works of Henryk Sienkiewicz, author of "Quo Vadis," died at his home in Bristol, Vt. He was credited with knowing seventy languages.

The universal verdict in these parts is to the effect that football has been made more interesting by the new rules and also less dangerous. Brains count for more now and brawn and bulk for less, declares the Crawfordsville (Ind.) Journal.

Applying for work at Northampton, relates the London Globe, a man was told by the foreman, "We've got a man here who hasn't come, and if he doesn't turn up tomorrow, we shall send him home." It looks as if the applicant had a good sporting chance of getting that job.

Admiral Sir Edward Fremantle, who entered the British navy in 1849, when 13 years old, agrees with President Roosevelt that "the naval officer of the future must be a fighting engineer," and he thinks that this view is shared by the British Admiralty.

Things have come to a pretty pass in Pittsburg, observes the Chicago Tribune, when the boiler tubes it turns out for Government warships have no better moral character than its millionaires.

The Savannah News notes that a Birmingham man has been arrested for stealing two pounds of limburger cheese. The temptation is strong to say something about his being in bad odor, but we won't do it.

Nearly every man thinks he is widely known, says the Atchison Globe. An Atchison man said today: "Everybody knows me." We made a test of it: We asked the first twelve men we met if they knew him, and they said they had never heard of him.

It is not too much to say, according to the New York American, of the Gould family today that the head of it, George Gould, has the respect of those who feel a certain hostility to the financial world, in which he is at all times a prominent figure. As for his sister, and the sister of the Countess de Castellane, Miss Helen Gould, there is probably no woman in New York more thoroughly admired or more widely known.

There are two kinds of dogs, to say the least, and so there are at least two sides to what may be called the dog problem. When you see the intelligent dog, following his master with a devotion that shames a good deal of human affection, declares the Hartford Courier, you wonder that anybody can even think ill of dogs, but, when you see a worthless cur snapping right and left down the street, you wonder that civilization tolerates dogs at all. When you realize that, but for dogs, Connecticut might be raising sheep by the thousands, you take another anti-dog brace.

In the latest "North American" instalment of his autobiography Mark Twain has this to say about the author of "Alice in Wonderland," Lewis Carroll: "He was only interesting to look at, for he was the stillest and shyest full-grown man I have ever met except Uncle Remus."

The Atlanta Constitution concludes a review of the income tax proposition thus: Since 1842 the income tax has been maintained as a feature of the British financial system. It was first introduced during the progress of the Napoleonic wars. It was revived fifty years later and has been continuously in operation since. It may be argued that the income tax was in force in the United States between 1862 and 1872 and proved a failure. It can not be denied, however, that this result was largely due to the failure to establish a systematic and competent means of collecting the tax. That defect can be remedied and the income tax provisions enforced as any other system of taxation is enforced. It will be opposed in some quarters, but it will meet the wishes and the desires of the great mass of the people of the country and will discriminate against the very classes of wealth that are so difficult to reach by other methods of taxation. It is a popular measure and it is only a question of time when it will be restored to the statute books of this country.

The active interposition of the Trades League in the effort to secure the aid of the Government in digging a free ship canal connecting the waters of the Chesapeake and Delaware bays is altogether commendable. The construction of this canal is only less necessary to the building up of the commercial interests of Philadelphia than the deepening of the Delaware River channel asserts the Philadelphia Record. It is important both for commercial reasons affecting the territory for which this port furnishes natural terminal facilities and for purposes of maritime convenience as affecting the Federal navy and the defense of Atlantic coast cities in the event of war. Congress can hardly fail to recognize the desirability of finishing this already half-done canal, because of the magnitude of both State and national interests involved, if the matter be suitably pressed by the Representatives of the States directly interested.

THE NEW YORK WORLD.

Thrice-a-Week Edition—Read Wherever the English Language is Spoken.

The Thrice-a-Week World, now that a great Presidential campaign is foreshadowed, hopes to be a better paper than it has ever been before, and it has made arrangements accordingly. Its news service covers the entire globe, and it reports everything fully, promptly and accurately. It is the only newspaper, not a daily, which is as good as a daily, and which will keep you as completely informed of what is happening throughout the world.

The Thrice-a-Week World is fair in its political reports. You can get the truth from its columns, whether you are Republican or Democrat, and that is what you want.

A special feature of the Thrice-a-Week World has always been its serial fiction. It publishes novels by the best authors in the world, novels which in book form sell for $1.50 apiece, and its high standard in this respect will be maintained in the future as in the past.

The Thrice-a-Week World's regular subscription price is only $1 per year, and this pays for 156 papers. We offer this unequalled newspaper and The Union together for one year for $1.50.

The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2. tf

NOTICE.

Thorsby, Ala., Nov. 28, 1906.

To the Citizens of Thorsby, Ala., and to Whom It May Concern:

There will be a petition presented to the next session of the Legislature of Alabama to repeal or amend the charter of the city of Thorsby, Alabama, to repeal the latter clause of section twenty-four (24) of said charter, which reads as follows, viz: "Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines made from the juice of the grape or other wine fruits, and the City Council shall have power to license and otherwise regulate the sale of said wine, and the license for the use of the State of Alabama shall be the same as required by the State from dealers in wines exclusively in other parts of the state."

To read as follows, viz: Provided, however, that it shall be lawful to manufacture, sell and keep for sale pure, unadulterated wines mades from the juice of grapes, and the City Council shall have power to license and regulate the sale of said wines, but wine shall not be sold in less quantities than one gallon, and shall not be drank on the premises where sold, and shall not be drank in the house where sold, nor in a room adjoining the same.

Any person selling wine in less quantities than one gallon, or permitting it to be drank on the premises, or in the house where sold, or in a room adjoining the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than ten dollars and costs for every offense. And the license for the use of the State shall not be less than fifteen dollars. And all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act are hereby repealed. J. BICE.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

On Christmas day Master Aubrey and sister, Willodene Elliott, entertained their little friends, Mary Lewis, Leona Pipes and Hoke Pipes, at dinner at the Hotel Wilson. The little folks all seemed to enjoy themselves very much.

J. W. and S. E. Neeley, of Enterprise, were pleasant visitors Thursday.

L. N. Henderson has moved from Verbena to Enterprise, where he has purchased a farm of H. B. Oliver.

J. G. Wood, of Beat 10, was a welcome caller Thursday.

J. M. Mims, of Collins Chapel, was in Clanton Thursday.

D. C. Honeycutt, of Strasburg, was a pleasant visitor Friday.

J. T. Burnett, of Archer's Chapel was a welcome caller Friday.

E. F. Varden was a pleasant visitor Friday.

A. B. Powell, of Cooper, was a welcome caller Friday.

J. R. Collins, of Collins Cross Roads was in Clanton Friday.

J. W. Hays and wife, Mr. and Mrs H. O. Bean and W. A. Hays and wife were Clanton visitors Friday.

J. C. Adams was in Clanton Friday.

J. M. Curlee and son, Hubbard, were in town Friday.

J. E. McDowell and nephew, Zebedee, were pleasant visitors Saturday.

R. B. Carden and son, Jim, were welcome callers Saturday.

The Misses Georgia and Minnie Thompson, of Prattville, are here visiting their sister, Mrs. J. Will Moore.

Mrs. Boswell is gone to Elmore for a month's visit.

Mrs. I. R. Lindsey and Mr. and Mrs. J. Wiley Foshee, of Mount Pleasant, were pleasant visitors Saturday.

Marion Marcus was in Clanton Saturday, having just returned from a visit to Birmingham.

J. M. Kicker was in Clanton Saturday, and carried back home his daughter, Miss Neecie, who had been visiting here with her sister, Mrs. Jim Popwell.

J. J. Pounds, of Hattiesburg, Miss., where he is in the employ of a construction company, is here on a visit to his parents, Assessor and Mrs. L. B. Pounds. Mr. Pounds is a bachelor, and it is thought that he intends asking some Chilton young lady how she would like to live in Mississippi. Look out for him, girls.

J. L. Dupree was a pleasant visitor Monday.

T. J. Dorning, of Union, was in Clanton Monday.

C. H. Cooper was a welcome caller Monday.

W. B. and E. W. Cooper and A. N. Williams were in town Monday.

Grady Reynolds and M. D. Foshee are here spending their holidays at home, the Marion Military Institute which the young men are attending giving a three weeks' holiday vacation.

E. B. Calloway was a pleasant visitor Monday.

G. W. Lewis and sons, Abraham, Edward, John O., J. A., Jerome, G. W. and Dewey, were in Clanton Tuesday. It is a pleasure to see such a lot of sturdy youngsters in one family, and the State should issue a pension or at least a medal to the parents who make such a brave fight against "race suicide."

R. A. Hardy, of Birmingham, was a welcome caller Tuesday. Mr. Hardy is an old Chiltonian, who now occupies a responsible position under the T. I. & C. Co.

Sam W. Collins, our smiling and happy Circuit Clerk, is spending the holidays at Mobile. May he have a good time.

There was a little disagreement a few miles from Jemison Christmas eve and Tom Martin cut Jess Littlefield very badly.

A SERMON BY THE REV. IRA W. HENDERSON

CHRISTMAS DISCOURSE.

Theme: The Significance of the Birth of Christ.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the theme "The Significance of the Birth of Christ," the Rev. Ira Wemmell Henderson, pastor, took as his text Luke 2:11: "For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." He said:

The coming of the Christ is the axis of Western chronology and the inspiration of uncounted souls. When, on that starry night amid the fertile fields of Judea, the angel of the Lord stood beside the watching shepherds and the multitude of the heavenly host sang hosanna to the living God, the sweetest, most entrancing soul among the sons of men began His earthly history. The wise men from afar, who laid at the feet of the manger babe the royal, costly gifts, were but the precursors of a glad, rejoicing host who, in every epoch and every clime, have rendered homage to the Christ. The sudden light that bathed the quiet plain that peaceful Christmas eve beams to-day with undimmed radiance into multitudes of hearts. The voices that sang from heaven to earth still sing to listening ears. The angel of the Lord still speaks. The babe whom Mary loved is with us. The Son of God is here.

The birth of Christ is historic. The presence of Christ yesterday and to-day is a fact. Nothing is more certain than that Christ once lived. The Gospels attest it. Contemporaneous records recognize it. The Christian world around us is a consequential evidence of His reality and His influence. Men may dispute concerning the exact day and month and year of His coming into the affairs of men; they may speculate concerning the exact place of His birth; they may argue, as they will, over the manner of His coming; but they cannot, they have not and they will not deny His actuality. Jesus is a fact; the most momentous fact of history.

Let us consider the significance of the birth of Jesus in the light of the ages.

The birth of Jesus is significant as we consider it to be the fulfillment of Hebrew prophecy, as we understand it to be the culmination of a divine self revelation, as we study its effect on humanity.

The birth of Jesus was the fulfillment of prophecy. Except we glance down the long record of the prophetic hopes of Israel we cannot understand the Christ. Christ, apart from Jewish history, is inexplicable. Jesus is not an isolated, but, rather, a resultant fact. The Saviour is the fulfillment of a nation's hope, though so largely unaccepted. He is the consummation of the efforts of a nation's saintly men to lead their people near to God. The messages of Isaiah are the adumbrations of the Christ. The visions of the prophets are the fore-gleams of the gentle Galilean. Israel looked with expectancy and with hope unquenchable for Immanuel—the presence of Jehovah in the midst of His people. Having been led out of physical and carking bondage they looked forward with eagerness at a later day to a Jesus, a Saviour, who, clothed with divine power and enriched with a divine commission, should lead the sin-sick people of God out of the thralldom of spiritual slavery into the freedom and the blessedness of an eternal and sufficient salvation from their sins. Jesus was the fulfillment of that hope and prophecy. What the fathers had declared, He was. The chosen people of God yearned for an earthly king, a Messiah anointed of God, set apart to a holy leadership, divinely dedicated to the consummation of a national existence in righteousness and truth. And in Jesus was this other hope fulfilled, and with a nobler purpose and with a larger scope. Within the spiritual kingdom that He came to institute lay the secret of a kingdom which should rule the world. Far grander than any prophecy and hope of Israel was the plan that, in Jesus Christ, God unfolded to His chosen people. What a pity it is that nineteen centuries ago Israel did not see the beauty of the plan of God, that she did not recognize that broader and that grander mission of a world-wide ministration and universal dominion to which God, in Jesus, called her. And how sad it is to-day that the race to whom the principles of Jesus are most easily understandable is so opposed to the system of religious truth that in our times is termed distinctively Christian. The appropriation by the Jew of those principles of pure and central Christianity that are the glory of the truth as it has been revealed of God in Jesus Christ would be the exceeding story of the coming ages and the fairest possession of the chosen people of the Lord.

The birth of Jesus was the culmination of divine self-revelation. In the personality and the message of the Christ God gave the fullness of the divine self-explication. Jesus is the objectifying of the Godhead before the very eyes of humanity. In Him Jehovah unfolds the personality of divinity. In His message is proclaimed the mind of God for the welfare and sanctifying of the world. Jesus is the declaration of the divinity, the humanity, the fatherhood of God. And in the person of the Christ is completed the long endeavor of a loving and patient Father to impress Himself upon the minds, the hearts, the lives of His wayward, errant children. Throughout all the ages and in the lives of all His people God had been revealing God to man. Here and there, as Israel heard the voice of Jehovah, there arose men of prevision, men of insight, men of intense spiritual discernment to declare to the duller and less spiritually acute multitude the meaning and the import of God's self-revealment. Throughout all the history of the chosen people of God Divinity strove in diverse and incessant fashion to impart to the consciousness of mankind a true understanding of Himself. And as man, from time to time, has understood the truth that God has delivered to him by His Spirit and through the prophets, we have had varied interpretations of the character and of the personality of God. The changeless God has constantly revealed the truth concerning Himself, His plans, His purposes, to men. Men have oftentimes been heedless of the divine instruction, they have oftentimes been ignorant of the full import of the self-revelations of Jehovah, they have oftentimes misinterpreted the messages that God has delivered to their lives. But whether or no men have been heedless, ignorant or dull, God has always revealed the truth concerning Himself. His has been a constant and cumulative effort to lead men to a satisfying and correct vision of Himself.

Jesus is the finality of the divine self-revelation. The work of the Spirit before the days of Christ was preparative, in order to human comprehension of the Christ. And the struggle of the Spirit since the ascension of our Lord has been to lead men to hear, to heed, to understand and to accept the truth which, so richly, Christ communicates from God. Jesus is the consummation of the effort of the Spirit of the old dispensation; He is the inspiration of the labors of the Holy Spirit of the later covenant between God and men. The photograph of God that Jesus livingly imparts to men is the ripest product of divine self-impartation. He is the culmination of divine self-revelation.

But it is in its effect on humanity that the birth of Christ is most significant and of widest and most robust influence. The birthday of Jesus is the birthday of the larger liberty of man. The coming of Jesus is the beginning of man's nobler age. The nativity of Jesus is the nativity of the transcendant inspiration of the human soul. Mary's child is the hope of all the children of men.

The birth of Christ is effectual for humanity individually, socially, ethically, religiously.

The birth of Christ marks the dawn of the most glorious epoch in the history of the human unit. In the face of a faith and of a civilization that too strongly emphasized the social aspect of human society Jesus declared the dignity, the integrity, the incalculable importance of the individual. He placed the common man on the plane upon which God in His providence intended him to move.

But while the Lord dignified the individual and proclaimed the eternal worth of the human unit apart from the mass, He in no wise lowered the high position of the social system in the scheme of God for the ordering of this world's affairs. Rather did He ennoble society as a whole. Emphasizing the importance of the individual, He insisted on the value of that individual only as representing an integer in the sum of the social life, he remained true to the finest principles of the kingdom of God and labored unremittingly for the advancement and purifying of society as a whole. Jesus taught the eternal preciousness of the separate personality, with the one desire to indicate to the individual man his personal responsibility to God and society in the face of the limitless and unnumbered opportunities that a loving Father placed within his reach. Profound philosopher as He was, Jesus perceived with unerring vision, that the secret of a redeemed society lay in redeemed individuals. And, although He had a lively interest in the single man, He was concerned with him in greatest measure because of his fundamental necessity to and central importance in a redeemed and sanctified society. Jesus crowned individuality as none other before Him had dared to do; but He invested individuality with a peculiar and novel dignity in order that with the realization of its surpassing consequence individuality should strive hardest to be counted worthy of a place in a social order regenerated and redeemed of God.

The birth of Jesus was effective to the betterment of the ethics—that is to say—the laws of conduct—of humanity. Preaching no Gospel of precise and detailed rules and regulations, our Lord yet, with such insistency, taught the larger principles upon which all sound morals and social conduct are based that with two sentences He laid the emphasis where eternally it had belonged in the mind of God and from which it had, by casuistry and the insincerity of moral jugglers, been displaced. Jesus rejuvenated and invigorated the ethical judgments of His day and age. And He not only bettered the moral standards of His own time but He augmented the appeal and the scope of moral law for all time.

The birth of Jesus marks the dawn of a new and surpassing era in the religious career of humanity. Jesus released religion from the bondage of sheer legalism and infused it with a new purpose. He found religion, very largely, a matter of ecclesiasticism and of legal regulation and of formality and cant. He left it with the inspiration of an enlarged mission and of an increased opportunity. He found a system. He left a life. Before His coming religion was largely mint, cummin, anise, tithes, phylacteries, burnt offerings, prayer in the market place. After Jesus religion was humility, righteousness, purity, sacrifice—it was a life; a life indwelt, inspired, sanctified of God.

Unsatisfied, But Contented.

Contentment is a Christian duty; satisfaction is not. Being contented is accepting one's present assigned place of toil and influence as in the ordering of God's providence. Being satisfied is taking it for granted that God has nothing better in store for one in the opening future. It is proper to be contented for the moment, but not to be satisfied for all time to come. As Robertson says, "Man's destiny is not to be satisfied, but forever unsatisfied." Let us, therefore, be ever unsatisfied while ever contented.—Henry C. Trumbull.

"Pique-Nique."

The new volume of the Oxford English Dictionary determines authoritatively the English of the word "picnic," so far as English is concerned. Toward the close of the eighteenth century the French used the word pique-nique (of obscure derivation) for a social entertainment of which each guest contributed a share. Early in the next century the English appeared to discover that this form of social co-operation was well adapted for excursions and open air repasts, so that about the middle of the century the word was dissociated from suppers and private theatricals, and so long as an entertainment was in the open air it was a picnic, whether its materials were jointly contributed or not.—The Sketch.

Asbestos can fairly lay claim to the title of being the most useful of all minerals. It has been called a mineralogical vegetable. It is both fibrous and crystalline, elastic, yet brittle, a floating stone, which can be readily carded, spun and woven into tissue. In Germany it is known as stein-flachs (stone flax), and the miners of Quebec give it quite as expressive a name—pierre coton (cotton stone).

One of the manias of the King of the Belgians is building. King Leopold, who spends almost as much time out of this country as he does in it, has several residences which he seldom or never visits, yet he is constantly adding to them. He has a fine palace in Brussels, but when within his own domains he prefers to spend his time in the country. He is also the richest monarch in Europe so far as real estate is concerned.

Ploughing is done by steam on practically every one of the largest ranch farms. Instead of ploughing just one furrow, as in the olden days, a number of ploughs are attached to the engine and every trip across the field leaves a stretch of newly turned earth ten to twenty feet wide. Twenty-five acres in twelve hours. Three horses work for one engine, although many farmers make the machines do forty acres in twelve hours. Three horses and one man to each plough turn over three acres in one day. The engineer is the principal power in the newer way.

A Great Outside Remedy.

Most pains are of local origin—a "crick" in the back, a twinge of rheumatism, a soreness all over arising from a cold—are all cured by outside applications. The quickest, surest and most certain method is Allcock's Plaster, known the world over as a universal remedy for pain. They never fail, they act promptly, they are clean and cheap. You can go right ahead with your work while the healing process goes on. Sixty years' use has given them a great reputation.

TORTURED WITH ECZEMA.

Tremendous Itching Over Whole Body—Scratched Until Bled—Wonderful Cure by Cuticura.

"Last year I suffered with a tremendous itching on my back, which grew worse and worse until it spread over the whole body, and only my face and hands were free. For four months or so I suffered torments, and I had to scratch, scratch, scratch until I bled. At night when I went to bed things got worse, and I had at times to get up and scratch my body all over until I was as sore as could be, and until I suffered excruciating pain. They told me that I was suffering from eczema. Then I made up my mind that I would use the Cuticura Remedies. I used them according to instructions, and very soon indeed I was greatly relieved. I continued until well, and now I am ready to recommend the Cuticura Remedies to any one. Mrs. Mary Metzger, Sweetwater, Okla., June 28, 1905."

The Kaiser as a Matchmaker.

A curious instance of the active part the Kaiser takes in arranging the marriage of relatives and friends is recorded. A personal aide-de-camp of His Majesty was very much depressed by the lady of his choice giving him a refusal. The same afternoon the Kaiser drove to the house of the young lady, the daughter of a wealthy Berlin banker, and pleaded the cause of his aide-de-camp with such eloquence that the marriage took place a month later.—Reynolds' Newspaper.

A Bold Step.

To overcome the well-grounded and reasonable objections of the more intelligent to the use of secret, medicinal compounds, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., some time ago, decided to make a bold departure from the usual course pursued by the makers of put-up medicines for domestic use, and so has published broadcast and openly to the whole world, a full and complete list of all the ingredients entering into the composition of his widely celebrated medicines. Thus he has taken his numerous patrons and patients into his full confidence. Thus too he has removed his medicines from among secret nostrums of doubtful merits, and made them Remedies of Known Composition.

By this bold step Dr. Pierce has shown that his formulas are of such excellence that he is not afraid to subject them to the fullest scrutiny.

Not only does the wrapper of every bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous medicine for weak stomach, torpid liver or biliousness and all catarrhal diseases wherever located, have printed upon it, in plain English, a full and complete list of all the ingredients composing it, but a small book has been compiled from numerous standard medical works, of all the different schools of practice, containing very numerous extracts from the writings of leading practitioners of medicine, endorsing in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient contained in Dr. Pierce's medicines. One of these little books will be mailed free to any one sending address on postal card or by letter, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and requesting the same. From this little book it will be learned that Dr. Pierce's medicines contain no alcohol, narcotics, mineral agents or other poisonous or injurious agents and that they are made from native, medicinal roots of great value; also that some of the most valuable ingredients contained in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, nervous, over-worked, "run-down," nervous and debilitated women, were employed, long years ago, by the Indians for similar ailments affecting their squaws. In fact, one of the most valuable medicinal plants entering into the composition of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription was known to the Indians as "Squaw-Weed." Our knowledge of the uses of not a few of our most valuable native, medicinal plants was gained from the Indians.

As made up by improved and exact processes, the "Favorite Prescription" is a most efficient remedy for regulating all the womanly functions, correcting displacements, as prolapsus, anteversion and retorversion, overcoming painful periods, toning up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. Sold by all dealers in medicines.

German, which is spoken by upward of 75,000,000 people, ranks third in number among the four leading languages of Europe, the first being English, the second Russian and the fourth French.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

I was busy with my reaping,
When Love passed by.
"Come," she cried, "thou plainest grieving.
Ripened sorrows art thou sheaving.
If the heart lie fallow, vain is Garnered store. Thy wealth of grain is Less than Love's least sigh.
Haste thee—for the hours fast dwindle
Ere the pyre of Hope shall kindle
In life's western sky."
But I answered: "I am reaping.
When with song of youth and maiden,
Home the hock-cart comes, full-laden,
I will follow."
Love passed by.

I had gathered in my harvest,
When Love passed by.
"Stay," I called—to her, swift speeding,
Turning not, my cry unheeding—
"Stay, O Love, I fain would follow.
Stay thy flight, oh fleet-winged swallow
Cleaving twilight sky!
I am old and worn and weary,
Void my fields and heart—and dreary,
With thee would I fly.
Garnered woe is all my harvest,
Sad ghosts of my dead hopes haunt me,
Fierce regrets, like demons, taunt me—
Stay!—I follow!"
Love passed by.

...Madeleine threw a frightened ...look toward her husband. What did ...their little one say? Was it the delirium, the frightful delirium, which ...came back again?

"Boum-Boum!

...She did not know what that meant ...but was afraid of these singular ...words which the child repeated with a sickly persistence as if, not having dared until now to formulate his dream, he grasped the present time with invincible obstinacy:

"Yes, Boum-Boum! Boum-Boum! I want Boum-Boum!"

The mother had seized Jacques' hand and spoke very low, as if demented.

"What does that mean, Jacques? He is lost!"

But the father had on his rough, workingman's face a smile almost happy, but astonished, too, the smile of a condemned man who foresees a possibility of liberty.

Boum-Boum! He remembered well the morning of Easter Monday when he had taken Francois to the circus. He had still in his ears the child's outbursts of joy, the happy laugh of the amused boy, when the clown, the beautiful clown all spangled with gold and with a great gilded butterfly sparkling, many-colored, on the back of his black costume, skipped across the track, gave the trip to a rider or held himself motionless and stiff on the sand, his head down and his feet in the air.

Or again he tossed up to the chandelier some soft, felt hats, which he caught adroitly on his head, where they formed, one by one, a pyramid; and at each jest, like a refrain brightening up his intelligent and droll face, he uttered the same cry, repeated the same word, accompanied now and then by a burst from the orchestra: Boum-Boum!

Boum-Boum! and each time that it rang out, Boum-Boum, the audience burst out into hurrahs and the little one joined in with his hearty, little laugh. Boum-Boum! It was this Boum-Boum, it was the clown of the circus, it was this favorite of a large part of the city that little Francois wished to see and to have and whom he could not have and could not see since he was lying here without strength in his white bed.

Ah! if Jacques could have wrapped him up in his blankets, could have carried him to the circus, could have shown him the clown dancing under the lighted chandelier and have said to him, look! He did better, Jacques; he went to the circus, demanded the address of the clown, and timidly, his legs shaking with fear, he climbed, one by one, the steps which led to the apartment of the artist, at Montmartre.

It was very bold this that Jacques was going to do! But, after all, the comedians go to sing and recite their monologues in drawing rooms, at the houses of the great lords. Perhaps the clown—oh! if he only would—would consent to come and say good day to Francois. No matter, how would they receive him, Jacques Legrand, here at Boum-Boum's house?

He was no longer Boum-Boum! He was Monsieur Moreno, and, like the artistic dwelling, the books, the engravings, the elegance was like a choice decoration around the charming man who received Jacques in his office like that of a doctor.

Jacques looked, but did not recognize the clown, and turned and twisted his felt hat between his fingers. The other waited. Then the father excused himself. "It was astonishing what he came there to ask, it could not be—pardon, excuse. But in short, it was concerning the little one. A nice little one, monsieur. And so intelligent! Always the first at school, except in arithmetic, which he did not understand. A dreamer, this little one, do you see! Yes, a dreamer. And the proof—wait—the proof."

Jacques now hesitated, stammered; but he gathered up his courage and said, brusquely:

"The proof is that he wishes to see you, that he thinks only of you, and that you are there before him like a star which he would like to have, and that he looks——"

When he had finished the father was deadly pale and he had great drops on his forehead. He dared not look at the clown, who remained with his eyes fixed on the workman. And what was he going to say, this Boum-Boum? Was he going to dismiss him—take him for a fool and put him out the door?

"You live?" asked Boum-Boum.

"Oh, very near! Street of the Abesses!"

"Come!" said the other. "Your boy wants to see Boum-Boum? Ah, well, he is going to see Boum-Boum."

When the door opened and showed the clown, Jacques Legrand cried out joyfully to his son:

"Francois, be happy, child! See, here he is, Boum-Boum!"

A look of great joy came over the child's face. He raised himself on his mother's arm and turned his head toward the two men who approached, questioning, for a moment, who it was by the side of his father; this gentleman in an overcoat, whose good, pleasant face he did not know. When they said to him, "It is Boum-Boum," he slowly fell back on the pillow and remained there, his eyes fixed, his beautiful, large blue eyes which looked beyond the walls of the little room and were always seeking the spangles and the butterfly of Boum-Boum, like a lover who pursues his dream.

"No," replied the child, with a voice which was no longer dry, but full of despair, "no, it is not Boum-Boum."

The clown, standing near the little bed, threw upon the child an earnest look, very grave, but of an inexpressible sweetness.

He shook his head, looked at the anxious father, the grief-stricken mother, and said, smiling, "He is right; this is not Boum-Boum!" and then he went out.

"I cannot see him, I will never see Boum-Boum any more!" repeated the child, whose little voice spoke to the angels. "Boum-Boum is perhaps there, there, where little Francois will soon go."

And suddenly—it was only half an hour since the clown had disappeared—the door opened quickly and in his black, spangled clothes, his yellow cap on his head, the gilded butterfly on his breast and on his back, with a smile as big as the mouth of a money box and a powdered face, Boum-Boum, the true Boum-Boum, the Boum-Boum of the circus, the Boum-Boum of the popular neighborhood, the Boum-Boum of little Francois—Boum-Boum appeared.

Lying on his little white bed the child clapped his thin, little hands, laughing, crying, happy, saved, with a joy of life in his eyes, and cried 'Bravo" with his seven-year gayety which all at once kindled up like a match:

"Boum-Boum! It is he, it is he, this time! Here is Boum-Boum! Long live Boum-Boum! Good day, Boum-Boum."

And when the doctor came back, he found, seated by little Francois' bedside a clown with a pale face who made the little one laugh again and again, and who said to the child while he was stirring a piece of sugar into a cup of medicine:

"Thou knowest, if thou dost not drink, little Francois, Boum-Boum will not come back any more."

So the child drank.

"Is it not good?"

"Very good! Thanks, Boum-Boum!"

"Doctor," said the clown to the doctor, "do not be jealous. It seems to me that my grimaces will do him as much good as your prescriptions!"

The father and the mother went, but this time from joy.

Canadian Canal Tonnage.

Freight passing through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Ontario, Canada, during July amounted to 7,732,771 net tons, 6,273,734 of which represented an eastbound and 1,459,037 a westbound movement. Of the total traffic, 6,941,164 tons were shipped through the American and 791,607 through the Canadian canal. Similar traffic in July, 1905, amounted to 6,703,706 tons and in 1904 to 5,609,079 tons. During the first four months of the present season the aggregate freight movement through these canals amounted to 22,710,551 tons, not exceeding the corresponding movements in 1905 by nearly three million tons and those of 1904 by over thirteen millions.

Zion Hill's "Sacred Eleven."

Preparations have begun for the celebration next year of the centennial of Andover Theological Seminary. There are only eleven students all told there now, but it has an endowment of $1,000,000, and its professors outnumber the students. In the century just closing, however, 2168 students have been graduated, a majority of them entering the Congregational ministry. Last year only six gained a degree. During the last six years sixteen students were the highest enrollment for any one year. The present enrollment is termed the "sacred eleven" by the town boys.—New York Tribune.

King Edward Takes a Cab.

The King was at the station when he should have been at the Jockey Club's rooms, and there was nothing for it but to hail a cab from the ranks and ride en petit gentilhomme. It must have been a proud moment for William Challis, licensed cabman of Newmarket. He is a made man—if he has the normal endowment of a cabman's wit, at any rate—for who can resist him now when he says, 'Thankee, sir; you've ridden in the werry cab and on the werry cushion the King did, an' 'e tipped me 'andsome, God bless him for a gentleman!"—Pall Mall Gazette.

Tests made in France indicate that water can be sterilized with ozone at the cost of about a cent and a half for every one thousand gallons, when the process is carried on on a large scale.

THE EMERGENCY WOMAN.

SHE HELPS OUT HUMANITY IN VARIOUS WAYS.

Cwoot Things for Bachelors—Her Smattering of Talents This Fair One Has Carefully and Industriously Fitted Into the Pattern of Life.

The untalented woman when she faces the problem of bread winning is perhaps the most deserving of sympathy of any of her sex.

One who found a field calls herself "emergency woman," and gives it as her experience that there is plenty of opportunity for other women to follow in her footsteps. She admits, however, that the preliminary years of drumming up custom were not so easy that one cares to dwell upon them.

The emergency woman fills in any gap in the domestic fabric at a moment's notice. While she has no one great talent she has a smattering of many, and it is by making a patchwork of them, which has been carefully fitted to the pattern of life, that she has been able to manufacture a cover for the very coldest weather.

She is called upon to do all sorts and kinds of work, and has discovered that every sort and kind of information that she has ever gained can be put to practical use. The trouble with the woman who is obliged to become a wage-earner is that she is discouraged at the outset because she cannot do one thing so well that she is in instant demand.

The emergency woman when the New York Sun reporter saw her was putting up fruit cake and plum puddings for a long list of customers.

"I used to do this in my married days as a joke; now I find that I can turn a pretty penny by it. Of course, I could not depend on this for my support, but it is a fraction, and it doesn't take so many fractions to make a unite, if they are only important enough to begin with.

"Housewives know the value of the cake and pudding that are prepared in the fall for the Christmas table. There is as much difference as there is in the vintage of a wine that is recently bottled and one that has the bouquet of age."

In her spare moments the emergency woman has perfected herself in the triple need of modern days, manicuring, facial massage and shampooing. She does not care to make her money in this way if better opportunities offer, but she can fill in unemployed hours.

In the neighborhood of private schools she can often be seen, a trim little figure, leading one or two children to their daily tasks, and when school is over she returns to escort them home. Many women are unable to spare a servant or to go themselves while the child cannot be trusted to go alone.

Her care of children extends to a wider field. She takes them to the dentist, to the matinees, to any and all kinds of amusements. Often at children's parties she attends, to help out in amusing them, and on her child list are the names of two little ones whom she takes once every week to visit their grandparents, from whom the parents are estranged.

While you might think that trade would lag in the hot weather, the contrary has been the case, and she has been kept hard at work. Her mail is a large one, consisting of requests from out-of-town folk to send some forgotten article left in the flurry of departure, to do some shopping, to purchase bridge whist prizes to take advantage of some bargain noted in the Sunday papers.

"Just to give you an example," she says between hurried steps from pantry to visitor, "one of my ladies telegraphed me to get her some arrack punch for a 5 o'clock tea she was going to have, and the very same mail I get a hurry call to meet a pet dog and have it taken to a veterinary."

She is called upon often to open and air apartments before the homecoming, to find maids and have them ready—the most herculean labor of all—and in lieu of that to do such work in the apartment as may render it habitable.

Another of her interesting duties is the entertainment of guests who want to shop or to go to places of interest of which their hosts are tired. By filling in a day of this kind she relieves the situation and brings the guests back at night tired and happy, to find the woman of the house delighted to welcome them, having had her own day free.

"My scale of wages, of course, fluctuates with circumstances. Sometimes I am paid by piece work, whatever that may be; again, with a great many of my customers I receive a monthly sum for all services rendered. I keep an account of what I have done during the stated period, and the items of time and services have their separate values; so far no one has ever disputed them."

SHOULD WE SLEEP LONGER?

Women Need Less Repose Than Men —Beerbohm Tree's Rest for a First Night.

"Women, I say without hesitation, need less sleep than men, and I say that after observation of many hundreds of them."

Dr. Josiah Oldfield, the well-known specialist, cannot account for the fact, but yesterday he told a Daily Mail representative that, whether they are of the working classes or of higher station in life, women need, and their nature is satisfied with less sleep than their husbands or other male relatives demand.

Meantime man differs as to what he needs. The following are experiences or advice as to the duration of sleep sent to the Daily Mail by distinguished men:

The Bishop of Ripon: When young, take as much sleep as you need; when old, as much as you can get.

Sir Frederick Treves: The average amount of sleep for myself is seven to eight hours.

Sir George Lewis, the well-known solicitor: I think eight hours sufficient. I sleep nine hours.

Mr. Vincent Hill, general manager of the South-Eastern Railway: I think it is well that people should sleep as long as they can, and that is my practice.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree: I should say in my case eight hours' sleep is better than seven, and nine hours better than eight. I take nine hours whenever I can, and invariably sleep for that period when on a holiday, and as near to it as possible at all times. Further, I consider sleep before any effort, with the power to go to sleep at any time, most valuable. I have cultivated that power, and invariably recuperate by its aid before the exhausting strain of a "first night" or before playing a new part.

Sir Edward Ward, Permanent Under-Secretary for War: I find six and a half hours enough. I daresay I could manage nine or ten hours with an occasional wake up; but I should call that "slacking."

Dr. Josiah Oldfield: It is certain that every man must have a certain minimum of sleep per twenty-four hours. Most find that minimum eight hours, but an enormous number are satisfied with five and a half hours, I always sleep eight hours and regard that as, on the whole, the proper minimum for a man. Certainly five and a half hours is not enough.

Sir Robert Ball: Don't expect an astronomer to confess how many hours of the precious night he wastes by staying in bed.

The Earl of Aberdeen, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland: I find that much can be accomplished in either direction by training and habit. But as to the saying that one cannot burn the candle at both ends I have heard the suggestion that it is one of the ways of making both ends meet.

During the six months which Mr. Charles Frohman, the theatre manager, spent in London recently his hours of sleep averaged not more than five. He rose at 7:30 a. m., and rarely got to bed before 2 a. m., sometimes later.

At the Bank of England a high official said he liked twelve hours whenever he could get it—that is, between Saturday and Sunday. "Other days I don't get enough."

The principal of a leading firm of stock brokers said: "Members of my profession sleep well because we have easy consciences. I myself find nine to ten hours sufficient."—London Mail.

The Circus.

"The circus must have taken $15,000 or $20,000 away from Charlotte," said a calculating business man.

"They more than earned it," declared a man who understands. "If 1,000 children saw the circus and the animals, I don't grudge the money the show got."

Where the return? Certainly the mere two hours' of pleasure under the tent would not be worth so much money to a few children. But it does not end there. What immense treasures for a child's imagination! How vivid will be his memories of some of the sights, and how he will see live forms in every-day objects. How much longer his imagination may live, and when that dies a great part of the beauty and sweetness has gone out of life!

Yes, let the circus come, if it takes away twice $20,000.—Charlotte Observer.

Captured Chinese Flag.

The recruiting office in this city has hung on its walls a Chinese flag which was captured from the Chinese forces by the Nint... Infantry of the United States in command of Col. Liscum.

The flag is twelve feet long and is shaped as an uneven triangle. The base, which was fastened to the pole, is six feet wide. A many colored dragon four feet long, with fiery tongue is striving to reach a bloody moon just out of his reach. The dragon is in this position on the flag to show the Chinese belief that the empire would pull down that moon could it but reach it. Several bullet holes decorate the yellow portion which surrounds the moon and the dragon.

The finest of workmanship is displayed on the flag. The toes, eyes and the fiery moon are carefully inlaid against the sombre background. The Chinese flagmakers consider a well make flag an estimate of their love for the Emperor.

The crimson moon and the fiery tongue do not attract the attention of the observer as does the blood which is spattered in many places on the flag. The blood is sure to remind that war is not of the gentlest occupation.—Wichita Eagle.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR DECEMBER 30.

Review of the Last Quarter—Read John i., 1-14—Golden Text, Isa. ix., 6—Topic: Lessons by the Triumphant Redeemer—Summary.

Lesson I. Topic: Love the supreme duty of man. Place: In Jerusalem, in the temple courts. The Herodians, Sadducees and Pharisees ask Him hard questions, testing Him; all are silenced; the great commandment is given by Christ; we should love God supremely; sin, the world and the self life must all be renounced; we should love our neighbor; Jesus asks the Jews a hard question; warns His disciples against hypocrisy; calls attention to a widow casting two mites into the treasury.

II. Topic: Guarding against false profession. Place: On Mount Olivet. The subjects of Christ's kingdom are likened to ten virgins; Christ is the Bridegroom, and the oil represents the grace of God; the foolish virgins had the lamp of profession, but lacked oil—true spiritual life; they endeavored to make good their preparation at the last moment, but it was too late; the wise are the true Christians who not only have a profession, but the love of God in the soul. We should always be ready to meet the Bridegroom.

III. Topic: Reasons for fidelity to duty. Place: Mount of Olives. The talents are given and the master takes his journey; two servants make a large gain, the third buries his talent; the master's return, though delayed, is certain; so Christ will surely come again; two servants come to their master and bring the talents given them and as many more; they are commended and rewarded; the idle servant has no increase, but hard sayings and excuses he is cast into outer darkness.

IV. Topic: The believer's heart devotion. Place: Bethany. Mary anoints the head and feet of Christ. While this offering was costly, yet its great value turned on its element of sacrifice and loyal love. The motive and spirit of the gift is of first importance.

V. Topic: The Lord's Supper. Place: Jerusalem. It was Thursday; Jesus sent Peter and John to Jerusalem to prepare the Passover supper. He establishes a perpetual memorial of Himself. By the Lord's Supper He graciously appeals to the disciple and inspires him to love and obedience.

VI. Topic: The agony of Jesus. Place: Gethsemane. He sets a pattern of prayer and submission. The Gethsemane agony is expiatory and also exemplary. The believer gets comfort and inspiration from both points of view. We should watch and pray.

VII. Topic: The trial of Jesus Christ. Place: The palace of Caiaphas. Jesus is sent from Annas to Caiaphas, the high priest; Peter follows afar off and thrice denies the Saviour; the Sannedrin is hastily summoned; false witnesses are sought and are found with difficulty; at last two testify that He said He could destroy the temple and build it in three days; Jesus is silent; Caiaphas asks Him if He is the Christ; Jesus replies that He is; Caiaphas rends His clothes; Jesus is condemned to death; they mock and abuse Christ for some time.

VIII. Topic: Warning against wine-drinking. Place: Probably Jerusalem, Isaiah's home. The drunkard follows strong drink; wine inflames; God's judgments will fall on the drunkard; all classes go down together. There is nothing too bad or too vile for a saloon-keeper or for a man under the influence of strong drink to do. The drunkard's character is always bad.

IX. Topic: The wordling's treatment of Christ. Place: Pilate's judgment hall. Jesus is taken to Pilate, the governor, who investigates the charges and finds them false; Jesus is sent to Herod, who finds no fault with Christ. He stands the most rigid investigation of enemies. In and from this crucial test He comes forth unscathed—perfect in His life as He is in His work.

X. Topic: Jesus dying on the cross. Place: Calvary. Christ on the cross; mocked by the soldiers; vinegar offered; the superscription; the two thieves crucified with Christ; one railed on Jesus, the other confessed his sins and asked to be remembered in Christ's kingdom; the prayer answered; darkness from 12 till 3 o'clock; Jesus cried with a loud voice and died; the centurion's testimony; Joseph begged the body of Jesus; wrapped it in linen and placed it in a new sepulcher.

XI. Topic: The resurrection of Jesus Christ. Place: Garden near Calvary. Christ was crucified on Friday, April 7; rose early Sunday morning, April 9; He puts the seal on all His words and works; this is the great value of the resurrection. "He is risen, as is said," therefore all He did is endorsed and all He promised is certain of fulfillment.

XII. Topic: Jesus' parting words to His followers. Place: In and near Jerusalem. The disciples (Thomas absent) are assembled in an upper room; Jesus appears; He has entered upon His eternal work of intercession. This is the blessed significance of the ascension—parted from the believers that He may be more effective for them.

Christ Must Tell.

We want a Bible and we want a Christ to tell us what is duty.—Maclaren.

Some preachers think they are flaying the devil because they are raising a dust in the pulpit.

Same True of Spelling.

When I was in England, before the "entente cordiale," I discussed the metric system with an Englishman. The English system of weights and measures, he admitted, was complex, but he said it was precisely because of its innumerable difficulties that it constituted a marvelous instrument for making supple the young brains which filled the English schools.—M. Grimm, in Le Journal of Paris.

FARM AND GARDEN

HORSES THAT SELL WELL.

A breeder and grower of horses has these sensible suggestions in a letter to American Farming. He says:

Many farmers think that there is no money in raising horses. Yet there is constant demand in the markets at remunerative prices for horses of a definite type. Last summer I had opportunity to talk with a farmer on this very point. He was near an excellent horse market, and on his farm he was producing an abundance of the finest horse feed. But the buyers did not want his horses. The trouble was that they were neither draft horses nor road horses; neither express horses nor coach horses. They were nondescripts, with out the right form and weight for any particular purpose. This farmer had started with a number of fairly good mares, but had used first one stallion and then another without any definite idea in mind as to breed. The natural result was that the colts showed a mixture of incongruous tendencies. All that could be said for them was that they were horses. The modern market will not buy nondescript horses. They must be horses, of a different class draft horses, roadsters, etc.—with the proper form, size and action to admit them to that class. By consulting horse buyers the farmer can easily learn what the market requirements are, and can breed horses that meet these requirements. Then it will be found that there is money in raising horses. But there is surely no use in producing a mongrel horse when no one wants it.

There are several ways in which horses may be improved by intelligent selection and breeding, such as the farmer adopts in securing a herd of cows noted for their milk yield or a flock of sheep to produce winter lambs. I once had occasion to observe a company of cavalry horses that had been selected for their rapid walking gait. These horses, without urging, would easily make five miles an hour on a walk. I had previously thought my saddle horse was a fast walker, but found that he had to be trotted at frequent intervals to keep up with the procession. This seemed to be an interesting point, and I accordingly timed several ordinary saddle horses. They made less than 4 mile per hour. Now there are lines of work in which a fast walking gait would add greatly to the value of a horse. The walking speed of a horse can be increased by breeding just as readily as the trotting or running speed. A fast walker is more in demand and is good for more purposes than a fast runner. Horses are just as susceptible to improvement by breeding as other animals are. It will therefore pay farmers who are fitted for this work to breed up a line of horses with a fast walk. Don't be content with present standards, but raise them.

ACTUAL BUTTER FAT.

It is suggested that farmers who deliver cream to the creameries settle for the cream on the basis of the actual butter fat content of the same, and this can be readily determined on the usual test basis. The New York Farmer in regard to this says:

Suppose the test basis to be adopted by your creameryman, what of that? Will not you have more butter-fat to sell from the 8,000-pound yielder of 3.5 per cent fat milk than from a 5,000-pound yielder of 4 per cent or 5 per cent milk? At 3.5 per cent the 8,000-pound cow will give you 280 pounds of butter-fat. If you throw out such a cow and put on a 5,000-pound cow that averages 4 per cent, you will have only 250 pounds of butter-fat. With the 8,000-pound cow you will have 30 to 80 pounds more of butter-fat and nearly 30 hundredweights more of skimmilk, worth at least 20 cents a hundred, than you would have with the 5,000-pound cow putting 4 to 5 per cent of fat into her milk. Unless your creamerymen purpose to put a lower price on Holstein-Friesian butter-fat than on other butter-fat, their threat to pay on test, instead of frightening you, should encourage you to put on Holstein-Friesian cows totally. You are in the business to make milk. If the Holstein-Friesian cows meet the call for you, they are the cows for you. If your creamerymen can not, or will not handle your milk, they have the liberty to reject it and quit business. This is a free country. If you milk producers will submit to dictation by the middlemen, whose fault is it? Put on 8,000-pound or 10,000-pound cows, call for the test, feed back your skimmilk, and you will make money. Run a co-operative creamery and make high-grade butter, you and your neighbors, and you will make still more money.

KICKING COWS.

In most instances the habit comes from an improper manner in which the cow, when a heifer, was broken to milk, or from some bad management of the milker after the animal has grown older. Cows of a highly nervous temperament will, not infrequently, become confirmed kickers from the rough and careless manner in which the milker handles the udder and teats while milking. Any rough and careless handling of the udder, when filled with milk, is more or less painful to the animal, and a kick may be given, not from any viciousness or ill temper, but is simply an involuntary motion of the foot to relieve pain. The most effectual remedy for kicking cows consists in buckling a strap snugly about the body of the cow, just in front of the udder. The cow is then rendered powerless to do harm in kicking and the most confirmed and viciously inclined kickers are at once subdued. Those who have employed this simple method say that in no instance in their experience has it failed. Scolding, fretting, loud threatening, thumping and flagellations are of little use. The cow may have a hot temper, as well as her milker, and resist all sorts of discipline. The law of kindness is usually much more effective.—Boston Cultivator.

MUDDY VS. DRY FEED LOTS.

Experiments noted by the Department of Agriculture show that muddy feed lots are an unprofitable as well as disagreeable feature in cattle feeding, especially when no provision is made for shelter. Notwithstanding the fact that the disadvantages of mud and dirt were recognized by five hundred cattlemen, corresponded with by the department, only thirty-six of these cattle feeders reported definite provision against such conditions. Ten of these men have the surface of their feed lots paved or otherwise artificially covered, fifteen use rock, gravel, cinders, bricks, planks, corncob or sawdust alone, and in combination in various parts of the lot—about the feed troughs, water tanks, sheds or gates. Ten of the correspondents stated that they had made the lots dry enough for feeding purposes by a tile drain, while two reported that the yards had been graded and the mud and manure removed by means of dirt scrapers. Several of those who use coal cinders for filling the muddy portion of the lot, stated that care must be taken to keep them covered with straw, cornstalks or other bedding material, in order to avoid injury to the feet. As the result of the letters received by the department, two plans have been prepared, one showing a brick-paved feed lot; with convenient shelter, water and feeding arrangements, designed to accommodate fifty cattle; the other a feed bunk for use in muddy lots, and which is inexpensive.

IMPROVE THE DAIRY HERD.

In referring to the betterment of dairy cows a Minnesota dairy inspector says that the farmer who keeps cows must be relied on, in the improvement of the dairy herd so as to get a bigger yield from the number of cows already on hand. The farmer is the one who is benefited most and should feel most interested. Now I want to call attention to one way in accomplishing this that is practical, and a way that every dairyman should use, and that is to keep such a record of each cow in the herd, that will show at the end of the year what each individual cow has done. This at first thought, would seem like something that would entail a great deal of work, and I will not deny but what it takes some extra work, but I think it safe to say, that it will be the best paying work that you can do in connection with your dairy. The things necessary are, a spring scale, pencil and memoranda book, all of which need not cost over two dollars, and the extra work necessary need not be over 30 minutes a month outside the time it takes to do the figuring, and that will depend on how quick you are to figure. The thing to do with this apparatus is to place it where you empty the milk after milking. Taking the milk from each cow, you first hang the pail on the scale and with the pencil and book you have handy you make a record of what the cow has given. You can repeat this for every milking if you wish, but for a beginning about four times a month will give you good results, and show you where you have the cow that is stealing her board and where you have the one that is paying it. In connection with this, it is also necessary to have the milk from each cow tested about three times or more a year. With the number of pounds of milk and per cent. of fat in milk, you have a basis to figure the value of your cow.

FARM BUTTER.

The main thing for those who make butter on the farm is to make it a point to have the butter of the finest quality possible, the supply of which, in the small towns that prefer farm butter, is generally very limited and for which the consumer is, as a rule, willing to pay almost any price that is within reason.

Prince Hohenlohe in Life.

When Germany sent Prince Hohenlone to Paris in 1875, his physiognomy was not prepossessing. It was grave, sad, without life. With dead, expressionless eyes, the habit of carrying his head over his right shoulder, slow step, and the air of being overwhelmed with the burden of his moral preoccupations, all this tended to repel rather than attract.—Paris Figaro.
